WILSON SIGNS RAIL BILL

"DEMON RUM" ELECTS SELF AS DELEGATE

May Plead at Both Conventions.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Unwelcome issues of the hour are beginning to appear in the offing, causing the political chieftains in both parties to devote much study to ways and means for shooing them into the background before the assembling of the national conventions.

Three such issues at this writing are prohibition enforcement, universal military training, and the league of nations, with or without reservations.

It begins to look as if the demon rum, recently interred with solemn ceremonial, would burst his cerements and stalk into both conventions, to the great discomfiture of the assembled drys. Gov. Edwards of New Jersey, Democrat, and other "wets" are preparing for the disinterment with considerable unholy glee, and reports from many sections of the country attest that they are receiving much encouragement.

Reaction in Iowa.

A Republican statesman who is a 'dry' from personal conviction, returning from Iowa, the state which he represents in congress, had this to say today:

"I was simply flabbergasted by the reaction against prohibition in Iowa. I had heard that the pendulum was swinging strongly to the wet side in Iowa, but I had refused to believe it. I went out there and investigated. I found the report not only true but understated. I regret to say that, in my opinion, Gov. Edwards would carry Iowa on the anti-prohibition issue."

From other states comes similar testimony to the reaction. Total abstinence in many states appears to be as unpopular in practice now as it was popular in theory a few months ago.

"Wets" Forcing Issue.

The "wets" are forcing the issue, not with a view to repeal of the national prohibition amendment at this time but to elect a president and congress favorable to a redefinition of intoxicating liquor which would permit resumption of the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer.

Neither party can take a definite stand for or against light wines and beer without alienating the support of thousands of voters. The Republican leaders are protesting that it is not a party issue, and Chairman Hays' committee of 137 platform makers is inclined to "lay off" this question. The Democratic national committee is equally averse to meeting the issue, though Bryan is as bent upon obtaining a "dry" as is Edwards a "wet" plank at San Francisco.

Neither Wants League Issue.

Universal military training is embarrassing the platform constructors of both parties. The country is so divided on the question that Republicans as well as Democrats in the house have sidetracked the issue, and whether the conventions will take any definite stand thereon is problematical.

Neither Republicans nor Democrats want the league of nations issue in the campaign, and are doing their utmost to get the question settled in advance of the conventions.

Republicans Unafraid.

The Republicans are not afraid to go to the country on this issue. They will be able to take a definite, clear cut position, and they will have the Democrats at a disadvantage from the start. But Chairman Hays believes the elimination of the league issue would be more conducive to party harmony.

If the issue does go into the campaign, the Republicans undoubtedly will indorse a league of nations with Lodge reservations and the "irreducible minimum."

Democrats in Hot Water.

The Democrats, however, will be in hot water. In view of the country's evident approval of reservations, the San Francisco convention could not indorse unqualified ratification of the treaty without committing political suicide. Yet, to come out for the sort of reservations the country wants, the convention would be compelled to repudiate President Wilson. The Bryan wing already has capitulated to the Republicans on reservations, and altogether the prospect is a gloomy one for the Democrats if the league becomes an issue in the campaign.

FIGHTS SLEUTHS WHO TRAIL HIM IN PECK MYSTERY

Wounds 3; Says Girl Also Was Shadowed.

Edward Glynn of 5120 Kenmore avenue and H. Steinhard of 1523 Winemac avenue, Pinkerton operatives, were lolling in the secretive pose of their profession in the lobby of the Le Moyne building at 180 North Wabash avenue yesterday afternoon when a young man and a girl emerged from the elevator.

The man was J. A. Devens, former sailor, now residing at the Y. M. C. A. hotel. The girl was Miss Esther Wolsifer of 4020 Grand boulevard, employed in the offices of the Catholic Extension Magazine company on the eighth floor of the building.

"Are those the guys who have been trailing you?" asked Devens.

War Is Declared.

Miss Wolsifer nodded in the affirmative.

Deven's fist shot out, registering a bullseye on Glynn's jaw. "Shadower" Steinhard's heels beet a tatto in the direction of Traffic Policeman Walter Misher.

When Misher reached the scene Devens had disposed of Glynn and was rapidly dispensing with the interference offered by Carl Peterson of 4735 Indiana avenue, chief engineer of the building.

When the gong sounded—on the patrol wagon outside—Glynn had to be taken to the Iroquois Memorial hospital to have severe scalp injuries dressed and both Peterson and Misher were nursing minor injuries.

At the central station, where the heavily bandaged Glynn signed a complaint, Devens told a story that goes back to the disappearance of Roy L. Peck of Oak Park, chief engineer of the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company, from the steamer City of St. Joseph in July, 1917.

Vanishes from Steamer.

Peck, for many years a government inspector of steamboat boilers, was 54 years old. On the night of July 16, 1917, he disappeared from the lake boat. When the Michigan shore was reached next morning his clothes were found in the stateroom.

The Travelers' Aid and Insurance company refused to pay a $47,000 policy, claiming Peck was not dead, but was alive and in hiding. The police here and in other cities made several arrests on a tip Peck was robbed and thrown overboard, but all of the suspects were released.

Hounded, Says Devens.

"I was a member of the cabin watch on the boat," said Devens, "and I made a statement to C. H. McDermott, attorney for the Peck heirs, saying Peck had disappeared on the trip.

"Ever since then these detectives have been hounding me to get me to change my statement.

"They caused me to have a nervous breakdown and I had to go to the marine hospital at 4140 Clarendon avenue. Then they began shadowing my sweetheart, Miss Wolsifer. She said they followed her home, trailed her to work, annoyed her on shopping trips, and went everywhere she went. I had just gotten out of the hospital when she told me they were following her again. I couldn't stand it any longer and I just let them have it."

Attorney McDermott says the matter of the Peck insurance is to be aired in court in a few weeks.

ALLIES THREATEN TURKS; DEMAND MASSACRES END

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 28.—"Concerted military action" was agreed upon by the peace conference today, if the Turks fail to heed a demand that they stop massacres of Armenians. The conference would not explain just what "concerted military action" meant, but it is believed there first will be an ultimatum to the Turks and a demand for punishment of the guilty.

There is a large allied fleet in the Black sea and eastern Mediterranean and the Greek army is handy for occupational purposes.

The new development may cause the withdrawal of the promise to let the Turks retain Constantinople. This promise has caused great public protest in England.

Jail Empty—and Still—Since Prohibition's Reign

Altoona, Pa., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—The borough lockup at Bellwood, Pa., has been empty since prohibition went into effect. Today evidence that an illicit still had been operated in the lockup was discovered by Dr. F. B. Forrest, a member of the council. Frank Garland, chief of police, admitted that the jugs containing raisins, corn, and rye in various stages of fermentation were his.

MARINE RIVAL OF FUNSTON IN HAITI EXPLOIT

Gets Bandit Leader by Strategy.

The Tribune prints herewith the story of an exploit by American marines—now for the first time related, though it happened last fall—that ranks with the intrepid deeds of men like Funston in the Philippines. This heroic incident occurred in Haiti and a U. S. sergeant was the principal actor.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)
[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]

CAPE HAITIEN, Feb. 28.—Courage and resourcefulness have combined with tireless ambition to add another link to the chain of glorious achievement extending back through United States history. This time it is an exploit of the "webfoot soldier," the "first to land and last to leave," the daring, cocky American marine.

By the strategy that resulted in the capture of Aguinaldo, Gen. Funston set a mark for Americans dealing with insular rebellion to aim at. That the bull's-eye of that target can be rung, the following somewhat belated narrative will attest.

In the stereotyped records in the office files of the commander of the north I discovered, through the courtesy of Col. James J. Meade, gendarmerie d'Haiti, the laconic description of an incident, commonplace in the annals of the marine corps, but thrilling in its heroism and accomplishment.

The Background.

The affair reached its climax during the night Oct. 31-Nov. 1, last, but it was the culmination of a plan originated in the preceding August by Herman H. Hanneken, sergeant of marines and captain of Haitian constabulary.

Yet a background is indispensable. Beginning a mile or so from the coast and reaching far into the interior of the Negro republic are snow capped mountain ranges; precipitous, shadowy ravines; treacherous swamps; malaria reeking rivers—all surrounded by vast twilight jungles—jungles whose depressing silence is often shattered by the swish of pythons crawling over twigs and leaves; whose gloomy monotony is broken only by occasional clearings wherein live black savages; a tropical wilderness whose sagas tell or hideous voodoo rites, of cannibalism, of torture, of midnight bonfires encircled by natives, human solely because they walk erect and talk, and roast their food, and understand a rifle's mechanism, and own sufficient brains to band together to combat their village countrymen, the uniformed police and the American marines.

Into this nightmare of aimless rebellion Uncle Sam has sent his marines to restore order, and here for years they have battled and nearly subdued the lawless.

A Year's Reign of Terror.

Just when it seemed that the bands had been scattered the island was electrified, on Sept. 3, 1918, by news of the escape from the Cap Haitien prison of Charlemagne Massena Peralte, the most daring and popular bandit in Haiti. Fleeing into the interior, and abetted by political aspirants for the presidency, Peralte quickly rallied about him as choice a crew as ever kept a country in terror.

Stealthily surrounding remote villages, the outlaw chieftain soon enriched his commissary with food, clothing, funds, and munitions. Girls were carried off, cabins were burned, men who refused to join him or whose reports to the Americans he apprehended were butchered.

Nearly a year of this reign of black terror sped by. It was up to the marines. And the marines delivered.

In August, 1919, Capt. Hanneken returned to Cap Haitien from a vain pursuit of the bandit. He had evolved a plan to end the outlaw's activities, and he unfolded it to Col. Meade, his commander. The latter promptly acquiesced and actually placed himself under his sergeant's orders.

Hanneken's Scheme.

Hanneken's scheme was to send three of his trusted native gendarmes into the little town of Capois, five miles south of Grande Riviere du Nord, which is thirty miles south of this port. They were carefully rehearsed in their rôles.

Arriving at Capois about the middle of September, the Haitians, disguised by the simple expedient of removing their uniforms and shoes, began to preach rebellion and denounce the Americans. Peralte's men, filtering

FRENCH LABOR UNITES BEHIND RAIL STRIKERS

Mobilization Is First Blow at Unions.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—Trainmen and other employés on all the railway lines of France have been called out by a general strike order issued early today by the national federation of railway men. The strikers will have the backing of the General Federation of Labor. A statement issued by the federation tonight "assures the federation of railway men of its support in the struggle."

On the other hand, the Union of Former Soldiers, with more than 400,000 members, offered its services to the government to help break the strike by operating trains.

Limited train service was maintained throughout today, however, with the aid of men mobilized from the railway division of the army and civilians who offered their services.

Voluntary Corps Formed.

The ministry of public works has organized a service to enroll volunteers to replace the strikers, to operate automobiles, and aid in the work of victualing. The food situation in Paris was described as critical.

Premier Millerand has taken the stand that the strike is aimed at the sovereignty of the government and is determined to break it.

Arrests and searches have been ordered against the authors of articles in Le Libertaire construed as appealing to railroad men and the 1920 class of conscripts to rebel, pillage, steal, and desert. Le Libertaire has been suppressed.

Agitators Face Arrest.

The arrest of those alleged to have appealed to the mobilized railroad men not to respond is planned. Many of those to whom mobilization orders were issued have not reported for duty, and second notices will be sent to their homes. President Deschanel has decreed that the law, passed Friday, which provides for the requisitioning of automobiles, motor trucks and airplanes in case of necessity, be applied to the territory traversed by the lines of the Paris, Lyons and Mediterranean company and the state, Orleans, Midi, and East companies.

Strikers Announce Terms.

The national federation of railway workers tonight formally issued the conditions on which the strikers will return to work. These consist of recognition of the union, application of the proposed graded wage scale, joint grievance commissions, immediate consideration of the future status of the railroads, and no strike reprisals.

The General Federation of Labor, in its declaration supporting the railway men, affirms that the present situation represents an "attack on union rights which the law recognizes."

"It is a question of unionization of the railway men or returning the railroads to the public," the declaration says.

Mine Strike Called Off.

The strike of miners set for March 1 has been called off. The national council of the Miners' union, having received a satisfactory reply from the minister of labor in its protest over the action of the chamber of deputies recently in voting adversely on a proposal for coal diggers' pension, has wired the miners to continue work.

Ibanez Calls Americans Cowards Before Women

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Every American man is a coward before a woman, according to Vincente Blasco Ibanez, Spanish author.

"Every American man has a mental picture of his wife standing behind the door with the rolling pin, either literally or figuratively speaking, according to social standards," he said. "The women do not want it. Many times I have dined with American women in Paris. At the dessert, I would say: 'Ladies, tell me frankly, do you like all this bowing and scraping of the American man? Do you like all this exaggerated respect? Are you not sick and tired of it?'

"And, wholeheartedly, they would answer: 'Ei, senor, we are sick and tired of it. We are disgusted with it. We would like to be dominated a little bit for change.'

"That's just the truth of it. They want to be dominated. Treat them a little roughly once in a while."

Wilson Notably Improved, Dercum Tells Grayson

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—Dr. Francis X. Dercum, Philadelphia specialist, paid one of his occasional visits to the White House today, and told Rear Admiral Grayson, President Wilson's personal physician, that the president's condition showed a noticeable improvement since his last visit two weeks ago.

YANK AIRPLANES BEARING CANNON ARMY'S SURPRISE

New York, Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Airplanes with rapid fire one pounders are the latest thing in army aviation. Each plane of that type can carry a cannon of that size, its barrel inside of the propeller shaft and its shells passing out through the hub of the propeller. Two machine guns, also operated by the motor, offer another offensive feature. A motor of the 300 horsepower modified Hispana-Suiza type, equipped for such work, will be shown at the airplane show in the 7th Regiment armory on Saturday.

Italy Starts Meatless Days to Avoid Foodless Weeks

ROME, Feb. 28.—The government has ordered greater restrictions in the feeding of the people than during the war, because of diminished importations. In addition, rationing by card for all necessaries has been re-established. Two meatless days have been ordered, as well as the closure of all restaurants, hotels, clubs and any other places where foods are supplied, at 11 o'clock at night.

EMPLOYES GIVEN HALF OF DAYTON CASH CO. PROFITS

Take 6% of Net Gains; Split the Balance.

Dayton, O., Feb. 28.—The National Cash Register company, employing approximately 7,000 people in its plant here, today announced a 50-50 profit sharing plan for employés for 1920. Only employés in the Dayton plant of the company will share in the profits.

John H. Patterson, president of the company, announced that the profit of the company will be determined by outside accountants, and that after the net profits have been determined, an amount equal to 6 per cent interest on the company's investment will be deducted.

The remaining profits, the statement said, will be divided into two equal shares, 50 per cent to the company and 50 per cent to the dividend among the employés.

Profits to be distributed among the employés will be divided into two equal parts, half to executives and foremen and half to other employés.

The plan, it was announced, will cover the year beginning with Jan. 1. Payments will be made July 1 and Dec. 31.

No employé will receive profits unless he has been in the employ of the company for six months.

GIRL, DYING OF GAS, PENS WILL AND SWAN SONG

After Goldie Klein had closed the windows and the door of the room occupied by her at the home of her sister, Mrs. Eugene Libovitch, 841 North Mozart street, she turned on the gas burner, but did not light it. Then she went over to her bed, lay down, and began writing:

"In my trunk you will find $1,000—my savings, both for the time I was employed at Sears, Roebuck & Co. and as coat finisher at Hart, Schaffner & Marx Tailoring company. Please—my head swims—but I am suffering no pain—this is a pleasant way to die—please send them to mamma in Hungary. Poor little mamma. She will—my hand trembles so I can hardly write. She will—I am so dizzy. By the time you get this I will be dead. I will close now. Tell—tell him—no—I am sick. I can write no longer.

"GOLDIE."

Mrs. Libovitch and her husband, returning from a motion picture theater, found Goldie lying across the bed. They read the note and telephoned the police. She was dead.

An unhappy love affair, the sister said, but she didn't know his name.

SERVANTS DEMAND SEASIDE VACATION AT DOUBLE WAGES

ROME, Feb. 27.—[Delayed.]—The maid servants have held a massmeeting at Ferrara and have unanimously adopted a resolution regarding their claims. These include, among others, the demand for a fortnight's vacation, so that they may go to the sea baths, at the expense of their employers, who during that time must pay them double wages, owing to the expenses at summer resorts. They also demand two cigarets daily throughout the year.

FATHER'S INQUIRY GIVES DAUGHTER CELL AS SLAYER

Macomb, Ill., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—The neighbors at Bushnell, Ill., gossiped about the death of Lawrence A. Clugston last July. S. J. Bagley, father of the widow, wanted to know if there was any truth in the gossip.

He started an inquiry, and today his daughter, Mrs. Alice Clugston, was sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment. Dr. W. C. Alverson, "gypsy healer," with whose name that of Mrs. Clugston had been linked by gossip, got a life sentence.

The jury decided today that the man and woman had determined to be rid of Clugston because he was the third person in a love triangle.

Alverson had treated Clugston for "typhoid fever." Dr. Bert Rowan of Bushnell, who saw Clugston before death, said it was not typhoid. After the autopsy by Dr. William McNally, coroner's chemist at Chicago, 4.27 grains of arsenic were found.

The convicted man came to this part of the state about four years ago. About two years later his wife died. He obtained $2,000 insurance. He had boarded with the Clugstons, but bought a house at Prairie City and invited the Clugstons to live at his home.

Police Raid German Reds and Will Deport Them

KARLSRUHE, Feb. 28.—A secret conference of German communists at Durlach, three miles from here, was broken up by the police today. Representatives from Austria, Poland, Russia and Switzerland were present. They will be detained pending arrangements for their expulsion from Germany.

PLEDGES FAIR WAGE BOARD TO UNION MEN

Roads Go Back at 12:01 Midnight.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—President Wilson signed the railroad bill tonight, making it a law.

The legislation on which congress has worked intermittently for months becomes effective—the president having approved it—at the same time the roads are turned back by the government to their owners at 12:01 o'clock Monday morning.

Thus ends twenty-six months of federal control and operation of the lines. Some of the urgent journalistic advocates of government ownership have within the last week threatened Mr. Wilson that if he signed this bill he would seal the doom of the Democratic party, but he signed it, nevertheless.

Replies to the Unions.

The president tonight issued a proclamation naming Walker D. Hines, under the provisions of the act, to wind up all matters arising out of federal control. He also sent his reply to the fifteen railway unions which have urged that pending wage disputes should be left to a bipartisan body—managements and men—to operate independently of the bill.

The president took the position that the machinery set up by the new railroad act is ample to advance quick and fair settlements. He pointed out that the act itself sets forth that all carriers and their officers and employés shall exert every means possible to avoid a halt in transportation growing out of any dispute, and that whenever possible disputes shall be decided in conference between representatives of the employers and employés.

Will Call Board at Once.

Mr. Wilson holds that the plain intention of the bill was that a bipartisan body should be set up to try to settle the pending wage problem. He told the unions he will at once call upon both sides to join in selecting such a committee. This board, he says, will be more than a satisfactory substitute for the body of experts he recently suggested when the threatened strike of the maintenance of way men was called off.

Concerning the labor board itself, on which three elements—the management, the workers, and the public—are to have three members each, the president tells labor it is needlessly alarmed.

"I cannot share the apprehension of yourselves and your constituents," he writes.

Labor Is Not Surprised.

To the few labor leaders left in town the signing of the bill brought no surprise. The sentiment appeared to be that the promise of the president to expedite action on the pending wage disputes through a bipartisan agency would have a tonic effect on the situation.

The big leaders this week scouted the idea of any widespread strike, although sporadic walkouts have been bobbing up for some time.

So far as the act itself goes, it is projected into politics and labor's move will be into the congressional elections, with the aim of getting what amendments it desires from the next congress. By then the act may prove to work better than its critics estimate or, again, it may not.

All Ready for Transfer.

All is in readiness for the transfer of the lines to their private owners at one minute past midnight Sunday, after two years and two months of government control. The shift of the world's largest transportation plant, valued at almost $20,000,000,000, with nearly 2,000,000 employés and some 240,000 miles of main track, will be made without a hitch.

For months the corporations have been making their plans, reorganizing their department and perfecting their executive forces.

Mr. Hines today sent the president a report covering the fourteen months since he succeeded William G. McAdoo as head of the railroad administration.

Features of Hines' Report.

The most prominent features of the report are declarations by Mr. Hines that:

1. Federal control has not cost a cent more than private control would have cost in the same difficult period, but, on the contrary, has cost considerably less.

2. If rates could have been increased

Jan. 1, 1918, there would have been no deficit or "loss" whatever up to and including the end of October, 1919. This "loss" is figured at $480,000,000.

3. The apparent deficit of $715,000,000 for the twenty-six months, excess of operating expenses over revenues, will really fall far short of that amount and is "in no sense chargeable to federal control as against private control."

$1,200,000,000 for Roads.

4. Approximately $1,200,000,000 has been expended in the twenty-six months for improvements to property.

5. The roads will be returned to their private owners in as good shape as when taken over; claims that they are in broken down condition are without foundation.

6. The average wage increase over 1914, measured by rate per hour, is slightly over 100 per cent.

7. The increase in employés since 1917 has been 167,873, due to the shift to an eight hour day. The number of employés increased 9.7 per cent, but the number of hours actually paid for decreased 5.2 per cent. In 1917 employés worked on the average 261 hours a month; in 1919 they worked 226 hours.

Hoping for Harmony.

8. The labor situation is such that the way is open for establishing better relations between the management and men than existed prior to federal control.

9. The roads resume control "under the most favorable possible conditions of public sentiment."

Discussing the labor situation, Mr. Hines says:

"When it is considered how widespread has been the unrest, how burdensome the cost of living, and how active have been some agitators desiring to make trouble and to develop conditions favorable to disorder, the railroad employés as a whole are entitled to be highly commended for the steadiness and loyalty with which they have stuck to their work in the face of all misrepresentations and appeals to strike."

Program for the Future.

Some methods developed under federal control, which Mr. Hines urges should be continued under private control—the interstate commerce commission has power to do this under the bill—are:

Unified terminals and consolidated ticket offices.

The permit system, to regulate the flow of traffic in times of heavy business.

Common time tables between important centers and "staggering" of trains to avoid "bunching" departure times on competitive roads.

Representation of shippers in initiating rates.

Speed in rate adjustment.

Pooling of lake and tidewater coal.

Pooling of oMtive Power.

Pooling of motive power and equipment under some central authority to be exercised at least whenever there is a shortage of equipment.

Uniformity in rules for car distribution for important commodities, such as coal and grain, that avoid unjust discrimination as between shippers.

SOVIET TO BACK NEW CURRENCY WITH PLATINUM

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The Russian bolshevik commissary of finances, M. Krestinsky, has published a statement preliminary to the expected resumption of foreign trade, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Berlin. The soviet government will issue a new type of credit note in denominations of 50, 100, 500, and 5,000 rubles, backed by reserves of platinum, to the value of 37,500,000 gold rubles. The issue will be limited to 65,000,000 rubles, and the government will be ready on call to convert them into platinum coins.

Plumb to Tour Ohio as Foe of Plumb Plan Foes

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—The first open development in labor's campaign to oppose congressmen who voted for the railroad bill, came today when it was announced at the Plumb Plan league that Glenn E. Plumb, general counsel for the railroad brotherhood, would tour Ohio next month to speak in support of the brotherhood plan for a tri-partite control of the railroads, and against congressmen who voted for the bill.

PATIENCE, HELP, RAIL CHIEFS ASK ON EVE OF SHIFT

Stage All Set for Return to Private Control.

New York, Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Presidents and other operating executive officers of the leading railroads in New York reported today that the stage was set for the resumption of private operation Monday.

The majority of railroad executives were of the opinion today that there would be a steady but gradual improvement in the service extended by the different systems, and most of them appealed to the public for coöperation and patience during the transition period.

Hard Tasks for Owners.

Howard Elliott, president Northern Pacific, said:

"The railroads that must, in the next few years, make good the damages and waste resulting from the war cannot meet in full the demands of our population. But it will be done more quickly if the public will coöperate and will be patient over inconveniences and delays because of the inability of the railroads to produce at once the quantity and quality of transportation that the public needs."

E. E. Loomis, president Lehigh Valley, said:

"Fortunately, the Lehigh Valley is in such shape with respect to locomotives and cars it will not have to go into the market for new equipment. It has ample power for its needs. The public must be patient in the test period. I believe there will be a gradual increase in efficiency and company morale; there must be."

Railroads Did Their Bit.

T. De Witt Cuyler, chairman, Association of Railway Executives, said:

"Like everything else, the railroads made their contribution to the war at a great cost to themselves. There will be a tremendous pressure behind service to secure traffic. Greater effort will be made to satisfy shippers and passengers. Supervision will increase in effectiveness. Labor will respond with more effective work, because wages which are not earned cannot be paid."

W. H. Truesdale, president Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, believes that at the present time nobody can say definitely what the outcome of the present situation is to be.

Fears Standard Is Lower.

L. F. Loree, president Delaware and Hudson, said:

"I think their physical condition when they are returned will prove to be much below the standard which prevailed when the government took them over, but there is no reason why proper attention should not soon put them into satisfactory shape again. As I see it, the roads can get along without borrowing extensively. Anyway, they will have to. Investment money is none too plentiful, and the roads must needs do the best they can until credit becomes easier."

Frederick D. Underwood, president Erie, said:

"The roads which have money available for the purchase of necessary equipment, I should say, will have to make car trusts. They must have equipment and a market for equipment trust certificates must be found. If there is no such market and no one can tell when the bankers will be ready to buy car trusts, the government should make car trusts."

Billions in Funds Needed.

Frances H. Sisson, vice president Guaranty Trust company, said:

"Hundreds of millions—yes, billions—of new funds must be put into railroad building if our industrial growth is not to be stunted by a failure to provide adequate transportation facilities. This new capital can come only from the savings of thrifty investors and these savings can be attracted only by making railroad investments attractive."

President, Signing Rail Bill, Pledges Fair Wages to Men

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—President Wilson, after signing the railroad bill tonight, issued the following statement, addressed to the chiefs of the railroad brotherhoods:

"Your letter of the 14th instant, and the subsequent arguments presented on your behalf with reference to the subject of pending claims for wage increases, have had my careful consideration.

"The passage of the railroad bill by the house of representatives on the 21st instant, and by the senate on the 23rd instant, has made it evident that I could not act upon your suggestions until it should be determined whether the bill would become a law or not. It was manifest that if the bill should become a law the negotiation and consideration of the wage matter ought to proceed in harmony therewith.

Act at Once on Wages.

"The bill having now become a law, the way is open for immediate action on the wage matter in accordance with the terms of the bill. Section 301 of the bill evidently contemplates that the carriers and employés should, as suggested by you, select representatives who will thus constitute a bipartisan board for the purpose of attempting by conference to agree upon a solution of this wage problem.

"In accordance with the assurance I gave last August, and repeated in substance in my letter of the 13th instant, I shall at once request the carriers and the employés to join in this action. I believe such a step will go far toward clarifying and maturing the subject for final disposition.

"In fact, the sort of board thus contemplated by Section 301 appears to be an appropriate substitute for the committee of experts which I have heretofore suggested, and indeed such a board will be authorized to go further than such a committee could have gone.

Bi-Partisan Board to Help.

"While it is true that the provisions of section 307 of the railroad bill relating to the labor board will probably also come into operation as to this wage matter, nevertheless the bi-partisan board can make a great dal of progress which will materially diminish the time to be consumed by the labor board; and, while the bi-partisan board is functioning, the appointment and organization of the labor board can be expedited.

"I cannot share the apprehension of yourselves and your constituents as to the provisions of the law concerning the labor board. I believe those provisions are not only appropriate in the interest of the public, which, after all, is principally composed of workers and their families, but will be found to be particularly in the interest of railroad employés as a class.

Members to Be Unbiased.

"The argument that the public representatives on the labor board will be prejudiced against labor, because drawn from classes of society antagonistic to labor, can and ought to be overcome by selecting such public representatives as cannot be charged with any such prejudices.

"Nor do I anticipate that the public representatives will be against wage increases because they involve rate increases. Not only must public representatives be selected who can be relied upon to do justice, but the bill itself provides that the labor board shall establish rates and wages and salaries which in the opinion of the board are 'just and reasonable,' and it is further provided that the entire labor board shall be guided by the very important standards which are provided in the law, those standards including the wages paid for similar kinds of work in other industries, the relation between wages and the cost of living, the hazard of employment, the training and skill required, the degree of responsibility, the character and irregularity of the employment, and the correction of inequalities as the result of previous adjustments.

Fair Railway Rates Pledged.

"Coupled with the direction to the labor board to take into consideration these important standards, is the highly important direction to the commission to prescribe rates sufficient to admit of the payment of the reasonable operating expenses, including, of course, fair rates of wages.

"My hopes are, that the putting into effect of these provisions with a carefully selected labor board, whose public representatives can be relied upon to be fair to labor and to appreciate the point of view of labor, that it is not longer to be considered as a mere commodity, will mark the beginning of a new era of better understanding between the railroad managements and their employés, and will furnish additional safeguards to the just interests of railroad labor.

"I am sure that every agency which will be involved in the creation of the labor board and in the conduct of negotiations fully appreciates that the wage demands are entitled to the earliest possbile consideration and disposition, and, therefore, I do not anticipate delay in the appointment and organization of the labor board or in the other necessary steps."

STATISTICS SHOW INCOME OF FRANCE 6 TIMES EXPENSES

[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, Feb. 28.—"The French nation emerges unruined from war," is the conclusion of a financial, economic, and social study published by Rene Besnard, former minister, under the title, "Whither Are We Going?" In 1914 the total French wealth was 285,000,000,000 francs. Capital and labor had a yearly income of 32,000,000,000 francs. The total national debt was 35,000,000,000 francs; the yearly national expenditure, 5,200,000,000 francs. In 1920 the total French wealth was 800,000,000,000 francs. The total capital and labor yearly income was 150,000,000,000 francs; the total national debt, 250,000,000,000 to 300,000,000,000 francs; the yearly national expenditure, 25,000,000,000 francs.

M. Besnard points out the proportion of national expenditure to national income is one to six in both cases. The expenditure increased proportionately to the income increase. M. Besnard asserts that "French prosperity is not menaced. The financial and economic recovery of France and national revival is an absolute certainty."

COAL MAN FOUND DEAD.

Floyd Kaufman, 31 years old, 1516 Ardmore avenue, was found dead in bed yesterday by his brother, F. G. Kaufman. Heart disease is believed to have been the cause of his death. Kaufman was office manager for David Rutter & Co., coal dealers.

Tale of Roger Sullivan's Illness Proves False

Reports that Roger C. Sullivan, Democratic leader in Illinois, who has been at Palm Beach, Fla., for the last few weeks, was seriously ill, were authoritatively denied last night by Boetius H. Sullivan, his son. The younger Mr. Sullivan talked with his father over the long distance telephone last night and also received a telegram from his mother.

The report of Mr. Sullivan's illness originated apparently with a visit made by him on Friday to a physician as a precaution against a slight cold.

Mr. Sullivan leaves Palm Beach tomorrow and will visit Hot Springs, Ark., before his return to the city.

MOVING DAY FOR CHICAGO ROADS; CHANGES MADE

Aishton and Gormley Are Slated for Places.

It was moving day yesterday in the local offices of the railway administration. It also was a day of transition in the headquarters of every railroad line in Chicago. At midnight tonight Uncle Sam relinquishes wart-ime control of the roads and turns them back to private owners.

Hence the activity.

While the new lineups have been willingly announced and freely distributed during the last hour retrenchments, there has been a tendency on the part of all lines to keep their post-war policies a secret. It is understood that elaborate plans are in the making, but as yet they are not for publication.

Place for Aishton.

It was rumored yesterday that R. H. Aishton, director for the Northwestern and central western regions, would become associated with the American Railway association. Mr. Aishton left late yesterday for Washington, so the report could not be verified.

M. J. Gormley, his secretary during the war-time rule, was reported unofficially as the next president of the Tank Car Line association, which is handling the oil traffic.

The Railway Executives' association issued a statement to the effect that all roads at present are five years behind in equipment because of inactivity during federal control. It was stated that the roads are three years behind in passenger cars, two behind in locomotives, one year behind in freight cars, and two years in Pullman cars.

Downs Is Promoted.

L. A. Downs, assistant general manager of the Illinois Central railroad, has been elected vice president and general manager of the Central of Georgia railroad. He takes up his duties in Savannah tomorrow. Mr. Downs started with the Illinois Central as a civil engineer fifteen years ago.

At a meeting in New York of the board of directors of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Omaha railroad James T. Clark was named president and A. W. Trenholm chosen vice president and general manager.

Of the twenty-two lines which were operated under federal control from the railway administration ticket offices in the Railway Exchange building, only two have withdrawn. The Chicago and Northwestern will open an office tomorrow morning at Clark and Adams street. The Soo Line will return to the Canadian Pacific, its parent organization.

Grand Trunk Appointments.

Staff appointments of Chicagoans announced by the Grand Trunk follow: R. L. Burnap, freight traffic manager; E. F. Flinn, general freight agent; C. A. Gormaly, division freight agent; James Cameron, chief of tariff bureau; I. D. McDonald, general passenger agent; C. G. Orttenberger, general agent.

Big Four Changes.

Vice President H. A. Worcester of the Big Four railroad announced the following changes in management:

E. M. Costin, general manager, Cincinnati; W. T. Stevenson, assistant traffic manager, Cincinnati, vice Charles J. Brister, who becomes assistant vice president in charge of western lines New York Central, Chicago; George Krause Jr., general freight agent, and J. C. Wallace, auditor, Cincinnati.

WASHINGTON NEWS IN BRIEF

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 28.

PRESIDENT WILSON, despite protests from organized labor and the farmers, signed the railroad bill tonight, a few hours after Director General Hines had submitted a final report on government stewardship of the roads, which go back to their owners at midnight Sunday. The president also sent his reply to the fifteen railway unions, which demanded consideration of their wage disputes by a bipartite tribunal outside provisions of the railroad bill. This demand the president rejected.

Refuses $1,000,000 Fund to Keep Liquor from U. S.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—The house today by unanimous vote rejected an appropriation of $1,0000,000 asked by the bureau of internal revenue for the enforcement of prohibition along the border. This provision to employ 1,000 men to guard the Mexican and Canadian borders against the importation of liquor was inserted in the annual deficiency bill in the senate. The house conferees refused to consent to it and the house's action today makes certain that there will be no additional guards to protect the border from the smuggling of rum and opium.

WILSON GIVES DECISIVE 'NO' ON NEW ARTICLE X.

Will Pocket Treaty if It Is Changed, Leaders Told.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—The peace treaty's chances of ratification received a body blow today when Democratic senators received word from the White House that President Wilson was determined to pocket the pact and carry it into the campaign if it came to him from the senate with the Lodge reservation on article 10 attached.

The word from the president, it was learned, was taken to Democratic senators by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, who called at the White House this week. The president told Glass that under no circumstances would he accept ratification if the Lodge reservation on article X. was adopted.

Tightens the Deadlock.

With such an outlook before them, it was regarded as useless to expect a sufficient number of Democrats to desert the administration and surrender to the Lodge program. On the other hand, the Republicans and half a dozen anti-administration Democrats are more determined than ever that the treaty shall never be ratified with anything less than the Lodge reservation on article 10.

The dispute over the division of Dalmatia has served to intensify the opposition to the treaty and to dampen enthusiasm among advocates of the pact. Some senators see in the Dalmatian situation a striking illustration of the probable consequences of American entanglement in the broils of Europe.

Lesson in Adriatic Row.

President Wilson's attitude in the Fiume controversy threatens to precipitate a new world war, Senator Thomas of Colorado, Democrat asserted in the senate today during a heated debate of the Adriatic question.

"The situation is fraught with terrible consequences and provides a very good illustration of the perils likely to beset the United States if it becomes a partner to this league scheme," the senator said. "The consequences seem certain to be far reaching. If a solution of the disputes becomes impossible, war will be the inevitable result. The United States has been committed by the president to the side of Jugo-Slavia, and Great Britain and France are bound by the treaty of London to take up the side of Italy."

"None of Our Business"—Kellogg.

That the Fiume controversy has done serious damage to the treaty was indicated by a speech of Senator Kellogg of Minnesota, "mild reservationist," who declared the president's attempt to dictate the boundary line between Italy and Jugo-Slavia was "a very discouraging feature" to the friends of the league covenant.

"It is none of our business, and this country ought not to try to settle the boundaries of all the aspiring nations, new and old, which have emerged from the war," said Senator Kellogg. "The president is not justified in trying to dictate a settlement. If we are going to do this before we have the treaty, what are we going to do after we get it, if we do not have the senate reservation on article X.? It is not a very encouraging outlook for the smooth working of the treaty."

"What a happy thing," exclaimed Senator Reed of Missouri, "that the senate, by refusing to ratify this pact, has left the president in the position of being able to threaten its withdrawal."

Mean Question by Democrat.

"How about all the incalculable advantages that were to accrue to the United States from this treaty?" inquired Senator Shields of Tennessee. "How valuable they must have been when we are ready to toss them away just for the sake of coercing a few Jugos along the Adriatic coast."

Senator Kellogg added fuel to the debate by charging that Senator Hitchcock, the Democratic leader, had deliberately allied himself with the "irreconcilables" to kill the treaty.

SENATE FIGHT ON COLBY AND CRANE DEEMED CERTAIN

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—President Wilson's efforts to renovate the state department so that its mind "would more willingly go along with mine" may encounter difficulties in the senate.

In the first place, the senate, amazed by the appointment of Bainbridge Colby, has shown no disposition to hurry confirmation. A meeting of the foreign relations committee was called for Monday to consider the nomination, but on account of the absence of many members the meeting was postponed indefinitely.

It is the intention of Republican committee members, according to present plans, to report Mr. Colby's appointment without recommendation and let the senate fight it out on the floor.

The same procedure will be followed in the case of Charles R. Crane, whose appointment as minister to China was announced several days ago by the White house.

President Wilson recently sent to the senate the nomination of ex-Gov. Hunt of Arizona to be minister to Siam. Today the foreign relations committee received a telegram from a prominent citizen of Arizona protesting against the nomination on the ground that Mr. Hunt was a member of the I. W. W.

POLICEMAN FOR 43 YEARS QUITS; VETERAN OF RIOT

Policeman James Derrig, 70 years old, of 3213 Warren avenue, who has been on the department for the last forty-three years, turned in his resignation yesterday to Capt. Max Danner of the Desplaines street station.

For thirty-eight years he was assigned to the Union Passenger station as "information man."

Policeman Derrig is a veteran of the Haymarket riot and was with Lieut. Michael Madden when the latter was shot by the rioters in a saloon at Halsted and Randolph streets.

SERBIA WILLING TO DEAL DIRECT WITH ITALIANS

Does Not Want Intermediary on Fiume.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 28.—Serbia is willing to negotiate the Adriatic question direct with Italy without the intermediary of Wilson, Lloyd George, and Millerand. Serbia this morning stated its acquiesence to the suggestions in the published correspondence between Wilson and the supreme council.

Trumbich, the Serbian representative, told me just before he left for London that he always has been willing to enter into direct negotiations for any fair and square settlement, but always has been hindered by the secret machinations of the supreme council.

"We are not even afraid of a straightforward settlement by application of the pact of London, which gives Fiume to Croatia, which is part of Jugo-Slavia, but even in this the Italians balk and bandy words about how Croatia is not Jugo-Slavia," said a high Serb here, and declared that this leaves only the possibility of compromise for Serbia in negotiations direct with Italy, and that Trumbich will stand pat against any settlement which does not adhere to the note of Dec. 9 outlining the Wilson line.

"Fiume Must Be Free."

Serbia is determined that Fiume must remain a free city under the league of nations and absolutely rejects the Italian proposal for a narrow Italian strip of land running along the seacoast joining Fiume to Italy.

The Serbs in the compromise would be prepared to lose the Island of Lussin, but would refuse Lissa and Vis to Italy because of the preponderance of Slav population there. Serbia will demand that the railroad from Laibach to Fiume remain in her hands. She will not give up Senozeec, and as for Zara and other areas under dispute she is determined for a settlement only under the principles of complete autonomy because of the majority of Slav population in Dalmatia.

London Comment on Wilson.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The Pall Mall Gazette says: "President Wilson is very severe upon the Adriatic compromise framed by the allies, but it is easy to be critical of transactions in which one has disclaimed practical responsibility. If America withdraws her representatives from the peace conference and indicates that she will give no concrete assistance in the resettlement of the old world, her comments on those who stick to the work must lose some of their impressiveness."

WILSON READS REPLY.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—The British and French premiers' reply to President Wilson on the Adriatic question was read today by the president and he is expected to send his reply early next week.

Officials were not disposed to discuss the latest note from London, but it was said that the withdrawal of the agreement of Dec. 9, pending an attempt by Italy and Jugo-Slavia to reach a satisfactory agreement among themselves, as proposed by the premiers, could have little effect on the ultimate outcome of the negotiations.

War Department Denies Selling Goods to Soviets

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—The war department has not sold supplies of shoes and overshoes to the Russian soviet government, as announced in recently published reports. While the first list of awards made public by the department, as the result of bidding on supplies of surplus shoes and clothing offered for sale, contained the name of "The Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic, 110 West Fortieth street, New York city," the address given being that of the soviet bureau of C. A. K. Martens, the so called soviet "ambassador," as among the successful bidders, a revised list, which supersedes that originally given out, does not include the soviet republic.

Actor Dies on Stage as He Ends Lines of Speech

Boston, Mass., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Charles Wayne of New York died suddenly on the stage of the Colonial theater this afternoon as he closed his lines at the end of the second act of "The Royal Vagabond." His death occurred when he vaulted a wall, the scene of his final exit. The company completed the performance.

SCHROEDER, AIR MARVEL, BETTER; WILL GO BACK UP

Dayton, O., Feb. 28.—Maj. R. W. Schroeder of Chicago, chief post pilot at McCook field, who yesterday fell six miles in two minutes after shattering the world's altitude record, miraculously escaping death, lies today in the army post hospital near here recovering from partial blindness and determined to make another ascent into the heavens at the first opportunity.

He still has ice packs on his eyes, which were chilled and rendered blind in his flight.

"It's all in the game. I shall try again," he said today.

Maj. Schroeder climbed yesterday to a height of 36,020 feet, then plunged downward more than five miles when he lost control of his machine after his oxygen supply was exhausted. While still 2,000 feet above the ground the aviator, regaining his presence of mind, righted the plane and sailed down to make a graceful landing on McCook field.

Congratulated by War Secretary.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—Gen. March, acting secretary of war during Secretary Baker's absence, today wired to Maj. Rudolph W. Schroeder at Dayton a message of congratulation on his altitude flight and escape from serious injury.

TELLS OF PREVIOUS EFFORT.

"I am out for the altitude all by myself now and expect to try again when the weather clears up. I was up last week and got to 32,650 feet, ran low on oxygen, and became semi-conscious and did not regain control until I had reached 18,000 feet. It was an exciting trip, 63 degrees below zero, but I did not mind the cold."

Maj. R. W. Schroeder, 2514 Washington boulevard, wrote the above letter to his friend, Lieut. J. C. Love of the Sisson hotel, on Thursday while planning the flight in which he climbed six miles and more into the sky Friday for a new world's altitude record.

NEUTRALS DRAW UP PLAN FOR NEW WORLD COURT

Holland to Submit Its Views to League.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 28.—[By the Associated Press.]—As a result of conferences held at the Hague peace palace by representatives of Holland, Switzerland, and the Scandinavian countries, the Dutch government is requested to present to the secretary of the league of nations the plan for a high court of nations agreed upon after long study by these neutrals. The salient points of the plan are as follows:

Free from Political Influence.

The court must be free of every political influence, the judges being independent in their actions of the influence even of the governments which appointed them.

The law faculties of universities to be consulted in the selections of membership.

The nominations of judges to be for nine years or life; the judges must live in the city selected as the permanent site of the court.

Salaries and costs to be shared equally by the members of the league.

States not members of the league to be permitted to participate in the court's benefits, appearing as plaintiffs or defendants.

The interests of private persons to be tried only in so far as their state takes over their claims.

Only to Decide Legal Questions.

The court only to decide cases of an international legal character.

The general procedure to follow the plan approved by the second peace conference of 1907.

Each party in a suit to pay his own expenses.

It was explained to the correspondent that while the nations participating in this conference are not bound by the plan advanced they are agreed in all its phases. Each of these nations had drafted an individual plan, and the conference coördinated them at Holland's invitation.

IRISH AGREE TO DISAGREE ON NEW HOME RULE BILL

Sinn Fein Chief Eager to Interest Americans.

DUBLIN, Feb. 28.—The reception of the home rule bill here is generally unfavorable. The Constitutionalists are not discussing it, and are awaiting Sir Horace Plunkett's announcement next Thursday regarding American opinion.

Arthur Griffith, De Valera's second in command, today stated the Sinn Fein view. "The bill," he said, "is merely one to repeal the measure by promises of which John Redmond was duped into advising his countrymen to fight and die for England in the late war. Tell the American people that Ireland will never permit itself to be made, according to the present plans of English militarists, a pistol pointed at New York.

Bring In Aaron Burr.

"England's scheme, with its agent Carson, to dismember Ireland, will meet a similar fate to England's former scheme, with Aaron Burr, to dismember the United States."

The Freeman's Journal refers to the new Irish home rule bill as "a proposal for the plunder and partition of Ireland," and characterizes it as "a thievish measure."

"Ireland's one sentence on this dishonest scheme," the paper adds, "will be 'away with it.'"

Hopeful and Hopeless.

BELFAST, Feb. 28.—Reserved comment is made on the Irish home rule bill by the Belfast Unionist press. The Northern Whig hails the bill's recognition of the distinction between Ulster and the remainder of Ireland as a considerable step forward, and says it is one likely to influence any future legislative attempts in Ireland.

The Irish News condemns the measure as not having a "single redeeming feature."

MIKADO CLOSES DIET TO HALT FRANCHISE ROW

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—The Japanese diet has been dissolved by imperial decree as a result of a profound difference of opinion between the cabinet and the majority parties in the diet regarding the extension of the franchise.

Under the constitution a new election must be held within five months.

The debate on the suffrage question reached a climax on Feb. 14, and resulted in violent scenes in the lower house. Dispatches from Tokio, which were delayed ten days, said the opposition attacked the government for opposing the measure and that the president was obliged to intervene.

The police fought members of the house in the lobby and the crowds who from the outside attempted to break into the building. Demonstrations continued throughout the night.

46 WAR VANDALS TO BE TRIED AS A GOOD FAITH TEST

PARIS, Feb. 28.—The war criminals commission has decided to send to Germany the names of forty-six men for trial before the German courts. This, it is announced, will be a test of good faith upon which the allies have agreed.

The list, with a covering note of considerable length, has been drawn up and will be submitted to the supreme council. It is expected it will be forwarded to Berlin within the week.

The British selected the names of seven accused, mostly for submarine atrocities; France selected twelve, Belgium fifteen, and Italy, Poland, and Roumania four each.

It is probable that the original list will be reduced if the Germans loyally carry out the proposed trials.

FOREIGN NEWS —IN BRIEF—

PARIS.—The General Federation of Labor has announced it will back the railway workers who have gone on strike, tying up most of the French railroads. The government, in an effort to break the strike, has ordered all strikers liable to military service to join the colors. Some trains are being operated by soldiers and volunteers. Rene Besnard, former minister, issues statement showing income of France is six times the expenses.

BUDAPEST.—With five of the murderers of the Socialist editors—Bela Somogye and his aid—under arrest, white terrorists are threatening an army revolt. Only the election on Monday of Admiral Horthy as regent governor will enable him to suppress the terrorists, it is believed.

STRASBOURG.—The national congress of Socialists is divided between extremists and moderates on the question of "immediate adhesion" to the soviet régime at Moscow. The moderates caution deliberation, but appear in the minority.

PARIS.—Serbia announces that it is willing to negotiate a settlement of the Adriatic question direct with Italy, without any intermediary.

LONDON.—Lady Astor explains in detail the program she would enforce in regard to prohibition.

VLADIVOSTOK.—Siberian peasant tells hope of freedom league of United States and Siberians.

FILM, BARRED IN OAK PARK, RUNS INTO COURT SCENE

The film might be all right for Chicago, but it would never do for Oak Park. My goodness, no! It has duels in it and other—well, objectionable features. No, it would never, never do. Both Mrs. G. W. Hoover, 711 North Kenilworth avenue, and Mrs. C. A. Cohan, 535 South Euclid avenue, members of Oak Park's censorship board, were agreed on that.

John G. Hodgson, owner of the Oak Park theater, had advertised the picture as a coming attraction. Mrs. Hoover and Mrs. Cohan went to see it. They branded it as unfit, and Hodgson was denied a permit.

Hodgson defied the board and ran the picture, and last night he was notified to appear in the court of Justice W. Stephens Lewis at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon for hearing. He asked about 300 of his patrons to sign a paper approving the picture, he said, and they did so.

INDICT FARMER'S THREE SONS AS DRAFT EVADERS

William, Michael, and Barney Miller, the three sons of John W. Miller, a rich farmer near Spring Grove, Ill., who were arrested last year on charges of evasion of the draft, were named in indictments by the federal grand jury yesterday making the same charges.

When the Miller boys were first sought by agents of the department of justice, it was found they had constructed a tunnel from their house to the barn, each end of which was carefully concealed, and though the place was often visited by searchers, the boys were not found for more than a year.

HOOVER "LOST," SPEECH READ AT BANQUET BOARD

Wreck Delays Speaker; Tribune to Rescue.

BULLETIN.

Mr. Hoover reached the banquet hall at 11:45 o'clock. He was received with uproarious applause.

Herbert Clark Hoover, "the man who fed the world," nearly starved his Chicago friends last night. A wreck somewhere on the railroad between here and Washington, D. C., was responsible.

Mr. Hoover was due to address the Society of Western Engineers' banquet at the Hotel Sherman. The beauty and the chivalry of the city assembled there—1,500 of them, including men prominent in banking, civic, civil, and political affairs.

But the guest of the evening came not. At 9 o'clock it was announced by the toastmaster, Frederick K. Copeland, that Mr. Hoover would be there any moment. At 10 o'clock the same announcement was made. At 11 o'clock the same.

And still the honored guest came not.

Reads Speech from Tribune!

In the meantime all sorts of things had been done. Mr. Hoover's speech, in which he gave his cure for the social and political ills, had been sent on from New York Friday night, and it appeared in the early edition of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. So at 9:30 or thereabouts A. S. Baldwin of the Illinois Central railroad got up and read the speech from THE TRIBUNE.

Bizarre and unusual was the entertainment afforded in the absence of the tardy speaker. David R. Forgan sang "Good morning, Mr. Zip, Zip, Zip, with your hair cut just as short as mine."

Receives Washington Award.

Mr. Hoover came to Chicago to receive the Washington Award for conspicuous service as federal food administrator and director of European relief.

The Washington Award was founded in 1916 by John W. Alvord, member of the society, to be awarded to an engineer who best uses his professional skill and administrative attainments in the promotion of the public welfare. Mr. Hoover is the first recipient of the award.

Social and Political Issues.

"I propose, on this occasion," Mr. Hoover's speech stated, "to discuss the inter-relationship of general industry and food production and distribution. There are not only engineering problems involved in this relationship, but there are great social and political issues of the first importance.

"In order to avoid repetition of long phrases, I propose to use the term 'agriculture' as referring to the agricultural industry, and to use the term 'industry' as limited to the production and manufacture of non-food materials.

Make Agriculture Attractive.

"The prime problem is to make the agricultural industry economically attractive so that it draws into its service its full proportion of American life so that it can keep pace with industry in its rapid development. When we come to the consideration of practical measures we soon arrive at two primary facts. The first is, the farmer's main production must find its market either in the great industrial centers along the Atlantic seaboard or in export to Europe. In either case, the prices in normal times are made primarily by competition with the other great sources of the world's food supply.

"The second great fact is that the American farmer receives a less proportion of the consumer's purchase price for his product than the farmer of most other civilized countries. The margin between the farmer and the consumer is the widest in the world. This margin comes partly out of the consumer, but predominantly out of the farmer. The line of practical remedy to the farmer lies in decreasing the cost of placing his products in the hands of the consumer. Every cent that we can decrease this cost contributes to the consumer, but even more largely to the farmer.

Waterways a Remedy.

"Another partial remedy for this situation is advanced many times by our engineers. This is the possible help from improving the waterways from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic seaboard by way of the St. Lawrence so as to pass full seagoing cargoes. The result would be to place every port on the Great Lakes on the seas. Fifteen states contiguous to the lakes could find an outlet for a portion of their annual surplus quickly and more cheaply to the overseas market.

"Another factor in transportation bearing upon the problem of marketing is the control by food manufacturing and marketing concerns of refrigerator and other special types of cars. The result has been to build up the domination of certain concerns and stifle free competition. Where such formal or informal monopolies grow up, they are public utilities and if the farmer is to have a free market they must be replaced by constructive public service.

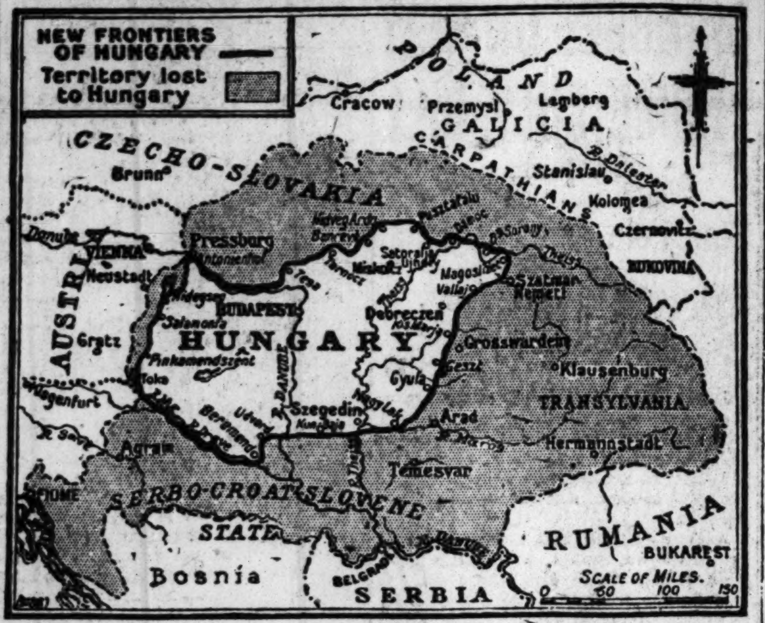
"The third point of attack on reduction in the cost of marketing is the most difficult of all. It lies in the fact that we have too many people engaged in distribution of food supplies. This is particularly the case in the retail end of distribution.

"We need an exhaustive economic and practical investigation into our great national boards of trades, with a view to extending their legitimate functions or preventing their abuse. The economic value to the farmer of having a daily national price created by the ebb and flow of absolutely untrammeled trade in central markets has never been fully appreciated."

IRISH TO HONOR EMMET'S BIRTHDAY.

Robert Emmet's birthday will be celebrated by the Friends of Irish Freedom at St. Anne's auditorium next Thursday night, when Irish songs and dances will be interspersed with "ringing resolutions denouncing the imprisonment and deportation of the citizens of the Irish republic," etc.

HUNGARY'S PRICE OF PEACE



The frontiers of Hungary, as fixed in accordance with the new treaty of peace, are so drawn as to exclude nearly all the mountains and hill country from the dominions of the Magyars. Their rich and fertile plain—the Alföld—is for the most part left to them, but even of this certain districts are withdrawn in favor of the autonomous Ruthenian districts of Czecho-Slovakia in the north, of Jugo-Slavia in the south, and of Roumania in the southeast.

The Hungarians are demanding a radical revision of this treaty. They will refuse to accept the boundaries as traced therein, and will insist on plebiscites being held in four regions, where, they claim, more than 3,000,000 Magyars, living in solid blocks, are cut away from their motherland and placed under foreign rule.

The Hungarian peace delegation has handed to the allied supreme council a note warning them that unless the allies hasten the retreat of the Roumanian troops out of Transylvania warfare may be begun there. The note says that the Szecklers, whose lands are being held by the Roumanians, threaten to begin attacks in spite of the efforts of the Hungarians to restrain them.

SOCIALISTS OF FRANCE SPLIT ON SOVIET SUPPORT

Extremists for It, Moderates Oppose It.

STRASBOURG, Feb. 28.—Adrien Pressemane, member of the unified Socialist group in the chamber of deputies, during debate here today in the national Socialist congress, opposed immediate and unreserved adhesion to the Moscow internationale.

He asserted that an attempt at force in the present state of depletion of raw materials would put the burden of victualing the country upon the revolutionists. M. Pressemane expressed the belief that the workers would not tolerate the idleness and privations which would result, and thus an opportunity for counter revolution would be created.

Cites Lenin as Troublemaker.

Jean Longuet, the French Socialist, in appealing for moderation, said that, of the twenty Socialist organizations in Europe, only two found favor in the eyes of Nikolai Lenin.

M. Longuet asserted that it was Lenin who accomplished the candidacy for the French chamber of deputies of Capt. Jacques Sadoul (who previously had been condemned to death by a Paris court martial on a charge based on his relations with the Russian bolsheviki), and that it was Lenin who started the movement for a general strike in Italy on July 21.

At yesterday's session of the congress the entire morning was devoted to speeches by leading representatives of moderate and extreme tendencies, and the proceedings threw little light upon the obscurities of the socialistic situation.

Program of the Extremists.

The extremists showed a tendency toward what they call the "purification" of the party by the exclusion of all moderates. They believe this would remove obstacles to the adoption of a radical revolutionary program and permit acceptance of the Russian régime as a basis for a third international Socialist organization.

The moderates are making a strong fight, defending representation in parliament, which they consider a great element of strength to the party, while the extremists are making a drive against it.

MEXICANS KILL ANOTHER YANK; STORE IS LOOTED

Posse Hunts Bandits After Border Raid.

Nogales, Ariz., Feb. 28.—Alexander Frasier, American storekeeper and mining engineer, is dead, and his brother, J. A. Frasier, whose wife lives at San Diego, Cal., is in a critical condition as a result of a battle with two Mexican bandits who raided a general store owned by the Frasier brothers at Montana camp, Ruby postoffice, thirty miles from here and near the Mexican line, late yesterday.

J. A. Frasier, who was shot through the head, was able to make a statement when he was brought here late last night. He is said to have identified one of his assailants as a member of a band of outlaws which has terrorized the border for many years.

Former Consul Killed.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—Augustus Morrill, formerly American consul at Manzanillo, Mexico, was killed by Mexican bandits Feb. 26. Mr. Morrill was 88 years old and retired from the consular service in 1881.

The present consul at Manzanillo, in reporting the killing to the state department, said Morrill was attacked when on his way to the hacienda of Balcon, three miles from Colima, where he lived, and that in a fusillade of pistol shots he received two wounds.

Inquiry Is Ordered.

The American embassy at Mexico City has been instructed to make urgent representations to the Mexican government looking to the arrest and punishment of the murderers, and the American consulate at Manzanillo has been instructed to make similar representations to the local Mexican authorities.

FINDING OF WILL PERILS GIFTS TO INSTITUTIONS

$600,000 Haines Estate Again in Court.

Another will has been found disposing of the $600,000 estate left by Charles H. Haines of St. Charles. Should this instrument be upheld by the courts, Mercy hospital and the St. Charles school board, chief beneficiaries under the other will, may be forced to turn back the property they won after a legal battle lasting several years.

The whole case with its many ramifications and all its elements of mystery and adventure, is expected to be aired again in the Kane county Probate court on Tuesday when the Lasier heirs, beneficiaries under the newly discovered document, will ask the removal of J. Joseph Wright as executor.

Thought Will Worthless.

It was Wright who produced the second will, which he said he had in his possession for five and a half years, but which he says he did not produce because he thought the other will revoked it. Although this second will antedates the other one by nineteen years, there is no revocation clause in the Mercy hospital document and a peculiar point in the Illinois laws covering wills is in question.

When Haines died, July 24, 1914, he left $100,000 in personal property and $500,000 worth of realty, part of which is in Chicago. He was survived by his mother, Mrs. Harriet Haines, then 96 years old. Chicago relatives, including Clarence Lasier, grandnephew, and David S. Lasier, nephew, asked that a conservator be appointed for the estate on the grounds that she was "senile and incompetent."

First Will Found.

Meanwhile Wright and William J. Carney, with offices in the Fort Dearborn building, produced a will made by Haines on Jan. 13, 1907. Wright was named executor in the will and was so appointed by the Kane county court. This will left the net income from the estate to the mother and at her death the estate was to be divided, two-thirds going to "Mercy hospital, Chicago," and one-third to the "school trustees of district 87, St. Charles, Ill."

Eight months later the aged Mrs. Haines died and Mercy hospital filed a bill in the Cook county courts for partition. Clarence and David S. Lasier, having been appointed administrators of the estate, were named defendants in the bill for partition. They filed a cross bill, claiming there was no such institution as "Mercy hospital," but there was a "Mercy Hospital and Mercy Orphan asylum." They also maintained there was nowhere existent such a thing as "trustees of district 87."

Another Claimant Appears.

Then there appeared a Mrs. Robert J. Simpson, claiming to be the widow of a son of Robert J. Haines, father of Charles Haines, by a previous marriage. Judge Foell ruled against her claims and his decree was upheld by the Supreme court. Then, although there was no decision in the partition suit as far as the Lasiers were concerned, and none in the Probate court of Kane county, Mercy hospital and the St. Charles school board took possession of the property and sold some of it.

Executor Wright appeared in the Kane county court on Jan. 27 and presented a final account showing he had spent about $60,000. He asked directions for the disbursement of about $75,000 in stocks and bonds. The case was continued by Judge John H. Williams at Geneva when it came up before him on Feb. 17. Two days later Wright knocked all the proceedings in the head by walking into the court and producing another will drawn March 7, 1887. This will leaves the entire estate to Haines' mother.

Women Rally to Map Out Chicago's First "Rent Strike"

Some of the Tenants of Racine Avenue Buildings with 84 Flats Who Met Yesterday to Discuss Plans for Refusing to Pay Nearly Doubled Rentals Beginning May 1 While Their Case Is Fought Out in the Courts.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

RENT 'STRIKERS' TO OFFER PEACE FIRST, THEN WAR

Tenants' Rally Today to Pass on Plans.

Occupants of the two Dorchester-Winchester apartment buildings at 4706-4732 North Racine avenue, formerly the Darlington hotel, mapped out their battle plans yesterday for Chicago's first "tenants' strike" against high rents.

But it is to be a case of "speak softly and carry a big stick."

There will be no war until peace has been offered and refused.

The eighty-four tenants will first make an offer to Baird & Warner, the renting agents, to submit to an increase of 33 1-3 per cent, or to arbitrate on that basis. If this offer is refused the "strike" will proceed, as proposed at the first meeting on Friday evening, and not a tenant will budge when the leases expire on May 1. Instead all will sit tight and refuse to pay the increases, while former Judge Robert Turney fights their cases for them in court.

Launch Protest Today.

The meeting yesterday was merely a preliminary rally, held in the apartment of Mrs. C. Allen Turnell, to "tune up" the tenants and assure their united attendance at a demonstration set for 1 o'clock this afternoon in the assembly room of St. Simon's Episcopal church, at Racine and Leland avenues. The 33 1-3 per cent offer will then be decided on finally. Tenants from other sections of the city are expected to attend.

Miss Mary Carlock was the Jeanne d'Arc of the rally. She urged the other eighty-three tenants to flock to "fight to the death" against the proposed rent increases.

"It is up to the people gathered here to fight it out once and for all," she said. "There is no justice whatever in the reasons advanced for increasing our rents. It doesn't make so much difference to me now, but I know if we submit this time we will only have to go through the same trouble next year."

"An offer to accept an increase of 33 1-3 per cent would be more than fair," said J. D. Munroe. "If we pay the amount now demanded, the owners will have an increase of more than $30,000 over the earnings under our present leases. They cannot show where the increased cost of upkeep calls for that much more revenue."

He Calls It a Soviet.

"This is a soviet, formed to get our rent rights," said W. G. Minmeyer. "We are not bolsheviki, but we'll be a soviet until the landlords learn to treat us fairly. We must stick together like glue and then we will win."

Mr. Minmeyer told how the apartment building is divided into eighty-four three and four room apartments, with rents ranging from $31 to $36 for the former and from $35 to $37.50 for the latter. He said $60 is now being asked for the three room flats and $70 for the four.

"Just think—$60 for two rooms and a sink!" said S. R. Lewis. "Why, there are no built-in beds, pantries, or anything in these flats. We can't fight too hard against these high rents."

Tenants say Mrs. A. Meier owns one building, but that Milton Plotke has obtained an option on it and is responsible for the new rent demands.

Rent Agent Gets Stay.

Farney S. Hendricks, south side renting agent, who has been accused by tenants of profiteering by means of a bonus plan, won a forty-eight hour reprieve for his firm's license during the day by promising to appear tomorrow morning before the council rent commitete and face his irate accusers.

At yesterday's session action on the license—that of Hendricks & Luken, at 235 East Garfield boulevard—was postponed by the narrowest of squeaks. Mr. Hendricks admitted taking bonuses in six cases, but asserted it was with the landlord's consent and to provide immediate cash for cleaning and decorating.

Tenants' Story Differs.

From H. F. Leopold, Ernest Block and Jack Teller, tenants in buildings managed by Hendricks & Luken, the committee had heard that $60 bonuses were collected without any mention of decorating, and with the remark, "Don't ask damn foolish questions as to what this money is for."

"Will you appear on Monday and face these men?" an alderman asked Hendricks.

"I'm in ill health; I don't want to come down here again on Monday," Hendricks replied.

"Come down or we will act now," said Ald. Byrne.

It was then that Hendricks decided his health would permit him to be present at tomorrow's session.

Joseph Holpuch, W. F. Peterson, Frederick Bulley, L. A. Ashbeck, G. F. Meyne, and other contractors who appeared before the committee to tell of increased costs of building materials, given by landlords as reasons for big rent increases, did nothing to hurt the landlords' case before the committee.

FLU ABOUT OVER UNTIL DECEMBER, 1921, "DOC" SAYS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—With the subsidence of the present influenza outbreak, the world may breathe easily for a while. The next violent epidemic will occur in December, 1921.

This is the conclusion from the investigations made by Dr. John Brownlee, who predicted in the London Lancet last December there would be a recurrence of influenza in January and February of this year.

Medical authorities of the public health service here say Dr. Brownlee has probably reduced what is called the "periodicity" of influenza to a known law. Dr. Brownlee's investigations seem to show that influenza occurs at regular intervals of thirty-three weeks, providing the thirty-third week does not fall between June and December.

The Truth About Pearl Imports

U. S. Treasury and Department of Commerce figures for Pearls imported in the Chicago district for the year ending December 31st, 1919, show the enormous volume of Pearls imported by LEBOLT & COMPANY as compared to all other houses combined—Retailers, Manufacturers, Wholesalers and everyone who imported Pearls during the year. The figures are as follows:

	Value of Pearls	Number Pearls	Average value of Pearls
Chicago Customs Receipts	$983,224.00	392,842	$ 2.47
LEBOLT & COMPANY Imported	$833,801.00	7,986	$104.40
All Others Imported	$149,433.00	384,856	$ .33
	$983,224.00	392,842	$ 2.47

You will note that the average value of Pearls imported by LEBOLT & COMPANY was over $104.00 for each Pearl, while the average value of Pearls imported by all others was less than thirty-three cents, and our importations were over 84% of total district receipts.

Spend 20 Minutes with the APOLLO
Player Piano

When you buy your player piano, who will be the judge as to whether you like it or not? You, of course. If you make your purchase from this standpoint, in an hour and twenty minutes you can easily decide the player piano question. Spend twenty minutes with the Apollo, then divide the hour between the other two makes of player pianos recognized as standard and we will rest our case.

The Apollo has numerous essential features that are not found in other players. It's true the Apollo sells for a little more—the difference in quality between the "just as good instrument" and the Apollo makes the difference in price worth while. Why not spend the twenty minutes tomorrow?

The Apollo-Phone
"It Plays and Sings"

The Apollo-Phone does everything that the piano, the player-piano and the talking machine can do either individually or in combination. All contained in one piano case at a price no higher than you would pay for a good player-piano. Imagine hearing Caruso sing Tosti's "Good-Bye" to a synchronized roll accompaniment. Demonstrations daily in our studios. You're invited.

The new March player rolls are on sale tomorrow. Be sure and ask to hear Al Jolson's latest hit, "Swanee," from "Sinbad."

SAY BERGDOLL BACKED PLOT TO DEFEAT JUSTICE

Arrest Detective as Tool of Draft Dodger.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Herman Fox Davis, former assistant manager of a detective agency, was arrested tonight on a charge of conspiracy to obstruct justice in the court-martial of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, draft dodger.

Wynne and John J. O'Connor, special department of justice agent assigned to the Bergdoll case from Washington, charged tonight that the conspiracy was designed to frame up a story that would discredit John P. Dwyer, chairman of draft board No. 32, and all his witnesses against Bergdoll.

Gets Detectives to Watch Detectives.

The private agency, it was charged, was hired by Mrs. Emma Bergdoll, the draft dodger's mother. After the agency's men had been at work ten days without showing any results she hired another private agency to watch the first agency operatives.

For more than two weeks, while District Attorney Francis Fosher Kane has been speechmaking in favor of alien Reds and was ignorant of what was going on, Dwyer, Wynne, and O'Connor have been drawing Davis and his associates closer into the net of their own making. This was drawn tight tonight.

Sought to Frame Him.

Dwyer announced tonight that he will reveal the whole inside story of how Mrs. Bergdoll and her son sought to "frame" him and other witnesses tomorrow. He admitted that he made complaint to the county detectives and O'Connor more than two weeks ago, and that Kane and local department of justice men knew nothing whatever of what was going on.

The charge against Davis, which is also the basis of a warrant for another man not yet served, is conspiracy to obstruct justice by attempting to influence, corrupt, intimidate, and coerce government witnesses subpœnaed to testify against Bergdoll in his military court-martial.

Bergdoll was to have gone to trial before a military court some weeks ago. He got a postponement by showing signs of "insanity."

Maj. Wynne declared today that he has evidence to show that Bergdoll from the start has been directing some of the moves made to provide himself with a defense.

MARINE RIVAL OF FUNSTON IN HAITI EXPLOIT

Gets Bandit Leader by Strategy.

into the town among the sympathetic natives, got in touch with the three policemen (their names are withheld so as not to impair their future usefulness), and a plot was hatched whereby Peralte was to attack and capture Capois, the uniformed police having secret orders to withdraw to Grande Riviere at the first volley.

Early in October Peralte stormed the undefended town. Elated by his "victory," he sent for all his chiefs and their followers, numbering 2,000 well armed men, in order to stage a celebration, just as Hanneken had foreseen.

His Arm in a Sling.

Meanwhile the sergeant and Col. Meade had occupied Grande Riviere with a force of ten marines and 100 native gendarmes. When the time was ripe Peralte, in Capois, was approached by the three loyal policemen with a scheme to attack Grand Riviere. Hanneken, following out his plan, had led several attacks on Capois, but always withdrew after a great to-do.

In one assault he pretended to have been wounded, and thereafter carried his arm in a sling. This news was carried to Peralte by the three spies. Enchanted by the ease with which he had driven off the attacking Americans, the bandit, after a council of war with his staff, decided to attack Grande Riviere the night of Oct. 31.

Hanneken, knowing that Peralte never risked his own hide in battle, had arranged through his faithful trio that Peralte should retire to Mazaire, a village half way between the two towns and a little to one side, there a await a bandit detachment with news of the outcome of the attack.

This agreed upon, Hanneken and Second Lieutenant William R. Button, his aid, donned old clothes, blackened their faces, and with twenty Haitian policemen, hurried to a spot near Mazaire.

A Perilous Path.

The attack on Grande Riviere began shortly after sundown. Hanneken and his little group watched 700 bandits pass on their way to the battle. They did not molest them, because they knew that Col. Meade, though far outnumbered, was amply prepared to withstand the assault of Peralte's generals.

But the leader himself failed to arrive at Mazaire. Hours dragged by and Hanneken, waiting in the darkness and listening to the sounds of battle in the north, began to fear all his complicated strategy had gone for naught.

About 10 o'clock a man was heard running through the night. He was the third spy. Breathlessly he told Hanneken that Peralte, suspicious always, had changed his mind and had repaired to the top of a high hill several miles to the east to await the bandit deputation with the first news of the battle. The spy had just left Paraite, who was approachable only by one perilous path up the steep mountain, and this was guarded by six outposts.

The Countersign.

But they knew the countersign—"General Joan."

That was all the American needed to know. While the native was explaining the great danger of attempting to reach Peralte and while Col. Meade was fighting the greatly superior bandit army, and doubtless wondering how his sergeant was coming along, Hanneken switched his plans and resolved that his little force would be that bandit detachment and go to the mountain top.

How he succeeded perhaps is better told in the modest report the captain of gendarmerie, sergeant of marines, turned in the following day.

Bear constantly in mind, however, what the heroic marine omitted, that is, the thousand and one menaces of the jungle night; the danger of panic or treachery among his own men as they were challenged by the outposts; the chances that they would be detected and slaughtered—and not forgetting these things and others, you shall see between the lines of the official report a chronicle of high enterprise.

The Midnight Raid.

Here is the story of that midnight raid:

"With the spy in the lead we proceeded and after three hours of difficult mountain climbing arrived at the first outpost. We were halted by the sentry, who demanded the countersign. The spy gave it and he was advanced, leaving us behind. He was conducted to Charlemagne, whom he told that Grande Riviere had been captured and that the detachment from the commanding general had arrived at the first outpost. Charlemagne ordered him to have the detachment report immediately.

"The spy thereupon returned and told me swiftly what had transpired. He again told of the six outposts and the dangers of trying to reach the bandit.

"We did not hesitate, but went forward, the spy in the lead, followed by the undersigned (armed with a .45 Colt automatic and a .38 Colt's revolver), in turn followed by Lieut. Button (armed with a machine gun), in turn followed by gendarmes armed with carbines, with ammunition in small Haitian macoots.

Act as If Exhausted.

"We passed the first outpost of about twenty men, who stood on both sides armed with rifles and machetes, without any trouble, they being greatly excited over the capture of Grande Riviere. After climbing about five minutes we were halted by the second outpost of about forty men, and, after the necessary password was given, advanced. The leader of this outpost scrutinized us closely, and we acted as if we were nearly exhausted from our long trip.

"At the third and fourth outposts we were not halted and we passed without comment, except for a few casual remarks by them, which my gendarmes answered properly, realizing we were in a serious situation.

"At the fifth outpost we were halted, and it appeared we would have to go into action, as the leader was on the job with a revolver in his hand. The undersigned by appearing to be greatly exhausted and winded got by, but he grabbed Lieut. Button by the arm and said, 'Where did you get such a nice looking rifle?' referring to the machine gun.

The Last Outpost.

"The undersigned had gone about eight paces, but stopped to go into action, when Button said: 'Let me go. Don't you see my delegue is getting out of sight?' at the same time jerking loose and following the undersigned, narrowly escaping detection.

"The sixth and final outpost was an immediate guard over Charlemagne, about thirty paces distant from where the bandit was. The spy and the undersigned reached this post, when the spy said, 'There he is,' and slipped behind me.

"Lieut. [illegible] advanced to within fifteen feet of Charlemagne, who was standing near a great fire and speaking with his woman. Suddenly two men leaped toward us, working the bolts of their rifles, and Charlemagne jumped backward, reaching for his pistol holster.

"I said to Button, 'All right; let's go,' and immediately shot Charlemagne three times in the chest. I then shot the two men with the rifles, Button falling to the ground and almost instantly getting his machine gun going against the men from the outpost, who ran up firing. The gendarmes threw themselves down and started rifle fire.

All Over in Three Minutes.

"It was over in three minutes. The gendarmes were placed at the edge of the clearing to repel counter attack. Undersigned searched for the dead. There were nine bodies and several wounded. Charlemagne was shot through the heart. It is believed St. Remy Peralte, his brother, was wounded, but escaped. We captured nine serviceable rifles, three revolvers, 200 rounds ammunition, seven swords, fifteen animals, and large amount of correspondence.

"Unnecessary material was burned; the nine bodies were left; Charlemagne's body was delivered with booty at Grande Riviere at 9 a. m. Nov. 1, 1919.

"The undersigned would commend for valiant services and heroic conduct Lieut. Button and the natives with him."

That is the end of the story. Later a few recommendations for military medals, a suggestion for promotion of the two Americans, a request that all rewards be paid to the natives, and the incident is closed and filed away in the archives of the marine corps in Washington.

ESCORT OF THREE PRESIDENTS TO QUIT POLICE

Detective Sergeant Gregory E. Moran, the escort of Wilson, Roosevelt, Taft, Fairbanks, Marshall, Joffre, and Cardinal Mercier, of earls and dukes and princes, and ministers and envoys and ambassadors visiting Chicago, is going to resign from the police force.

GREGORY E. MORAN [TRIBUNE Photo.]

On March 1, the big fellow—the biggest in the detective bureau—will become superintendent of the Congress hotel. His duties will be to see that the service is kept at a high standard, to scrutinize, politely but carefully, all guests and lobby loungers, watch out for bum check passers, and eject those that seem to require ejecting.

Moran has been on the force thirteen years, and has a trunkful of souvenirs from the prominent visitors to Chicago. Among these things are cuff buttons, stickpins, autographed letters, photos, and badges.

GIRLS WHISPER STRIKE THREATS AT KEMPER HALL

Chums of Ousted Ones Talk Revenge.

Kenosha, Wis., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Morale and esprit de corps in Kemper hall, the exclusive Episcopal boarding school which leaped to public view Thursday with the dismissal of three students and two instructors, and the departure of a fourth student, took a downward flop today. Tonight loyal members of the faculty were still reasoning with irate student friends of the dismissed pupils.

Throughout the day newsboys carrying journals and newspaper men seeking news besieged the school, wherein no man other than a grocery boy and Dr. Alfred W. Griffin is permitted to tread. One reporter was successful in vaulting the high iron fence and holding whispered conversation with students.

Report "Strike" Plan.

Later it was whispered that almost half of the student body had united in a sub rosa plot to quit the school during the spring vacation, which begins on March 13.

It seems there is a censorship of letters in the school that would rival the system that kept much news of the war out of the United States. Every letter written by a student is carefully read by school officials. There is no lawful outlet for complaints to parents, the girls say.

However, there are about twenty-five girls who live in Kenosha and are day students at Kemper hall. There is a pipe line that carries authentic news of the institution to the parents.

Shortly after noon yesterday the day students were called together by one of the teachers.

Warns Girls Not to Talk.

"Do not, dear girls, talk to newspaper men," the teacher said. "If you talk to any one remember the good name of Kemper hall. And before you go I must warn you not to carry any letters out for the boarding girls. We look over their mail very carefully. Any news, any information that is wise is permitted to go out. Please do not carry out and mail a letter for a boarder."

Then the teaching corps circulated among the pupils and talked to them.

"When the faculty decided to dismiss the three students and the two teachers they realized that a drastic step was being taken," they said. "But it was felt that there was nothing else to do. The girls had violated some of our most rigid rules. The good name of Kemper Hall could not endure if this was permitted to continue."

Rector Explains.

Dr. Griffin said late this afternoon that the efforts of the teachers had met with some success.

"The pupils are weeping copiously," the rector admitted. "They loved their classmates and teachers. But some of them have agreed with me that we did the only thing we could in the circumstances. In fact, the president of the senior class came to me and said that her supporters had instructed her to inform me of their confidence."

Then the head of the institution admitted that the dismissed students had been guilty of smoking, gambling, and dabbling with the intoxicating raisin and the hardening cider.

"One of these violations would not have been sufficient to warrant a dismissal," he said. "But when they all came together—well, we just had to say boodby to the offenders."

Empty Rooms Promised.

But despite the assurances of the minister a little girl whispered to a newspaper man this afternoon that there are going to be many empty rooms after the spring vacation.

"Some of them have voted and taken secret pledges," said the girl. "If their absence will avenge the dismissal they will be happy. You see, we all love the missing girls."

BAR RED ORATOR, SQUELCH RALLY AT WAUKEGAN

Fifty policemen and deputy sheriffs "boycotted" a meeting scheduled to be held in Waukegan last night under the auspices of the Young People's Socialist league. They objected to one of the speakers, Leo Krzycki, an undersheriff of Milwaukee county, who is alleged to have made several crimson remarks during the steel strike. When he attempted to enter the hall Thomas Tyrrell, assistant chief of police, stopped him.

OKLAHOMA JOINS SUFFRAGE RANKS; 3 MORE NEEDED

West Virginia Indicates a Close Decision.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Oklahoma became the thirty-third state to ratify the Susan B. Anthony amendment this afternoon when Gov. Robertson signed the bill which had previously passed both the house and the senate. Declaring it was impossible to get in the senate the thirty votes necessary to pass the ratification resolution with the emergency clause, Bert C. Hodges of Okmulgee, suffrage leader in the house of representatives, moved Saturday morning that the house concur in the resolution as passed by the senate without the clause. The house passed the amended resolution by a vote of 76 to 4, with twenty-four absent.

Anti-suffrage senators said they would not take part in efforts that may be made to circulate petitions to refer the question to a vote of the people. If it is referred, they said, they would use their influence to prevent a vote favorable to suffrage.

Suffragists Gain Point.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Suffragists fighting for the adoption of the ratification resolution on the Susan B. Anthony amendment won a point during the short session of the West Virginia legislature this afternoon when a motion to adjourn, made by Senator Harmer, leader for the suffragists, was passed by a vote of 13 to 9, several of the avowed foes of the resolution voting for the motion.

The senate did not convene until 2 o'clock. Almost immediately after the roll call the motion was made, to the surprise of the opposition, who expected an effort would be made to force a vote. They were ready for the battle, and expected to be able to win.

THE BEAR THAT WALKS LIKE A MAN.

Nikolai Lenin, in a pamphlet, has asked the allies why they are deliberating on the future of Constantinople, according to a report from Geneva. He says it belongs to Russia and was promised to Russia in 1915 as recompense for Russian aid in the war. If soviet Russia is to pay the debts of imperial Russia, soviet Russia will also collect what was owing to imperial Russia.

Constantinople means warm water for a people who are living on plains, in mountains, and in the snows, whose great domain approaches many oceans and does not find satisfactory outlet into any. Soviet Russia is rapidly taking back the territory of imperial Russia. It also seems to be taking on the ambitions of imperial Russia.

Constantinople is to Russia in a tremendous way what Fiume is to Jugo-Slavia. Soviet Russia has made peace with the Baltic states, with the little new states which have the old Russian Baltic ports of Reval, Riga, etc. These were not adequate outlets at the best, but will Russia do without them?

The world is offering trade again to Russia, and Russia, trying to get back into industry and commerce, finds its coal in Poland and its ports either in the ice or in foreign hands, and finds that the port it wants most of all, the warm water port, may remain with the now very sick Turk or may be given to a new tenant who will be even more alien.

The soviets did not change the Russian people. With new forms of government and tricks of communism they are the people they were under the czars. They have been regarded as amiable, indolent, backward people herded and led in aggressive movements by ambitious imperialism. Aggression and expansion have something more substantial than dynastic intent. When expansion has a long record its impulse is found in the needs and the temperament of the people themselves.

Napoleon invaded all the lands he could reach, but he gave up territory and did not acquire it. The French did not have the impulse which put them in foreign lands where they remained. The few exceptions in America only indicate the empire they lost. Americans, without any kind of a policy and without an aggressive leader, spread out in all directions and remained where they went. There was no American determination to do it as a national program and no general consciousness that it was being done.

Russia has spread as a people spreading, and soviet Russia probably wants and needs Constantinople just as much as imperial Russia wanted it. The Russian people may not definitely will to get Constantinople, as the czars willed it, but they will want it just the same.

They will want the coal of Poland. They will want the Baltic ports. They will have the same wants and the same needs that they had in former days because their needs and their character have not been changed.

A Holland journalist who studied the new Russia found it was old Russia with some superficial changes. The Reds are aristocrats. The old classes have been preserved and some new classes added. Some remarkable new classes have been bred, but they are adopting the habits of the old. There is a new aristocracy, but it is an aristocracy even if it does, as the journalist says, give the impression of "a parlor car with third class people in it."

They are in the parlor car and they want what the aristocracy wanted and they have the power to get it. The dynasty was killed but the people were not.

When, if at all, will Russia move to get what it wants? Teemosshanko, the Cossack chief, who answered Denikine for the Kubans, reminded him that the White army approached Moscow rapidly, but notwithstanding "the talent of our commander and his brilliant generals we were beaten by some unknown sergeants, such as Boodenyi." There is a touch of the Napoleonic in that.

If some unknown sergeant with the ability to beat brilliant generals gets his foot in the stirrup Russia may be on the move toward its ports and coal fields, inspired for gain and emotional, as the French armies were emotional, for human liberty.

If the bear starts to move Europe will begin to jump.

JOY RIDING AMERICA.

The certain end of our present extravagance and the even more serious restriction of production by workers is hard times. The economic and financial constitution of America is strong. But it cannot stand a vital drain any more than a man can stand a persistent fever.

At bottom the fault is as broad as the country, as general as the average man and woman. The most serious factor of the situation is decreased production. The more wage earners are paid the less work they seem to be willing to do. This is the accumulated effect of the policy of output restriction supported by labor, openly or secretly, on the theory that work must go around. When labor was subject to competition through a constant influx of new labor from abroad there was a certain plausibility in the theory. But labor today is virtually in a position of monopoly. There is a shortage of the commodity it controls. If there was any excuse for restriction of output before, there is none now. On the contrary, labor is cheating itself of the full value of its opportunity by helping to keep up the cost of the things labor buys and cutting the purchasing power of its new wages. This is to say nothing of the injury done to the whole country, on the general prosperity and strength of which labor, in the long run, must always depend.

Sound labor leadership realizes this, but radical leadership is interested in destruction, not construction, hoping to build something new and better according to its own ideas on the ruins of what we are building today. The common sense of American labor should be able to choose which is the better way, and it is time to choose. Labor is injuring itself and its future by its present course.

But this is only one phase of the situation. While much of the outcry against profiteering is irrational and would better be replaced by a quiet determination to stop purchase of luxuries and unnecessary surrender to exorbitant demands, it is true that the spirit of grabbing prevails generally. Commodity prices are as high as the traffic will bear, and while this is, in the main, a legitimate policy which will be corrected in time by competition there ought to be a certain business conscience opposed to excessive profits. The business man, like the wage earner, will do well to consider the indirect and eventual effects of his practice. Neither will save his present prosperity if he ignores the principles on which, in the long run, prosperity must be founded.

This applies emphatically to bankers, many of whom have been accomplices in the inflation and speculation which have weakened our financial position. In fact, the history of the last year has been discreditable to our financial leadership, if there is any. As for the federal reserve board, it has acted like a sleepy engineer. Its system seems to be to let inflation and speculation go on for months, then wake up in a fright and try to bring the machine to a dead stop.

The country needs more responsible financial leadership than it has had at such a time as this.

"THE LITTLE RED SCHOOL TEACHER."

Secretary Moore of the Illinois Teachers' association, in an appeal for increase of teachers' pay, remarks humorously that whereas we used to hear much of the little red school house, we are now hearing more of the little Red teacher, and he expresses the opinion that where teachers are justly paid there will be little danger of Red propaganda.

We believe teachers are among the classes which are suffering from the decreased power of the dollar and that it is urgently important their compensation be increased. We agree with Mr. Moore that underpayment produces discontent and a sense of injustice which predisposes most individuals to radicalism.

But we think that radicalism among teachers, such as it is, is the result of theorizing rather than personal experience. Teachers usually graduate from the pupil's desk to the teacher's rostrum and have little of the education in practical realities which is the best antidote for radicalism. They find in the idealism of the Socialist or communist something morally ingratiating and intellectually plausible. Life gives them no acid test for the radical's utopia, while sentiment swells the heart and it seems easy to correct inequities which reformers always ascribe to existing conditions, laws, or institutions.

Mr. Moore says "the teachers are not trying to overthrow the government, but are trying to correct the evils of special privilege, not by direct action, but by educating public opinion; not by force, but by persuasion; not by bullets, but by ballots."

If they are doing this out of the school as citizens, teachers are within their rights. But we are inclined to think the distinction is not always respected or realized. We are also inclined to think that if teachers were as well grounded in the principles and history of American institutions as they ought to be they would be less susceptible to the appeal of radicalism and much better teachers of American youth.

We do not believe radicalism has wide acceptance in the teaching body, but we do think there is a great deal of sentimentalizing and impractical theorizing, snap judgments uncorrected by experience or study of the practical workings of our industrial and social organization, vague yearnings for a perfect world and naive, uncritical reading of radical literature.

This is not beneficial to the teachers nor to the schools, which are not, in our opinion, vigorously performing their vital function in the American scheme. We should like to see our public schools laying the foundation in American youth of a sound respect for American principles and institutions, which, while they may not be infallible or ideally perfect, are the product of centuries of human trial, experience, and sacrifice. These, after all, are worthy of more respectful study and meditation, of more faith and confidence, and of more seasoned judgment than our radically disposed teachers have, we suspect, ever bestowed upon them.

We do not ask of the men and women to whom the teaching of future citizens is confided a loyalty that is blind or that forecloses honest question. But we have a right to demand, and we ought to see to it, that no one is teaching in our public schools who has not a reasoned loyalty to our institutions. The public schools are not fit places for propaganda, for the influencing of immature minds, usually by immature, if older, minds. There is plenty of time and room for political and social criticism in the world outside the school house doors. When we have changed our principles and institutions we may change in the public schools. Meanwhile our public instruction should be inspired by intelligent devotion to the American system.

FOR THE NATION'S GOOD.

[From the Kewanee, Ill., Star-Courier.]

Judging from the reports from Washington, it will not now be long until we have a national budget system. It is earnestly to be hoped that nothing will be obtruded in congress to delay the passage of the act which has been championed by Senator McCormick of this state and for which he is largely responsible. The budget system offers the only way to an economical and efficient application of the funds of the national treasury to the needs of the country.

Hew to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

ONE SURE SIGN.

Gray skies above, dun fields below,
  A frozen river, bleak and still;
Long shadows cast upon the snow
  By naked gravestones on the hill.

No cattle roam the pastures bare,
  The sheep are huddled in the fold;
A hawk is circling in the air,
  And raucous crows complain and scold.

The garden rows are frozen heaps,
  The birches shudder, white as snow;
Within his hut the muskrat sleeps
  Until the warmer breezes blow.

With listless feet I pace the grounds,
  Dulled by the grayness of the day;
Rebelliously I make my rounds—
  Spring seems so very far away.

At last I reach the ordered hives
  Where cloistered bees await the hours
Of blossom-burdened, busy lives
  As nursing sisters of the flowers.

And lo, there falls upon my ear
  The hum of myriad tiny wings:
Spring's far away? Why, Spring is here!
  Life, sunshine, work—all happy things!

TESTING ORGANIC FUNCTIONS.

THE object of this article is to acquaint the reader with certain phases of the art of healing. It has nothing to do with how to keep well, in the sense that the reader can follow out the directions and keep himself in health by avoiding disease.

The tests alluded to are, in the main, too technical for the physician not equipped with a fairly good laboratory. In spite of these limitations, the information given is something more than cultural.

A man may have an organic disease and live with it for many years. In fact, many people with organic disease live far beyond the biblical limitation, and at autopsy many old people are found to have organic defects which apparently were present for decades.

Let us get away from the thought that a diagnosis of organic disease of any vital organ, such as the kidneys, heart, lungs, or liver, means impending death.

Thirty years ago Osler wrote of the advantage to a man of having Bright's disease, the advantage lying in the improvement of his behavior when he discovers that he can no longer trifle with himself. Within two years I have read the opinion of a physician that high blood pressure was an advantage to certain people under certain circumstances. It caused them to live hygienically, and thus added to their years and their happiness. Still other illustrations might be cited.

At times it is more important to know the functional capacity of an organ than it is to know whether or not that organ is diseased. Nature overbuilds always. I have seen it estimated that the kidneys have twenty-four times as much capacity as they ordinarily need. If this be true, kidneys can be very much diseased and still have enough capacity for the ordinary tasks.

A man with diseased kidneys can still get on in comfort, provided he keeps within the limits of his kidney capacity. Perhaps the time may come when laboratory facilities will be available for everybody and when the tests of functional capacity have been perfected and simplified. Many of the tests now in use are far from satisfactory, and others are too complicated to be of much service. When that day of greater facilities comes it will be possible for those with slowly progressive organic troubles to have tests made which will show the functional capacity of the injured organs. If then they will adjust their lives in accordance with the information they may live long and useful lives.

Functional testing of the kidneys has been developed farther than is the case of tests of any other organ. Physicians not only test the functional capacity of the kidneys but some of them claim to be able with these tests to tell what kind of Bright's disease is present; what the ultimate outlook is; wether the patient can stand operation in surgical cases, and whether an operation on the kidneys is advisable in surgical kidney, bladder, and ureter conditions. Most authorities think this is rather too much information to expect from functional kidney tests.

The simplest kidney test consists in giving a large quantity of water to drink and then noting how much it increases the urine and how soon the increase commences. Another simple test is to measure the volume and the specific gravity of the night urine. The more technical tests are of two kinds. The first consists in giving some chemical or dye and then noting how quickly it appears in the urine and how long it takes the kidneys to eliminate it. The second consists in testing the urine and blood quantitatively for substances normally present in the blood and normally excreted by the kidneys.

The dye tests consist in giving some dye, like indigo, carmine, or methylene blue, by the mouth, and then watching the urine closely for the dyes. The chemical generally employed is phenolsulphonephthalein. This, too, is given by the mouth. The urine is collected every few minutes and tested. Judgment is based upon the time elapsing before the phthalein appears and the length of time it persists.

The second group of tests consists in testing the urine and the blood for urea, total nitrogen, uric acid and salt, and some other ingredients. The men who have done most on the subject are Drs. Rowntree, Geraghty, Mosenthal, and Lewis.

Testing the liver function is much less satisfactory. The liver manufactures bile. Bile assists the other digestive juices, stimulates the intestines, and has much to do with the digestion and absorption of fats. In addition, the liver manufactures urea, converts glucose into glycogen, participates in the conversion of fats, destroys poisons, and assists in the clearing of the blood of waste products.

When an organ participates in so many activities it is difficult to measure its functional activity. It is easy to say a man has "a lazy liver," or "his liver is not working," but it is very difficult to prove. It is easier to take a big dose of calomel, and, forgetting the liver a while in the discomfort caused by the remedy, to assume that the fault has been corrected.

Several functions of the liver can be tested separately. The test of the sugar fixing capacity of the liver is made by feeding very large quantities of some one of the sugars and then testing the urine for the sugar at stated intervals. We shall see presently that about the same test is used for other purposes. The sugar test of the liver is only moderately helpful to the physician.

To test the power of the liver to convert proteins into urea several methods are employed. Perhaps the most popular of these is one which makes use of urease, a ferment obtained from soy beans. This group of tests is only moderately helpful.

Too much protein throws an undue strain on the kidneys. It is also supposed to contribute to high blood pressure and its frequent sequent, apoplexy. Both of these conditions are important in middle life and just beyond.

Overeating starches and sugars produces obesity and diabetes, both important to the middle aged also.

A middle aged man can trust his instincts and appetite to guide him aright in selecting his foods, but he cannot trust them to determine the quantity. The wise man of this age always leaves the table hungry.

Constipation is apt to make itself troublesome in the middle aged. If neglected high blood pressure, hemorrhoids, and prolapse of the bowel results.

The middle aged person does not stand tobacco as well as the younger one. It is wisdom to further lessen one's allowance of tobacco after the fortieth year. Many of the irritable pulses, the heart and chest pains, and some of the disturbance of vision present in middle aged persons are the result of chronic tobacco poisoning. It is in this age that smoker's cancer of the lip and tongue manifests itself.

Middle aged people are frequently poor sleepers, and the aged period is one requiring a good deal of sleep. Taylor advises ten hours of sleep, and even twelve hours on occasions.

If a person is very much exhausted he should have his sleep out even though twelve hours be required for it. Never except under a physician's strict orders should sleeping medicine be taken, and about half the time the patient advised by his physician to take sleeping medicine would be better off without it.

The cause of sleeplessness is generally mental unrest, worry, etc. Therefore, the chief necessity is the development of mental calm.

The only benefit from going away consists in the mental diversion caused by it. A man who sleeps poorly will do well to refrain from study or heavy reading, or even from games which require great mental concentration.

Most men do best in the way of sleeping when they eat supper, spend the evening in light conversation with the family, and then retire early. Some do well if they do some light manual labor after supper. Some profit from drinking a bowl of warm milk and eating a few crackers and some cheese about bedtime.

The middle aged person not working at a trade or farming will need some form of exercise. The exercise chosen should furnish diversion, keep the muscles fit, and at the same time it must not be too strenuous. Probably the best outdoor game is golf. A man playing golf can walk fast or slow and wait as long as he pleases between drives. For winter bowling and volley ball are admirable.

In no one of these three games need there be much effort to compete. Playing to win and playing against bogey are not helpful in games for the middle aged. Systematic walking appeals to many. Many persons arriving at old age in prime condition attribute their vigor to long daily walks. The middle aged man has no business playing handball, tennis, squash, baseball, or basketball. Horseback riding is good.

When the middle aged person goes to the mountains or woods for a vacation he must recognize his limitations. If he is to climb mountains he must spend some time in hardening his muscles and improving his wind, else he may dilate his heart. If he goes fishing he had better stick to small fish nearer the bank until he has gotten himself in trim to handle a tarpon or a musky.

Taylor recommends cycling and gardening. A young man speaking to me of his father, now middle aged and fat, said: "The only drawback to my staying at home is that when I take the work off father's hands he will not take enough exercise to keep him in good health."

CURED OF NOSE TROUBLE.

Mrs. F. D. F. writes: "You recently published a letter from a man who had a profuse watery discharge from his nose, but who was otherwise well. I had the same trouble, 'sniffing gymnastics.' An oil spray relieved me of the discomfort."

A DESERTER.

Chicago, Feb. 21.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Case A: Mr. A has taken his first naturalization paper nearly six years ago. It is stated in the paper that it is good for all purposes for five years. Question: Can Mr. A get his second naturalization papers?

Case B. Mr. B, an alien, has his first naturalization paper and during the war he actually helped the motto, "Win the war," with his work, but, unwilling to fight against his country fighting on the side of Germany, he claimed exemption and in his questionnaire he renounced his first paper, according to provisions by the congress of the U. S. A. But he did not get the special form for renouncing his first paper, as stated in the questionnaire. The war was over, and after two months his paper was over five years old. Question: What could B do, if it could be done, to become a citizen?

Case C: Mr. F. has his first paper. He registered in the first draft in 1917 and selected for the U. S. army. He objected on the ground "alien," and failed to answer the call. He is considered by the authorities as "deserter." During the draft of 1918 [September] an alien could renounce his first paper and be put in class 5. Question: Is F a deserter? N. B.

In his hypothetical questions, the writer does not state the facts with reference to the period for which a declaration of intention (first paper) is valid. The law provides that a declaration of intention expires by limitation seven years from its date, and across the top of a declaration is printed the legion: "Invalid for all purposes seven years after the date hereof."

In case of A: If the alien has resided five years in the United States and one year at least in the state of Illinois, next preceding the date of a petition and can produce witnesses to prove his residence and character for five years next preceding the date of the petition, he is in a position to file a petition for naturalization.

Case B: All courts in this naturalization district held that an alien who claimed exemption from military duty under the selective service law by reason of alienage, may not be naturalized.

Case C: This man is classed as a deserter from the United States army and may be apprehended and tried.

Chief Naturalization Examiner.

State headquarters, 236 South Sixth street, Springfield, Ill.

At present the legion headquarters in Chicago is busy dividing the city into districts, with the idea of getting each ex-service man to join his neighborhood post and to prevent any man already a member of one post to be solicited for membership in another post, although a man will not be denied transfer to another post.

The state constitution has been amended by addition of a section 6 to article 9. The amendment reads that no person shall hold membership in more than one post at one time.

The form printed above is an application blank for membership in the American Legion. Mail it to the neighborhood post.

The booklet, "Facts About the American Legion," will be mailed to any one sending a stamped, addressed envelope to the Friend of the Soldier, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

LOST DISCHARGE.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I am writing to you in regard to my discharge papers. I was with the 170th brigade of field artillery, discharged December, 1917. I have lost the discharge papers. Please advise me what to do in regard to getting new ones. W. W. G.

You cannot get a duplicate discharge, but you can have a service certificate issued to you by requesting it of the adjutant general of the army, Washington, D. C.

LOST MONEY ORDER.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 23.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—On Dec. 17, 1918, a money order was sent to me in France through a Chicago bank, which I never received. I have taken this up with the bank on several occasions, but they claim there is nothing they can do but wait. Please advise me through your column if I can make claim for the amount of the money order or do I have to wait another year for same to come through. J. S.

The sender of the money order should refer the matter to the postoffice or substation where the money order was purchased, and the records will be looked up. The sender can claim reimbursement for the amount sent. It will doubtless take a little time to have the case investigated and adjusted, but you will not have to wait for the original to be returned.

EFFECTIVE AT TIME OF CONVERSION.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—If, during the fifth year after the termination of the war, I have my war risk insurance policy converted into a twenty year endowment policy, does the latter become payable twenty years from the date of conversion or twenty years after the term insurance was taken out in the army? F. C. C.

It is payable twenty years after it is converted. The insurance you are now carrying is annual renewable term insurance and does not count on the new policy form to which you choose to convert it.

No attention will be given to anonymous letters.

WRATH.

Bloomington, Ill., Feb. 24.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Again in this morning's TRIBUNE I find an editorial on prohibition. Why such rot? It does no good and only encourages those inclined to break the law to become bolder in its disgard. There is more than one kind of bolshevik, and in this respect THE TRIBUNE is as red and dangerous as the boldest advocate of communism. Now that we have prohibition, let us make the best of it. THE TRIBUNE's editorials are the reflected opinion of its owners, even as are the editorials of a small country newspaper. They through their staff talk like a gang of drunkards who found it impossible to give up the stuff. Many so-called moderate drinkers have become reconciled to the situation, believing that in time they and the country will be better off without it.

Any man who thinks more of booze than he does of America is no American. Inasmuch as the thing is done it cannot be undone.

If the Literary Digest omitted THE TRIBUNE in its survey on military training, maybe it was because its editors consider the owners and editors of THE TRIBUNE a bunch of paranoiacs whose opinions are of no more value than those of the Squedunk Daily News, and not nearly as much in touch with the people. HORATIO C. BENT.

HOIST BY OUR OWN PETARD.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In the editorial columns of your paper a short time ago appeared a criticism of the method employed by the Literary Digest in attempting to influence public opinion by quoting from insignificant newspapers over the country, instead of the papers of more importance. Your position in this matter is well taken and is to be commended. The same principle should be applied to the column in your paper, "The Inquiring Reporter." I am sure if the question, "Is the prohibition law working well?" was put to representative business and professional men, the answers would be different than those printed in your issue of Feb. 24. R. K. WEBB.

DESTROYING THE OCEAN BECAUSE A MAN DROWNED IN IT.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I suppose there is small sympathy for a man who loves his dog. I admit to that much sentiment. Mine was a dog that would have followed me where men wouldn't. The dog fell ill. When the dog you care about falls ill there's where your pity goes. The veterinary telephoned me that a few ounces of whisky would save the animal. He tried to get the whisky. It wasn't to be had. I took a little out of my stock—which is against the law—and went to the dog hospital. My dog was dead. ANTI.

THE BOSS PROBABLY SMOKES A CORNCOB.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—"Lessen the Smoke Horror," reads the first item on "THE TRIBUNE's Platform for Chicago." This, of course, refers to the combat against factory smokestacks, puffing engines, and others guilty of polluting the city's atmosphere, but what about the human smokestacks who pollute the already vitiated air in a good many offices by smoking during business hours? Is there no hope for the stenographer or other clerk who must gasp in an obnoxious atmosphere during the greater part of the time? STENOGRAPHER.

SOMETIMES one thinks that literary forms have manifested themselves in as many shapes as even such protean acrobats are capable of. There can be no new form of novel, for instance, one argues, because every conceivable form has been used. And it has, of course. But one forgets. And therein lies some of the intriguing power of such ultra-usual novels as "Mary Olivier," "Pilgrimage," and "A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man." And now comes Clemence Dane's "Legend" [Macmillan], a novel which literally stuns one with its method.

There may have been other novels fashioned by the same technique. But I, for one, never saw one. "Legend" is a book of a personality, dominating every word, brooding over every page, molding characters before the reader's very eyes, and that personality a woman who never actually appears and whose special medium is a jealous, self-seeking woman who, by some magic in Miss Dane's pen, succeeds by her lies in making the reader know the beautiful, fine, and cosmic truth of the soul of the woman who, dead but an hour or so, becomes the naked prey of ghoulish friends.

After becoming a great novelist, Madela Grey has given up her literary work and married and died in childbirth. The story of the book is told by a young girl who never knew her and yet who, by a mystic revelation of Madela Grey, knows her better than any one. This young girl lives over the few hours which followed the news of Madela's death. And there the legend of Madela Grey is born—a legend which we, the readers, know is terribly false.

Miss Dane has not only done something new but she has made a wondrously beautifully written tale, mystic at times, with characters so scalpeled as to give one an uncanny sense of knowing them almost too intimately. "Legend" is one of the few books which have a right to be called remarkable.

One of the eastern papers in reviewing Mary Hastings Bradley's "The Fortieth Door" [Appleton] says "It is evident that Mrs. Bradley has spent considerable time in the harems of the east." Exclamation point.

"The Tall Villa" [Doran] by Lucas Malet is a novel of a psychic love, and for those who like to think that the dead are never dead, but always at our elbows. I should think it would be like manna from heaven. It was too uncanny, too much a straining at the reins of probability, to seem more than a striving after a bizarre plot to me. It is the story of the love of a woman for the spirit of a long dead relative, self-killed for love, and of the final triumph of that love over the confines of flesh and space.

George C. Briggs in an interview which he had with William Butler Yeats in New York quotes him as saying, "A man called Madder used the free verse form in 'Coloured Stars,' and Whaller, a student of the Chinese, also adopted the vers libre form to give us two volumes of valuable translations." Too frequent riding on subway trains and hearing the American "dis and dat" may have made Mr. Yeats call Puwys Mather, Madder, but the Whaller for Waley is so palpably unexplainable that one fears Mr. Briggs had never heard of the two vers librettists and misquoted the great William Butler Yeats. He, W. B. Y., is to be with us soon, about the 2d of March, I believe.

J. V. A. Weaver, one of our bright and shining Reviewers' union, has undertaken to become the poet of the American language. He has two poems in the February Poetry, one of them "Nocturne," a sonnet of distinction and beauty. He objects to the declaration that Vachel Lindsay's "Golden Whales of California" are "poems in the American language," and suggests that American as she is spoke isn't embalmed therein. We're all hoping that Johnny Weaver's experiment grows into a book for the fall season.

The second series of "A Treasury of War Poetry," edited by George Herbert Clark, makes, with the first series, a thoroughly representative anthology of war poetry, and includes, not only the well known and much beloved verses, but many little poems which might otherwise have been buried in the obscurity of magazine files.

A new interpretation of the mysterious personality of William Blake has been made by Charles Gardner, whose studies and critical estimates of Blake's work have already won for him recognition as an authority on the subject of the poet. "William Blake, the Man" [Dutton] is a volume of beautiful bookmaking for the collectors of Blakeiana.

Walter de la Mare's tale of wondrous things which happen nowhere but in fairyland and fairy dreams, "The Three Mulla-Mulgars," is as fantastic and gentle and charming as his much beloved poetry, "Peacock Pie," for instance, which is a delight both for children and grownups.

SOVIET SUCCESS HAS BALKED OLD PLANS OF ALLIES

'Buffer' States Fail to Be Expected Barrier.

BY COL. HENRY J. REILLY.

ARTICLE II.

The bolshevik army being an indisputable fact, the question before Europe today is how it is to be met.

Up to the present the announced policy of the allies has been the suppression of bolshevism. Such a suppression at the present time can only be brought about by force. Armies and navies are the means of enforcing national policies. The bolsheviki having little or no navy, and navies always being auxiliary to armies in a war between great powers, there are three questions before the governments concerned today: First, are the armed forces available sufficient to prevent any bolsheviki invasion? Two, if they are not, can the existing governments take the necessary steps to bring these forces to the proper strength? Three, if the available forces are not strong enough and if they cannot be brought to a sufficient strength will the existing policy with respect to the bolsheviki be changed now and then prevent invasion at least for the time being.

Allies' Present Policies.

The policies of the allied governments today depend upon two considerations. The first of these is the treaty of Versailles, the signers of which have assumed certain obligations. The second consists of the policies which the party in power in each of the countries concerned is forced to enunciate from time to time to be in accord with the wishes of the public. These policies, which in countries with parliamentary governments such as those of France, Great Britain, and Italy must be followed if the party in power is to remain so, may have nothing to do with the treaty of Versailles and might even run counter to some of its provisions.

Pliable and Stable Governments.

In considering European questions it is important that Americans should not forget the tremendous difference between parliamentary government and our own. The party in power in a parliamentary government may go down at any time it does not conform to the immediate wishes of the public, and therefore cannot map out and follow a policy with the continuity and persistency which is possible in our much more stable form of government, where elections come only at stated intervals.

In writing the treaty of Versailles the main point kept in sight at all times was to so weaken the central empires that they never again could seriously threaten France and Italy on land and Great Britain on the sea or in central Asia.

Belt of Small Nations.

The old Russian empire, allied to France against the central empires, had been replaced by a new Russia weak through internal disorder and a number of lesser states weak because of their smallness, the ravages of the war and internal disorder. Such conditions to the east naturally offer to the Germans cut off in the west a splendid field for peaceful penetration, commercial development and ultimate absorption.

To prevent this and to fulfill the promises made to the various submerged peoples from the Baltic to the Black sea, it was decided to create a belt of small nations. As a result of this policy Finland Esthonia, Letvia, and Lithuania were encouraged in the north at the expense of the old Russian empire; Poland at the expense of Russia, Germany and Austria-Hungary, and Czecho-Slovakia at the expense of Germany and Austria-Hungary.

Looked Like Effective Barrier.

Austria and Hungary were permanently separated and so reduced in size as to be smaller than their old rivals and even some of the new states. Servia enlarged at the expense of Austria-Hungary became Jugo-Slavia. Roumania gained in size at the expense of Hungary and old Russia. The Ukraine in the south separated Russia from the Black sea.

As the bolsheviki menace increased and became recognized as very serious, these states not only formed a barrier, but also were useful as bases from which the White Russian army of Yudenitch in the north and Denikine in the south could operate. As most of these states directly faced the danger of bolshevism it was hoped that their newly organized armies, strengthened by supplies of all kinds from the allies, could be united in a common effort with the Russian White armies to attack and destroy bolshevism.

Line Failed to Hold.

However, due to mistrust of Yudenitch and Denikine for the reasons hitherto stated, these not only failed to support the Whites, but even, as in the case of the Ukraine, fought them. Also some of these small states became involved in disputes with each other which sometimes led to bloodshed.

The defeat and virtual disappearance of the Russian White armies and the overrunning of the greater part of the Ukraine by the bolsheviki now leaves all of these new states with the exception of Czecho-Slovakia and Jugo-Slavia, in direct contact with the victorious bolshevik army.

A third article of this series will be published tomorrow.

AMERICAN COLONY AND MINNIE HAVE FAST TIME

NOVOROSSIISSK, Feb. 17, via Paris, Feb. 28.—There is a mobile American colony with Gen. Denikine's army—very mobile in recent months.

The head of the colony is Vice Consul Burri, who enjoys all the prerogatives of a minister plenipotentiary as the only representative of the Washington state department in south Russia. The other members of the colony are Col. Castle, Col. Cox, and Lieut. Col McCammon—and myself. We have a Russian railway car, and we have named it Minnie.

Vice Consul Burri recently led an expedition into No Man's Land in Minnie to rescue some Russians, among them an alleged Russian princess, whom the British officers had refused to rescue in their car, saying there was no place.

An American army officer, who just has come from the Caucasus, says the Italians have sold a large amount of arms to the Azerbaijdans, in whose country is located Baku and the oil fields. Since the American relief went into the Caucasus the British have pulled out all their forces, except at Batum, where they control the Black sea-Caspian railway. The British have a military governor at Batum. They even are talking of grabbing off the Baku oil fields by extending the Bagdad railway in that direction. They permitted the Italians to send arms through the Batum for the Azerbaijdans, and perhaps they went so far as to pay for the stuff. Somebody bribed the Georgians to let the equipment cross the country.

Aged Suspect in Tabor Murder Released on Bond

Paw Paw, Mich., Feb. 28.—Mrs. Sarah Tabor, 80 years old, was at liberty today for the first time since December, when she was arrested in Yreka, Cal., charged with having murdered her daughter, Maude Tabor Virgo. She returned to her home in Lawton after her release on $5,000 bail by order of the state supreme court. Circuit Judge Desvoigne's decision refusing bail was reversed by the supreme court.

TAX PURCHASES AND NOT PROFITS, KAHN SUGGESTS

New York, Feb. 28.—[Special.]—A tax on sales of all commodities and real estate to make possible the elimination of the excess profits tax and abnormal business taxes and the reduction of the tax on incomes, is suggested by Otto H. Kahn in a pamphlet entitled "Two Years of Faulty Taxation and the Results," made public today.

Mr. Kahn also suggested a revision of income taxation on the theory that the emphasis of taxation be placed on expenditures rather than on incomes.

Mr. Kahn expressed agreement with the statement of Elihu Root in his speech at the Republican state convention last week that the present federal tax laws were passed by men who had suspicion and dislike for successful business, and that under the present system in many cases the tax is paid by the consumer in the increased cost of living.

In suggesting taxation on expenditures rather than on incomes, Mr. Kahn said this method would reach those who now escape the burden of income taxation by holding tax exempt securities.

WIFE OF BROKER HOWE GETS DECREE, SON AND BUNGALOW

Mrs. Nora De Etta Howe of 7949 Bennett avenue believes she has won her two year fight for divorce from Harmon Howe, a broker at 179 West Washington street.

Judge McDonald yesterday indicated he would sign the decree, giving her the bungalow in Bennett avenue and the custody of her son, Jack, 8 years old.

Mrs. Howe had charged cruelty. Her husband filed a cross bill, in which he named Dr. William McCarthy of 805 East Sixty-third street. She denied the charges. Her daughter, Mrs. Maida Scott of 1341 Loyola avenue, testified against her in this case.

DENIKINE TAKES 11,000 CAPTIVES AND 52 CANNON

Cossacks Smash Flower of Red Cavalry.

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]

NOVOROSSIISSK, Feb. 18, via Paris, Feb. 28.—All attempts by bolsheviks to advance further on the front have been repulsed with heavy losses since the fall of Rostov just thirty days ago. Gen. Denikine's forces captured 11,000 bolsheviki prisoners, fifty-two pieces of artillery, and [illegible] machine guns from those bodies of the enemy which succeeded in crossing the Don river.

The Don and Kuban Cossacks three times have encountered the best bolsheviki cavalry, and have driven it back across the Menito river.

Morale Is High.

The morale of those troops, which have stood loyally by Denikine's standard on this front, is high. They can be depended on to fight to a finish, if necessary, knowing that now Crimea is invaded by bolsheviks there is no place left in Russia to which they can retreat.

Their greatest danger now seems to exist, not at the front, but in the rear, where large bands of greens, irregulars, have become emboldened and have cut the main line communication to the Denikine base here. Supplies for the front must now be routed by a roundabout single track railroad to [illegible].

The greens also have taken possession of the important part of Sautchee, on the Black sea, half way between Novorossiisk and Batoum. A warship has gone to try to shell them out.

Red Shortage of Food.

Refugees just arrived here from Rostov, who crossed the Don river on the ice and walked thirty miles before they reached the railroads, reports a shortage of food there, that city being bombarded by artillery of volunteers south of the Don. The university building in the main street is badly damaged.

Gen. Yougani Trubetskoi, one of the principal leaders of the revolution in Petrograd in 1917, died here today of spotted typhus. He was prominent in the cadet party. His articles and speeches in Moscow in sympathy with the political manifestations between [illegible] and 1905 created a senation at the time. He was considered by many Russians as their foremost philosopher. Perhaps the best known of his books is "Problems of Idealism."

Woman Who Asks That 100 Destitute Women and Children Be Sent to Join "Soviet Ark" Exiles.

HELEN M. TODD.
[Moffett Photo.]

Miss Helen Todd has 100 destitute women and children on her hands and she wishes to send them to Russia. They wish to go, too, she said, but the government won't let them.

Mrs. Todd, who was formerly deputy state factory inspector in Chicago and a worker at Hull house, is organizing a committee here to help her. The 100 women and children are the families of the Reds who were deported on the Buford last December.

After Miss Todd had spoken yesterday the Chicago Political Equality league adopted resolutions asking that the women and children be deported so they may join their relatives in Russia; urging immediate trial or release for alleged Reds held in jails throughout the country, and requesting a congressional investigation of the bolshevik situation in this country.

"Most of the families of the deported Russians were thrown out of their homes in New York," Miss Todd said. "Some women raised enough money to send them to Russia, but all our efforts at Washington have been in vain."

MYSTERY BLAST IN $50,000 LOOP FIRE STIRS QUIZ

Many Cut as Flying Glass Hits Crowd.

A mysterious explosion preceding a $50,000 fire in a building at 320-322 South Wabash avenue sprayed shattered window glass and splinters on hundreds of pedestrians during the rush hour last night and caused a hundred foot front wall to sway so violently that the police roped off the avenue for a block and declared it a No Man's land.

Scores of persons sustained minor cuts and Miss Binetta Bryson, 18 years old, of 3054 Wilson avenue, who was standing near a window when it blew out, was knocked down. She escaped serious injury. Street car traffic was suspended.

Inquiry Is Launched.

An investigation was started while the department was fighting the flames. The origin of the explosion and fire had not been disclosed up to a late hour, although every tenant in the building was questioned by the police and representatives from the fire attorney's office.

The only first hand account was obtained from Rudolph Klemperer, a salesman with the Manufacturers' Sample Furniture company, which occupies the first floor and basement.

"I was sitting near the front of the store," he said, "when I heard a deafening rumble. Then came the explosion. I instinctively closed my eyes. I was partially dazed. When I reopened them I saw that all our front windows had been blown out. The flames were shooting up through the rear of the store."

$20,000 Furniture Loss.

A. B. Davis, manager of the store, said he had just left to go with a customer to a branch store at 432 South Wabash avenue; he had scarcely left the building when the explosion occurred.

"We had just received a shipment of new furniture, not yet insured," he said. "This was in the basement and was destroyed. Our loss will easily reach $20,000. I left $500 in bills on my desk. When I returned the money was gone."

Bernard Rosenthal, who lives at 820 Montrose avenue, owns the store. He and Klemperer were taken to the central station and questioned by Capt. Morgan A. Collins.

A Beautiful Fur Wrap
If You Could Buy It at About Half Its Real Value?
IF SO,
Here Is Your Opportunity—
Providing You Act Promptly

SIMPLY because it is our policy not to carry merchandise from one season into the next we will place on sale tomorrow a considerable number of individual fur pieces from our stock at prices actually much less than the raw furs sold for in the recent great fur auctions.

To illustrate——consider the Eastern Mink wrap quoted at $3500.00. This garment was originally priced at $5000.00, based on the price of furs eight months ago. It contains 76 fine and beautifully matched Eastern Mink skins. Choice skins of this variety sold up to $75 per skin in the recent auctions. The answer is obvious. If you can use such a wrap this is the time to buy. The same general condition applies to every other item in this lot.

PRESIDENT'S JOB TOO BIG A ONE, SAYS M'CORMICK

Senator Explains Reasons for Budget Bureau.

Establishment of a budget bureau operating directly under the direction of the secretary of the treasury and in coöperation with the heads of the many government departments was advocated by United States Senator Medill McCormick in a talk at a luncheon of the City club yesterday. Senator McCormick vehemently declared that only such a system will bring the nation to real social progress.

Smiles were produced by the speaker when he declared that a president could not do all the work of the government.

President Can't Do All.

"Obviously, the president cannot personally direct the development of this fiscal political program," said Senator McCormick, "although he is required to determine the general principles. Nor, indeed, can any one man do it.

"Something more than a mere moral injunction to economize will be necessary if the scores of bureau chiefs are to be restrained in their demands upon the public treasury. The treasury must be defended by men equipped by experience and authorized by law to defend it.

"I hear some one ask why the president cannot discharge this duty, or why a director of the budget immediately subordinate to him cannot do it? The character of the president's office is such that already he is the most overburdened public official of the world.

President's Task Too Great.

"The incumbent of the presidential chair is broken down by his labors. Heretofore he has performed his tasks only by excluding himself as far as possible from contact with the multitude of his subordinates. Under his predecessor, the dispatch of the most pressing public business was often in arrears. Still before that time, it was only by devolving great responsibilities upon his subordinates that the chief executive of the nation found time for study and for the contact with the people which made Theodore Roosevelt the greatest president of our day.

"We know that some of the most useful servants of the government, whether members of the cabinet or long time technical servants of the departments who serve under all administrations, are so zealous in the development of their particular work that they constantly reach for more and more."

Explains Senate's Plan.

Senator McCormick then explained that it was the plan of the senate's subcommittee on the national budget to have the proposed budget bureau, composed of experts, and under the authority of the secretary of the treasury, work out the problems of departmental appropriations with the department chiefs, rather than taking the matter to the president. The secretary of the treasury, he said, would then have the authority restored to him as exercised by Alexander Hamilton.

"With this authority," continued the senator, "the secretary of the treasury would have a role exactly analogous, if not identical, to that of every other minister of finance in the world. He would become a minister of finance; he would survey the whole field of income and outgo. He would subordinate to him the commissioner of revenue and the commissioner of the budget. He would be able as the facts developed to counsel with his colleagues in the cabinet; to measure the measure of estimates of expenditure against the actuality of revenues as they develop. In short, he would be able to cut the suit to meet the cloth."

OFFICIAL COUNT MAY BRING CONTESTS IN ALDERMANIC RACE

ALD. JOHN H. LYLE in the Thirty-second ward secured a majority of only 51 votes by the official count completed yesterday by the board of election commissioners. The police returns had given him a majority of 497. There is understood to be extreme likelihood of a contest, which, if successful, would force a second election in the ward in April. In the Eighth ward there is a chance of a contest that may be brought by Ernest M. Cross against Thomas Green for second place. Green leads Cross by 20 votes on the official figures. In the Twelfth ward Henry Sonneschein is 5 votes behind Ald. J. I. Novak for second place and may start a contest. The official proclamation of the results will be made tomorrow.

Barnes for Liberal "Dry" Plank in G. O. P. Platform

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—William Barnes, former member of the Republican national committee, and State Senator Henry M. Sage, who have been recommended by the Republican district committee as delegates to the Republican national convention from the Twenty-eighth congressional district, issued a statement today favoring a platform declaration "providing for a liberal revision of the prohibition enforcement act."

The Democratic national convention at San Francisco that starts June 28 will be just as much "uninstructed," and possibly more so, than the Republican convention that will have concluded its sessions at the Coliseum during the first week in June.

This seems to have been made evident by the action of the Iowa state convention of the Democrats at Des Moines Wednesday, which was held under the personal eye of the new secretary of agriculture, Edwin T. Meredith. Iowa sent an uninstructed delegation of twenty-six—sixteen of the delegates and alternates being women—to Frisco.

Competent judges of Democratic national politics say that the Des Moines convention was the most significant political development of the week. Their theory is that through Secretary Meredith, President Wilson's intentions as to a third term, would have been disclosed then, if they are to be made known prior to the assembling of the Democratic national delegates.

Give No Indication.

The Wilson administration was indorsed, and nothing more. Secretary Meredith and Wilbur W. Marsh, who is the national Democratic treasurer collecting the 1920 campaign fund, said or did nothing to indicate any preference. There was much talk on the side of Secretary Meredith as a possible dark horse candidate.

Next important, nationally, probably, was the letter sent by Herbert Hoover to the chairman of the Georgia Democratic state committee, to whom a Hoover nominating petition had been presented as a candidate for president in the strictly party handled direct primary that will be held there April 20. The Georgia committee put it up to Hoover to say that he is a Democrat. Mr. Hoover said that he never had been a Democrat prior to the war and indicated that he wanted his name withdrawn, which was the official action of the committee.

Liquor Issue Raised.

The New York Democratic state convention adopted resolutions demanding repeal of the prohibition amendment. This was followed in Illinois by the formal inauguration by the avowed wets of a campaign to give to Gov. Edwards of New Jersey the Democratic presidential preference vote in Illinois on April 13. An Edwards petition was filed in Michigan. Attorney General Palmer's petition was filed in Michigan, as well as in Georgia.

With the Republicans, thirty-seven national convention delegates have been elected during the week. Two only have been instructed, the two from the Philippine islands, who are tied in to Gen. Wood.

Interest in Ohio.

Republican interest has centered largely in Ohio, where the time limit for filing petitions for delegates expired Friday night. Gen. Wood now contests for delegates as well as for the preferential vote. Wood delegates are pledged to him for first choice and for James R. Garfield for second choice. Harding delegates are for the senator for first choice and for Senator Hiram Johnson for second. Gen. Wood's managers announced that he will be a contender in the Illinois direct primaries against Gov. Lowden for the preferential vote. Whether he will fight for Wood-instructed delegates will be determined later.

Missouri District G. O. P. Asks Repeal of Dry Law

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 28.—National prohibition was denounced and congress was asked to repeal the eighteenth amendment in a resolution adopted here today at the Tenth district Republican convention, called to elect delegates to the national convention at Chicago.

The convention approved the Lodge reservations to the league of nations covenant.

Two uninstructed delegates were elected to the national convention.

ILLINOIS DRYS TO ENTER BRYAN AS CANDIDATE

Plan to Pit Him Against Gov. Edwards.

It is better than an even bet that William J. Bryan's name will be filed before the time limit expires Thursday as a Democratic candidate for president in the Illinois preferential primary.

This, undoubtedly, will be the answer of the downstate drys to the formally declared policy of the wets to present the name of Gov. Edwards of New Jersey for the Illinois instructions.

Active negotiations are under way, it is definitely known, in which opponents of Roger C. Sullivan are factors, so far as the Chicago end of it is concerned, to file a Bryan petition.

Can't Withdraw Name.

Under the Illinois law, it is problematic whether Mr. Bryan could force the withdrawal of his name, once filed, even if he wanted to do so. There is the strongest sort of a hunch obtaining among Chicago Democrats who were in close conference with Mr. Bryan during his recent visit to Chicago that Mr. Bryan will not object. Local and state politics, of course, will be closely involved in whatever results between now and Thursday.

The Republican presidential managers are as much exercised over the Illinois situation apparently as are the Democrats, who see the prearranged harmony program about to go on the skids.

No Republican Wet.

Gen. Wood, on a platform of law enforcement, regardless of what the law requires; Gov. Lowden, having signed the Illinois search and seizure bill, and Senator Johnson, having voted in the senate for the prohibition amendment, according to the views expressed yesterday along presidential row, are in no position to take advantage of the Illinois issue as presented by the wets. There is no Republican wet candidate in sight, unless it be McDonough of Michigan, the state's attorney who fought Maj. Dalrymple to a standstill.

WANTED: A MILLION REAL OLD FASHIONED, HOME LOVING GIRLS

Wanted—one million old fashioned girls! The World Wide Guild Girls of the Northern Baptists have started a campaign to "restore spiritual sanity and modesty to their sex," to oust the rouge stick as the scepter of young womanhood, and give the family hymnbook its place.

EDITH DIMMOCK.

The girls have made up their minds that a part of the world's unrest is due to the disappearance of the old fashioned girl with an old fashioned fondness for home, children, beauty, and religion.

Miss Edith Dimmock of 1507 East Sixty-first street has been selected by the nominating committee of the Phi Phi chapter of the guild at the Woodlawn Baptist church as president.

"Girls of today are making a big mistake in thinking they can get along without the church," she said yesterday. "We are going to conduct a campaign which we hope will result in making the church the young people's community center, where girls can enjoy club life such as most men have."

ROPER TO IGNORE STATE LAWS ON PROHIBITION

To Prosecute All Violators of Federal Act.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—All persons found violating the federal prohibition enforcement act will be proceeded against to the "limit of the law," irrespective of any state statutes legalizing the sale of liquors, it was announced today by Commissioner Roper of the internal revenue bureau.

Mr. Roper's ruling resulted from the bill now pending before the New Jersey legislature legalizing the manufacture and sale of beer containing 3½ per cent of alcohol.

As to Horner Stock Transfers.

Liquor owners may transfer their stocks legally from one dwelling to another only when there is an actual change of residence, and then only under special permit, according to an announcement today by the internal revenue bureau, issued to correct published reports that owners of two or more dwellings might move their stock from one to the other unhampered.

"Only where a person actually changes his dwelling may he remove his liquor under special permit to transport with other household effects to his new permanent residence, providing such transfer is not in conflict with state laws," the statement said.

"This ruling is not construed to mean, for example, that a person who owns a shooting lodge in Maine, a winter residence in Florida, and a private dwelling in New York may transport liquor for beverage purposes from one to another. Liquor so transported and the vehicles in which it is conveyed are subject to seizure. The person transporting it is subject to arrest."

New Jersey to Go Ahead.

New Brunswick, N. J., Feb. 28.—Prediction that the 3.50 per cent beer bill would go to the New Jersey senate Monday night and be adopted and signed by Gov. Edwards within twenty-four hours afterward, notwithstanding Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper's statement, was made here today by Thomas Brown, senate minority leader.

POLITICAL NOTES

Gov. Lowden will open his speaking campaign in Minnesota Tuesday at his birthplace, Sunrise. This visit is made at the particular request of his boyhood friends. Tuesday night he speaks at a Minneapolis mass meeting, and Wednesday he speaks at St. Paul, at noon. Thursday night he is at Mankato, and Friday night at Winona.

Senator George H. Moses, Washington manager of Gen. Wood's campaign, came to Chicago yesterday and promptly issued the claim that the general will have 300 votes on the first ballot at the Coliseum next June. "No rival will be within 100 votes of him," Moses said. "We expect in every preferential primary state where there is no favorite son that Wood will show a clean pair of heels to the whole bunch."

Wood headquarters announced that Walter Clyde Jones, former state senator and once a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, has taken a place on the Illinois Wood committee. This committee meets today at the Congress hotel to determine whether or not to start Wood delegates in Illinois.

Thursday will be the last day for filing petitions for national convention delegates for ward and precinct committeemen in Illinois.

'REVOLT' VERDICT LEFT WITH U. S. BY MICHIGAN

State Abandons Inquiry; Quiz for Dalrymple.

Iron River, Mich., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—The state of Michigan today withdrew from the investigation of the Iron River "whisky rebellion."

Following conferences between George F. Cummerow, special agent of the department of justice in charge of this district, representing Attorney General Palmer, and J. E. Converse, special assistant attorney general of the state, it was decided that the federal inquiry, being of a more exhaustive nature, would more readily establish the facts in the case. Mr. Converse agreed that the state authorities would abide by the verdict of the federal authorities.

Mr. Cummerow's report will be filed with District Attorney Byron H. Walker in Grand Rapids next Tuesday. Simultaneously it will be forwarded to Washington for action.

New Boom for McDonough.

In State's Attorney Martin McDonough's office the pile of communications, telegrams, and letters has reached formidable proportions. A dozen communities have offered him their support in a campaign for governor.

"I wish to forget that there ever was such a happening as the 'rum revolt' stir," he said tonight. "I have all the notoriety I want and am glad to get back to the pursuit of my normal occupation of practicing law. We have had our hour in the spotlight and our act is over. Let the light now switch to some other and more truthful portrayal."

STORM LOWERS HERE

The lowering clouds of official disapproval about the "grand headquarters" of the anti-rum crusaders in Chicago became more menacing yesterday.

Maj. A. V. Dalrymple, leader of the Michigan "whisky rebellion," had nothing to say, and H. M. Gaylord, assistant commissioner of national prohibition, reported "nothing to be made public" regarding his investigation and departed. But it was freely predicted the storm is to break soon and that it may change the entire complexion of prohibition enforcement methods in the central states.

A definite rebuke already has come in the form of the department of justice announcement that no liquor raids can be made without federal warrants.

Maj. Dalrymple, determined to carry his fight against State's Attorney McDonough and other Iron county officials into federal court, during the day prepared a full account of his side of the battle for the department of justice. The report included pictures of the Iron River store where the wine was taken, of the Dalrymple squad pouring the wine into the streets, and other views of the "invasion."

The major urged the immediate issuing of federal warrants for McDonough and other county officers, charging them with "flagrant violation of the prohibition laws" and interference with a federal officer.

PAST AND PRESENT

Comparison of the Dotted Line with the Firmer Profile Shows What Happened Under the Knife.

PAUL BIESE.

THEY are not wearing them this season—the dear old bay windows, the corporeal oriels, whose Gothic grandeur and Gargantuan dimensions so oft intrigued the eye in depictions of ye head of ye soulless corporation.

Alas, poor, or rather, fat, waistlines! In these radical days of anti this and anti that, it behooves one, like Cassius, to have a lean and hungry look. To be thin is le dernier. To be obese—ah! obese!

Paul Biese, the subject of this brochure, had brooded so long on the unseasonable expansion of his waistline—from 40 to 48, to 50, to 56 ad. lib.—that he could scarcely conceal his eagerness when, having been taken to a hospital because of an accident, a surgeon asked him if he would like to have it reduced.

"Let's go," said Mr. Biese.

So the surgeon slipped the ether mask over him, Mr. Biese fell asleep, the surgeon wielded his knife, and the bay window disappeared.

"And now I only weigh 250 pounds," said Mr. Biese last night. "He took off fifty. Glad? I'll tell the world nobody loves a fat man. Say, it got so I couldn't see my feet, and when I tried to squeeze through a crowded street car I always got stuck. I'll bet more conductors have bawled me out for not 'moving forward, please,' than any man in Chicago. The only thing I miss is a place to put my hands. I used to fold them over the old belt buckle when I wanted to think."

Mr. Biese directs the orchestra in a north shore moving picture theater.

2 CARLOADS OF PANACEA FOR THIRST SEIZED

Find 55 Per Cent Alcohol in the "Essence."

One of the few remaining panaceas for Chicago's prohibition malady fell under the hand of Uncle Sam yesterday.

Federal raids on drug stores, wholesale houses, and railroad team tracks netted hundreds of neatly corked bottles of "Hein Fong Essence," yesterday. It has been a very popular "patent medicine." Under the tests of federal chemists it assayed 55 per cent alcohol, or the equivalent of a 110 proof liquor.

United States Deputy Marshal Henry Deike seized about two carloads of the liquid, on libel warrants issued by the bureau of foods. The supply, for the most part, was seized as it arrived from Detroit in freight shipments. It will be held for federal court disposition.

According to prohibition investigators, the "Essence" has become so popular in Chicago that it has been swept from the shelves of scores of drug stores. The Detroit manufacturer, said to be dealing exclusively in the medicine, has hundreds of orders awaiting his goods here.

"It's a great little medicine," said the deputy marshal, "and the 'reformed drinkers' of Chicago know it. They have been buying as much of it as they could, paying about 75 cents a pint bottle, and then distilling the alcohol out. This has been accomplished by filtering the fluid through cotton. The essence of herbs could be separated and the 'kick' collected.

"These two carloads represent about all of the medicine still at large and some of the old timers who have been using it for their morning's morning are due for real disappointment."

FIGHTING PARSON TO DEFY POLICE AND FOES TODAY

Picks Love as Topic of Battle Talk.

Defying the opposing faction, the Rev. C. S. Marsolf will appear in the pulpit of the Presbyterian church of North Chicago this morning and preach.

The church board has demanded that he resign pending action by the Chicago presbytery tomorrow, and he has been served with a notice by Chief of Police Hemmick of North Chicago to vacate the manse by April 1. This action also originated with the church board.

Elders, deacons, and trustees declared he would not be permitted to occupy the pulpit; that if he attempted to do so a police officer would arrest him on a charge of disturbing the peace. However, he will first be warned and afforded a chance to leave the church quietly, the church board announced.

Love to Be His Topic.

"I will speak Sunday morning," he said yesterday, "on the subject, 'What Manner of Love?' You might say my sermon will be a question in every way—a question as to whether I shall be able to deliver it and as to whether such a sermon will do much good.

"I have enemies in the church, but my duty tomorrow is in the pulpit.

"I don't know whether I have a single friend in the congregation. In fact, I don't know whether I will have an audience.

Rehearsal Starts Row.

The trouble is said to have had its origin last December, when Miss Laura Bergen, a church worker, arranged for a Sunday afternoon rehearsal of a Christmas play. Sunday School Superintendent Henry J. Braasch was opposed to rehearsal on the Sabbath, Mr. Marsolf said. He wasn't. He couldn't see where it would be a violation of biblical ethics to rehearse a play exemplifying the coming of Christ on Sunday.

Mr. Marsolf served overseas with the 310th machine gun battalion.

BEYOND COMPETITION

An unusual editorial, published in The Music Trade Review of January 31, 1920, entitled "Modern Merchandising Methods"

An expression of opinion by our salesmen concerning our competitors or their goods is positively forbidden.

STEGER & SONS
Piano Mfg. Company

CURIOUS it is that no one has noticed it before, but the visitor who chances to glance around at the elevator in the retail offices of the Steger & Sons Piano Mfg. Co. in this burg of ours will, if he or she looks carefully enough, perceive a statement or legend which sets forth that salesmen employed by the company are strictly forbidden to use the names of competing goods for purposes of comparison.

The little notice is not very conspicuous in looks, but it is very significant of the spirit which governs the industry these days. When the present Commentator came into the industry it was considered to be impossible to sell a piano at all save by telling lies about it and its competitors. In those days the public rather expected to be cheated and, not unnaturally, often realized its expectations.

Where the purchase of a piece of goods rests on a name or on a reputation expressed in a name, the temptation to use the comparative method of selling is almost overwhelming. If the salesman does not want to use it the prospective purchaser is almost certain to introduce it. It is, therefore, really self-sacrificing to forbid this method and to insist that salesmen shall refuse to draw comparisons and shall even say that they are so forbidden.

Yet, of course, no sounder policy could be devised. To insist that the talk be all about the goods which the prospective purchaser is considering at the moment is to imply that these goods are what the French call hors concours, beyond competition. The effect may be perhaps to astonish, and even to annoy occasionally; but the sort of person who would be annoyed at the assumption of this high attitude is not the sort of person wanted as a purchaser of pianos.

The Stegers are right about this, exactly right. It is good to see this sort of sound affirmation in our merchandising methods. One is tempted to wonder when the entire trade will pursue the same course.

RECORD OF TRIAL SHEDS LIGHT ON DUNN IMMUNITY

"Sonny's" Pals Tell of Burke Murder.

A transcript of the testimony taken at "Smiling Jack" O'Brien's trial for the murder of Detective Sergeant Richard J. Burke revealed yesterday several intriguing passages.

It was disclosed that only one witness identified O'Brien positively as Burke's slayer—Michael Conlon, the bartender at James O'Brien's saloon, 2365 South Halsted street, where the tragedy was enacted.

Conlon said O'Brien fired at Burke four or five times. O'Brien admitted shooting once, but he asserted that three more shots had come from the direction of William ("Slippery Sonny") Dunn. William ("Spot") Kelly testified that he had seen Dunn reach toward a pocket, as if for a revolver, just before "Smiling Jack's" weapon was discharged.

Dunn Available for Arrest.

Dunn was then in the courtroom, within the law's reach; he had himself been a witness only a short time before. Yet the record does not disclose that the state availed itself of O'Brien's and Kelly's evidence otherwise than to charge Kelly with perjury.

For "Slippery Sonny" had been to the state's attorney's office three days after the shooting, and had exonerated himself, according to Assistant State's Attorney Marvin E. Barnhart.

The state accepted Dunn's assurance of his own innocence, as it accepted similar assurances by Conlon, Patrick Flaherty, George G. Thomas, and Patrick O'Brien, who were either in the saloon or members of Dunn's cabaret party on the night the policeman was killed.

Yet when it was confronted with the necessity of placing these men on the stand, the prosecution refused to stand sponsor for the evidence.

Hoyne Called One Spectator.

The only spectator of the affray whom the state's attorney called in his own behalf was John ("Pot Eye") O'Shea, and O'Shea vouchsafed that he didn't "know who did the shooting."

Of all the men immediately concerned, Kelly was the only one who refused to make a statement to the prosecutor's aids, and he was the only one indicted with O'Brien.

The record shows, however, that when he appeared in court he gave a more detailed statement of the tragedy than most of the witnesses who were set free. The others, including George Thomas, a taxicab driver, from whom Mr. Barnhart claims to have obtained his original account of the affair, became evasive and failed to sustain in many important instances their assertions to the prosecutor in private.

Thomas' Testimony.

Regarding the quarrel in the saloon, the abstract of the testimony quotes Thomas as follows:

"The shots were fired three or four seconds after the officer struck Dunn. I could not tell where the shots were coming from—I only saw the flash. I don't know if the fellow that did the shooting is the fellow that spoke to 'Sonny' Dunne about $10. (The man had been identified otherwise as O'Brien.)

"There was a couple of other fellows there, two or three of them, in their shirt sleeves, and then the flash came; it appeared in front of them.

"I told Mr. Barnhart here . . . I did not see no man draw a gun, did not see nobody shoot; I just seen the flash as it appeared to those fellows."

He said he had told the grand jury the shots "appeared to come" from a man who answered O'Brien's description.

"Slippery Sonny" told the jury:

"After he (Burke) hit me I heard a shot. I don't remember if I was just knocked down on the floor when the shot was fired or not. One shot is all I heard. Then I got up and walked out."

Conlon's Testimony.

Conlon testified:

"He (O'Brien) walked over and pulled out a gun and commenced shooting. It was in quick succession, four or five times. No more than one man shot to my knowledge."

Kelly's evidence was:

"Burke (after hitting Dunn) turned around and pulled out his revolver. I did not see O'Brien pull a gun. I ran to the front door. I heard a shot. When I was coming back there was three or four shots in succession. They came from the back (where Dunn was lying). It was kind of dark. After Dunn fell down he turned and faced O'Brien and pulled something out of his pocket, I think it was a gun, and he said, 'I will get you, too.'"

The witness added that as O'Brien closed with Burke he ran.

O'Brien swore:

"I fired one shot. Dunn was on the floor at that time. After I shot I heard three shots in succession. I did not know who was shooting."

"To lay aside the question of O'Brien's guilt or innocence," said Frank A. McDonnell, the executed man's counsel, "it remains that if Kelly was an accessory to Burke's murder so were all the other men in the saloon, with the exception of Conlon, perhaps; and they should have been indicted just as Kelly was."

Miss Margaret Peacock, the complainant in an automobile larceny case in which "Sonny" has jumped his bond, was never acquainted with the fugitive, as a recent issue of THE TRIBUNE might have implied. Miss Peacock and "Sonny" so far have not even met in court. Neither the state's attorney's detectives, the sheriff's office, nor the police have been able to lay hands on the fugitive, whom they have been seeking since Feb. 19.

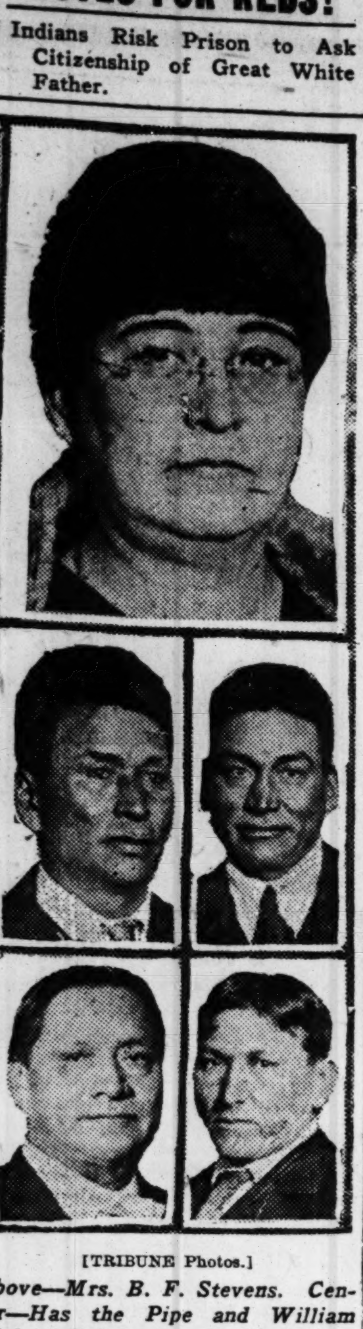
Indians Risk Prison to Ask Citizenship of Great White Father.



[TRIBUNE Photos.]

Four Indians passed through Chicago yesterday on their way to Washington to petition congress for full citizenship. The delegation left the Fort Belknap reservation without a pass and faces arrest and punishment upon its return.

The delegates are Has The Pipe and William Bigby, representing the Assiniboin tribe; and George Cochran and Mrs. B. F. Stevens of the Gros Ventres tribe.

They conferred at the Hotel La Salle with Dr. Carlos Montezuma, an Arizona Apache who has been a practicing physician in Chicago for more than fifty years. They will ask abolition of the Indian bureau and the discharge of federal reservation agents, who, they claim, are "despots fattening their private purses at the expense of the Indians." They will demand freedom and full enfranchisement.

McCLELLAN
Covered by U. S. and Foreign Patents

This Page is Addressed To You Market Owners, Grocers, Restaurant Men, Florists, Apartment House & Home Owners & All Other Users of Ice.

You are not getting full value for your money if you use ice for refrigeration—
You are not using the modern, efficient, sanitary, safe and certain refrigerating method if you use ice—
You will never overcome ice worries as long as you continue to use ice.

Plain words! Yes, sir, but they're true. When your competitor finds a more economical method of doing business, you must follow suit or quit. Many of your competitors are installing McClellan Refrigerating Machines—Why not you? We are now making immediate deliveries.

Talking about ice and its draw-backs is a waste of time; they're common knowledge, you know them. There are your bills for ice getting bigger every year—the losses you suffered when your refrigerator "went dry" last summer and no ice-man in sight—the many dollars' worth of "meat trimmings" and other costly foodstuffs you threw away on account of the damp moist air in your refrigerator. No need to talk about all this except to tell you that

The McCLELLAN Refrigerating Machine Will Eliminate Every Refrigerating Problem You Have and Do It at Less Cost Than You Pay for Ice

Prove it? Hundreds of installations during the last five years in all kinds of businesses and homes——hundreds of voluntary testimonial letters from satisfied users in all parts of the United States. Every purchaser of a McClellan is protected because Every McClellan is sold with Our Iron-Bound Guarantee to Give Perfect Satisfaction or Money Back.

The McClellan is made in six sizes suitable for all purposes where 10 pounds to two tons of ice are being used per day. Produces refrigeration that is perfect for all purposes at less than one-third the cost of ice. Sold on time payments if desired.

With the McClellan you are master of every refrigerating problem. You have perfect refrigeration always. No damp air, no extra labor of any kind. Its operation is as easy, safe and certain as the turning on of your electric lights. You can buy large supplies of foodstuffs in advance when the price is low and hold them, without loss, for more profitable sales. You can forget all about refrigeration worries—daily and Sunday—because you are protected against loss by "McClellan Refrigeration Insurance."

McClellan's Refrigeration Experts

are familiar with all the problems of refrigeration. Their service is at your disposal. A letter, wire, phone call or the coupon will do.

A table of costs showing what you pay for "McClellan Worryless Refrigeration" as compared with Ice Refrigeration:

Ice Bills Averaging per Month	McClellan Refrigeration Averages per Month
$40 to $80	$10 to $20
$80 to $150	$20 to $36

Interested in saving $30 to $114 per month on your ice bill? Figure out how much a McClellan will save you. Allow eleven cents per hundred—subtract that price from the price you are now paying—the result will startle you. And we are ready to prove to you on the basis of hundreds of installations that your savings will pay for a McClellan in a mighty short time. Phone, or send in coupon!

JACK ON VERGE OF BEING A BUM FEW YEARS AGO

Derks Tells of Crucial Era in Champ's Youth.

THE LIFE AND ADVENTURES OF JACK DEMPSEY

CHAPTER XV.—JOHN DERKS DISCOURSES ON THE FIGHTING HEART.

BY EYE WITNESS.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 28.—John C. Derks is a Dutchman once removed. He smokes a pipe, hates cant, wears spectacles, reads philosophy, is kind to copy boys, and has seen a great deal of life on both the rough and the seamy sides.

Derks is sporting editor of the Salt Lake Tribune, and when he has something special to get off his mind he also does an editorial for that journal.

He thinks Haeckel the greatest philosopher of our time, and in his cautious way is inclined to agree with the verdict of other experts that Jack Dempsey is "the greatest fighter of all time"—but in his characteristic way he modifies that statement, and makes it really mean something, by adding: "Of course, they mean by 'all time' modern time, and by 'modern time' I mean from the match between Corbett and Sullivan at New Orleans in 1892. In other words, I mean from the development of the modern perfected blow directed to the vital spot.

Dempsey Has Fighting Heart.

"Whether or not Jack Dempsey is the greatest fighter since the bouts of Homer, it is indubitably a fact that he is a wonderful fighter. To a degree unknown since John L. Sullivan he possesses what in the vernacular is called 'the fighting heart.'

"Persons who do not know Dempsey have said that he is yellow. Nothing could be farther from the truth. He certainly is a man without physical fear, if physical fear can be differentiated from moral fear."

John Derks has the gift of satire, and he is as methodical as the justice of heaven—both valuable attributes in his line. When I asked him if he would rough out for me some notes of his views of Jack Dempsey as man and artist—with sidelights on slacking—he looked placidly through his spectacles and said yes, he would. What I got in twenty-four hours was [illegible] typewritten words on the pros and cons of the slacker case, eighteen carefully dated clippings, four addresses, and 2,000 words on the life and public services of Jack Dempsey. You could have gone into court and tried a case with it.

Gives It Right to "Eye."

But I thought John was better and pithier in his talk than in his written works, so what I give you in this chapter is more what he said than what he prepared.

From some sporting men I had got raw, cruel stuff—which, however, is legitimately enough a part of the story about Jack Dempsey, and from the family I got the other extreme, and that, too, was grist for my mill. But from John Derks I got the golden mean.

He has watched Dempsey in his home town for six years with a cold but not unappreciative eye. That was why I listened with great heed to all John Derks said—he could be so detached and yet so penetrating.

Lose the Bunk Psychology.

There is a lot of grandiose psychology, for which the other name is bunk, written about prize fighters when laymen put their pens to the subject, and one of the first things John Derks did was to beg me to keep off that sort of thing. "It's ridiculous," he said. "Jack London tried it at the Reno ringside in 1910, when Jeffries and Johnson fought. If anybody could have done it, he could, but the stuff wasn't there. He wrote it from his inner consciousness. It was ridiculous.

"These fighting fellows have no horizon outside the physical life. They're not out with other fellows and they have no outside life any more than circus people. Dempsey is like his kind. He abhorred vaudeville, disliked circus life, and the motion picture game bores him. When he came to see me after his fight with Willard and the close of his theatrical and circus engagements, he said, 'I'm a fighter, and I want to fight. I don't want to act. I'm no actor. The quicker we get through with this picture making and get back in the ring where I belong, the better pleased I'll be.'

Boxers Don't Understand Public.

"A curious thing about these fighters is that public as their lives are they have no instinct for the public. With them the public is the enemy and the sucker, and always expected to take misusage like a lamb. Corbett is perhaps the exception to this rule.

"As for all this superstitious 'psychology of prize fighting' stuff—that begins and ends with the fact that successful prize fighting is based on an animal instinct combined with and given direction by training and experience. Fighters do develop the faculty of calculation—just as Dempsey has to a marvelous degree—but when Jack Dempsey goes into the ring he doesn't go in thinking Jack London thoughts. His one thought is to get in the blow and his one emotion is the passion to combat."

"Doesn't he have any qualms or apprehensions?" I asked.

What a Fighter Thinks About.

"No," said John Derks, adding, "anxieties, yes. He is anxious to learn is that broken thumb on his opponent's right that he got two years ago still worrying him? How is his left? Does he shift with his right foot? Hence it is that they have

In the Wake of the News

A POTENTIAL BOLSHEVIK.

I read that wealthy Al K. Hall and rich O. U. Steugh-Bumme
Are wintering in Cuba and are making matters hum
Among the bars and at the tracks and in the ringside seats,
While I'm here frozen to the job to congregate the eats.
These favored sons of fortune never worked and never will,
Yet of the merry things in life they've always had their fill,
And when the gay reformers won, their lips derision curled—
Which makes me figger there just ain't no justice in this world.

As long as I could get my shot of hootch and stack of suds
I could forgive Friends Bumme and Al and kindred idle bloods;
And if I took sufficient drams imagination stirred,
And I was quite as rich and rare as any Gold Coast bird.
But now that I'm cold sober it's fact that I must face:
No boxers and no ponies and no booze the blues to chase;
What's more, no jack to take me down where nightly I'd be swirled
In alcoholic sway—there ain't no justice in this world.

When summer romps in, tennis, ball, and golf will help to cheer me,
And I can frolic in the lake with mermaids frisking near me.
Yet when the Giants swat the Sox no rickey will console,
And if I'm trimmed by Pomeroy, O, where's the nineteenth hole?
But old O. U. and Al can sail outside the three mile zone
And bathe in bottled happiness beyond the Land of Bone;
While I, poor fish, must flounder round in drinks o'er which is furled

GUY F. LEE.

From 12 to 2.

When the Iroquois theater fire horror closed all the other playhouses of Chicago for a period of several weeks it went hard with the actor persons in Chicago. Free lunch counters received a tremendous play from the men, but the chorus ladies, especially those who followed the straight and narrow, had tough going and often missed the nosebag.

At that time the late Tom Hanton conducted a saloon on Randolph street with an entrance from Clark street. His sandwiches received a big play from those resting their feet on the brass rail.

Every day Hanton was missing from 12 to 2 from the hub of activities at the front. When friends sought him in the rear he was surly and unlike the usual jovial Tom. Often his greeting to old friends was: "Getthehell away from here."

Not until long afterward was it known that Tom had opened into one several of the rear winerooms where soup, roast beef, coffee, and the usual dinner accompaniments were served free to any actresses who wished to enter unseen from the Clark street entrance.

And Tom, knowing Chicago, stood sentinel to keep any one from trying to make dates with them while they enjoyed his quietly-given charity.

Advice Doesn't Cost Anything.

Did you ever visit the business-like fellow
Whose office is naught but a brilliant display
Of slogans and signs painted blue, green, and yellow,
Like "Always Keep Smiling" and "My Busy Day"?

Surrounded by platitudes, gosh but he's happy,
Efficiency's written all over his brow.
He points to the excerpts, "Come on, make it snappy,"
And right underneath it the trite "Do it now."

Some lessons, perhaps, from the texts that are thundered
May have some effect on the people they reach,
But as for the sophists, I often have wondered
If they ever practice the sermons they preach.

Referred to Big Four.

Dear Harvey: Lissen to here. I'm a postal clerk. I been handicapped that way for ten year comin' next July. 'Twasn't so bad till last July. Now they ain't nothing to stay for. This year alone 866 wimmin has ast me to fill out their money orders for them; 865 had left their glasses at home. I didn't find out what ailed the other one, so they gave me ten demerits. But that ain't no fault of your'n, Harvey. What I want to know is why they don't sentence this Kaiser person from Germany to ten years in a second handed postoffice? Why don't they? Why and the hell ain't some other vacuum sweeper thought of this before?

How About Larvae!

Friend Harvey, you have been so kind
I feel that I should take
My harp in hand and to your work
A lyric ballad make.

'Twas only last week I composed
A song to your friend, Lee,
Congratulating him upon
His soulful harmony.

I'd gladly do the same for you,
For you're deserving—very,
But for your name there is no rhyme
In my vocabulary.

MECHANIC TAKES A $10,000 WHIRL AT LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 28.—Jimmy Murphy, a mechaniclain, made his initial western appearance as a driver at the wheel of a Deusenberg today and won the Los Angeles speedway 250 mile opening race and $10,000 first money. Murphy came from behind when Joe Boyer, who had been in front for forty-four laps, was forced out of the race by a broken connecting rod.

Murphy's time for the 250 miles was 2 hours 26 minutes 17.60 seconds, an average speed of 103.2 miles an hour. Ira Vail, in a Philbrin, was second, capturing $6,000 prize money, and Joe Thomas, in a Frontenac, third, winning $3,000.

A thrill was sent through the stands when Art Klein's Peugeot skidded on the turn. The car rolled over, but neither Klein nor his mechanician was hurt. Both walked back to the pits.

The surprise was the failure of Ralph De Palma in a Ballot to finish in the money. He finished, but well down the list. De Palma seemed to have a great deal of tire trouble, and was in the pits every few laps. Several times he changed two tires on a single stop.

Eddie Pullen, in a Richards, drove a consistent race, and was in front of the field for 170 laps, when he dropped out because of engine trouble.

Among other drivers who were forced out by mechanical trouble were Ralph Mulford, Cliff Durant, and Roscoe Sarles. Sarles, however, finished the race in the place of Driver Ken Goodson and won fourth place.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 28.—Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, and Jack Kearns, his manager, expect to furnish bonds Monday before the United States commissioner here on the indictments returned against them in San Francisco charging conspiracy to evade the selective draft law and actual evasion of the draft, according to a statement tonight by Kearns.

"We have been informed by our attorneys that the indictments have been mailed from San Francisco to the United States marshal here, and that we would be notified when they arrive," Kearns said. "Each of us will be ready with a bond of $1,000."

ILLINI TOSSERS WHIPPED AGAIN BY MAROON FIVE

Chicago Within One Gamo of Big Ten Title.

The University of Chicago basketball team climbed within one step of the conference basketball championship by defeating Illinois, 27 to 20, in a thrilling battle last night. With 2,700 wild fans packing Bartlett gym as it never has been jammed before, and hundreds battling in the street for admission, it was one of the greatest days in the history of Chicago basketball.

A victory over Minnesota in the Bartlett gym next Saturday or at Wisconsin the following Friday will give the Maroons the title over Purdue. Chicago's victory was the fifth over Illinois in six starts in the last three years.

Both Play Defensive Game.

It was a defensive battle from the start, with both teams chasing the dangerous scoring men all over the floor. The ball moved up and down the floor with lightning changes, both teams spurting in their passing games.

One of the features was the work of the back guards, Vail smothering Vollmer on the short shots of the lanky Maroon forward. Crisler of the Maroons put up an equally brilliant game against Carney, the sensational center of the Indians, and Birkhoff and Walquist ran several miles chasing each other's dribbling. Halladay was the big surprise, the Maroon center playing his greatest offensive game of the season.

Maroons Take Big Lead.

The Maroons started with a wild spurt and with the first half nearly finished led, 13 to 3. Illinois braced and trailed, 17 to 8, at the intermission. In the middle of the second half the visitors spurted, closing the gap to a four point margin, but cracked just before the finish, and the Maroons were raining the ball at the ring when the gun flashed.

Two hours before the game there were a hundred fans in line waiting for the general admission sale to open, and one hour before the whistle the line was two blocks long outside of the gym. Lineup:

FINAL.

Oak Park	158 5-6	Champaign	15 1-3
U. High	140¾	Lake View	14
Hyde Park	106 5-6	Lane	11
La Grange	40 7-12	Harrison	5½

Coach Glenn Thistlewaite's well balanced Oak Park high school senior and junior track teams won the first annual high school indoor track series held by the University of Chicago. In the four Saturday morning meets the suburban school piled up 158 5-6 points. U. High was a good second with 140¾, and Hyde Park third with 106 5-6.

Steger Individual Star.

Individual honors went to Herbert Steger, the Oak Park sprinter, hurdler, shotputter and three jump star. His 49 points gave him a margin for first place over Jones of U. High, who totaled 43 in the sprints and hurdles. Coffin of Oak Park was third, with 38 points, and Kimball of Deerfield fourth with 24.

U. High won the senior events yesterday morning by a two point lead over Oak Park, but the advantage piled up by the suburbanites was too great for Coach Monilaw's athletes to overcome. Oak Park, Hyde Park and U. High tied for the total points in the last events of the junior series, but the early Oak Park total, added to the points scored by the village senior stars, put the final result beyond doubt.

BARBER IS LONE HOLDOUT AS CUBS GO WESTWARD

Twenty-two Players Start from Here to Camp.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Although there were flurries of snow and much ice present, the baseball season for Chicago began last night, when Manager Mitchell and his squad of Cubs pulled out of the Polk street station at 7:35 p. m., bound for Pasadena, Cal., where spring training will begin Wednesday morning.

Only one player was missing when the train left, Turner Barber, the lone holdout, failing to appear. It was supposed he had gone to his home in St. Louis to await developments on his case. President Veeck positively declined to permit any player on the trip who wasn't signed and Barber and Charley Deal are the only men on the entire list who aren't under contract. Deal is already in Pasadena and is expected to sign as soon as Mitchell sees him.

Twenty-Two Players Aboard.

There were twenty-two athletes aboard the Pullmans when the start was made. Five more climb aboard this morning at Kansas City. Three are now in California awaiting the coming of the boss, and one will make the long journey out there over a different route. Most of the twenty-one who left from here arrived in Chicago yesterday, and many of them signed their contracts at the north side office during the day. President Veeck and Manager Mitchell were on hand at early morning and received the players one by one.

One of the first to appear was the veteran Fred Merkle, who came from his home at Ormond, Fla., where he has been busy all winter raising lettuce. Fred looked as if he didn't need any work to get into condition for the opening of the season, and indications are that the youngsters who are scheming to take his first base job away from him will find the pace pretty swift.

Lear Ready for Business.

One of the youngsters is King Lear, who came in from New York. Lear aspired to take some infield position last year, but was handicapped with a lame arm. He thinks the trouble has gone and that this time he will earn a regular job with the Cubs.

Two young pitchers, Martin Stolz and Earl Hanson, made a favorable impression on Manager Mtichell when they arrived. Stolz is a husky from Sturgis, South Dakota, where he has been corn fed and primed for his big league trial. Hanson comes from Holbrook, Mass. It is rather tough for any youngster to break into the Cub pitching staff with stars like Alexander, Vaughn, Tyler already there, but these two recruits believe they will be carried along when they show Mitchell what they can do.

Although he is no youngster, one of the livest athletes who showed up, was Dode Paskert, veteran outfielder. Dode announced on the quiet that the young fellows will have to hit a merry pace to beat him out of a regular place in the outfield. With Barber a holdout, Paskert may be badly needed and anyway, he is likely to be a regular man when the opposing team sends a left handed pitcher to the slab, because Dode always could wallop the left handers.

Mitchell Starts Predicting.

Before leaving, Boss Mithcell expressed great confidence in his chances to win a pennant this year. "We have the pitchers," was the way he put it, "and we have a pretty strong hitting team. Good pitching behind a team with a punch, is bound to do some business. My pitching staff, especially if Tyler 'comes back,' is the best in the game. We have some promising youngsters. Don't be surprised if a couple of them break into the team as regulars.

"We are getting an early start and if we have the usual good weather out on the coast, I shall bring the boys back in shape for the start of the pennant race. I expect to work them pretty hard in morning and afternoon practice. We have a lot of good games booked against the Coast league teams. They always give us real battles and that's the kind that gets a bunch ready for the season."

The Roster of "Starters."

The athletes aboard the train when it left here were: Manager Mitchell, Fred Merkle, Buck Herzog, Charley Hollocher, Max Flack, Dode Paskert, Nick Carter, Abe Bailey, Rudolph Weber, Ted Turner, Martin Stolz, Earl Hanson, Bill McCabe, Barney Friberg, King Lear, Walter Pearce, Clarence Twombly, Toney Schultz, Joe Letter, Tom Daly, Bob O'Farrell, William Rostizer, and Earl Marriott.

The three already on the coast are: Speed Martin, Charley Deal, and Joe Newkirk.

ZIM AND CHASE ARE MISSING AT GIANTS' GETAWAY

New York, Feb. 28.—Headed by Christy Mathewson, the main contingent of the New York Nationals, departed today for San Antonio, Tex., for spring training. Other players and recruits will be picked up at various points. Manager McGraw is en route to Texas from Havana.

Although Heine Zimmerman and Hal Chase were ordered to report, they did not do so. Zimmerman sent back his contract unsigned, while Chase, according to reports, has decided to quit baseball for business in California.

Flyweight Champ Wilde Boxes Frankie Mason.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Toledo, O., hopped onto the boxing map last July 4 when it staged that world's heavyweight championship in which Jack Dempsey defeated Champion Jess Willard in three rounds. But Toledo isn't content to fall into pugilistic decay after that notable achievement and as a result of this determination another world's championship is to be pulled on March 12.

The next venture of the Ohioans, of whom Addison Quincy Thacher is the ruling spirit, will be a flyweight championship, and there is added to it the international phase, which always has proved attractive, especially when the contestants are figured to be equally matched.

Jimmy Wilde as Drawing Card.

Jimmy Wilde, flyweight champion of Great Britain, of course, will be the big drawing card, for "Joimes" has demonstrated in the four battles he has had since coming to this country that he is class all over.

For a long time Frankie Mason has attracted the eye of the wise ones of the boxing game. Mason, who hails from Fort Wayne, Ind., has for years been battling the boys in the bantamweight ranks, and, like Wilde, has been forced to concede as much as ten pounds in order to get the matches necessary to fatten the bank roll. That's the reason he is matched to box Wilde at Toledo.

Mason Coy on Age.

Frankie is a clever, smart ringster, but he is a coy young man when it comes to divulging his real age. While he doesn't admit it, the guess that he is about 31 years old would not go far wrong.

Judging by the way Mason handles himself in the ring against the classy boys who outweigh him by several pounds, age and his years in the ring mean nothing in his young life.

Frankie is a fighter, not a boxer, but those who think that Mason cannot box have another guess coming. When necessary he can box just as well as anybody else in the bantamweight ranks, but he prefers to scrap aggressively—get in close and punch. And Mason can punch. Perhaps he doesn't clout as hard as Wilde, but any talk along these lines would be sure to start an argument with George Biemer, his manager, and his Hoosier state followers.

Wilde Packs a Punch.

One cannot say that Wilde isn't a puncher after the way he punched Babe Asher to the canvas three or four times in an eight round bout, the way he knocked out Mike Ertle of St. Paul in three rounds, and the way he stopped Mickey Russell in seven rounds in Jersey. Mason will have something to think about after allowing these performances to permeate his gray matter.

Some of the fellows who pose as wise guys in the ring game will put forth the argument that if Wilde can stop bantamweights with his right hand wallop, why won't he find it easier to put away an opponent of his own weight? That sort of figuring would seem to have logic behind it, but in boxing, logic or dope doesn't always prove correct. In fact, it very frequently is worth a plugged nickel.

108 Pounds at 3 o'Clock.

This bout will be at 108 pounds at 3 o'clock, which may give Mason a slight shade, perhaps a pound or two the better of the weights at fighting time, but the difference will not be enough to make any difference. It will be the first time Wilde has fought an opponent of his own poundage in this country, and it should prove a battle worth going miles to see.

Those boxing fans who dote on speed should get an eyeful when these wee ones start into action, and Toledo once more will be in the limelight.

Wilde and Mason are to box twelve rounds. The referee will not give a decision, the verdict being put up to the ringside critics.

Seven Chicago Skaters Qualify in St. Paul Meet

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Seven Chicago skaters tonight qualified for the finals in the northwestern skating championship by placing in the preliminary events at the Hippodrome rink. J. X. Steinmetz and his brother Will, Otto Buendgen, Esmeralda Dunlap, Rose Johnson, Gus Fetz, and Roy McWhirter were the Windy City entrants who will get into the finals.

Everett McGowan tied the world's record for the quarter mile when he led a field of the fastest skaters in the country in a preliminary heat. He made the distance in 35 1-5 seconds. The two Chicago girls, Esmeralda Dunlap and Rose Johnson, had things their own way in the prelims of the quarter and half mile. Each won a heat.

Shanley Hurls for C. H. I. in Game with Dodgers

Tom Shanley will pitch for the Chicago Hebrew institute today in an endeavor to win the opening contest of the series with the Dodger Trainings for the City league indoor ball championship at St. Alphonsus' gym. The game will start at 3 o'clock. "Red" Kaufman is to have his old battery mate, Ivq Spreitzer, catching for him, which will make the Dodgers favorites. The stakes of the series are the Sweltzer cup and fifteen gold medals awarded by Charles H. Luck.

A PAIR OF JACKS

THE naval officer and the champion had just finished a good dinner at Dempsey's house in Los Angeles when they dropped in for this picture at the Brunton motion picture "lot" just before Dempsey was to start a long night's work as a movie hero routing the Mexicans and saving the heroine. He had made up his face, the makeup giving him a pasty look. He told Eye Witness, THE TRIBUNE's reporter, that he would rather fight.

Lieut. Jack Kennedy was stationed at Great Lakes Naval Training station during the war, ran the gobs' boxing bouts there, and was prominent in Central A. A. U. sports before going to sea duty, which took him to the Pacific coast on the warship Mississippi. Jack Kennedy used to be boxing champion of the Atlantic fleet.

SOUTAR BEATS LOCAL STAR IN 'RACQUETS GAME

A well placed service combined with effective forearm shots gave Jock Soutar of the Philadelphia Tennis and Racquets club, world's professional champion, a victory over Harry Boakes Jr. of the University club yesterday in straight sets. The match was played in the local club's courts and Soutar won by scores of 15—12, 15—11, and 17—14.

Soutar gave Boakes a handicap of four points in each game, but his speed and driving service to the corners proved too much for the local player. In addition the champion made ten more aces than Boakes. Soutar played a steady and safe game in the first two sets and gradually overcame his opponent's lead, but in the third set, Boakes made the champion work for every point.

Cards, Piloted by Rickey, Depart for Brownsville

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 28.—The St. Louis Cardinals tonight departed for Brownsville, Tex. Twenty-nine members of the team, including Manager Branch Rickey, were in the party. Twelve others are to report in Brownsville. The Cardinals and Philadelphia Americans will play sixteen games in and about Texas before returning north. Before departure Rickey expressed doubt whether Milton Stock, third baseman, the lone "holdout," would sign.

Chicago League Bills Meeting for Tomorrow

The annual election of officers of the Chicago Baseball league will be held tomorrow night at the Hotel La Salle at 8 o'clock. Discussion of new rules promulgated by the major leagues is expected to take up a large part of the time at the meeting.

spies in each other's training camps. By the way, if there is a deficiency in Dempsey's style it is that his foot work is not of the best, but I understand they have about decided to let it alone lest trying to better it should interfere with that punch of his that can knock down a wall.

"You must remember that modern heavyweight fighting is not a boxing match in any sense of the word. It is often a matter of one punch, and it is not a matter of skill as compared with lightweight boxing, which is 90 per cent skill and 10 per cent strength. In short, Jack Dempsey's fighting is primarily a matter of the fighting heart, and a man either has it or he hasn't. Jess Willard, whom I respect, had not a fighting heart. Jack Dempsey would rather fight than eat."

Definition of Fighting Heart.

Then John Derks patiently defined Dempsey's fighting heart for me in a few of his masterful touches:

"Broadly, the fighting heart is the undeniable will to conquer, to break down opposition at whatever cost of pain or disaster to oneself, the spirit of combat developed to the highest degree, the total absence of fear, the total absence of mercy while engaged in battle, the insensibility to wounds or broken bones while the conflict is on. In brief, it may be said that he possesses the fighting heart who would rather fight than eat.

"As to the fear of physical punishment, Dempsey does not know it. I can give you an illustration, though I must tell you that I cannot verify the illustration, though I was at the fight in question. In early 1917 Dempsey was matched with Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, for a ten round bout at Murray, a Salt Lake suburb.

Holds Jaw for Blow.

"In the first round, indeed, at the second blow, Flynn landed a terrific punch on Dempsey's jaw. Flynn has a reputation for putting tremendous force into his blows, and there is no gainsaying that the blow which he delivered to Dempsey's jaw was terrific. It developed later that the fight was a frame, and that to distinguish it from other frames it was agreed to end it quickly. Now, if there is any fear in the makeup of a man who will deliberately stick out his jaw to permit Jim Flynn to hit it, then I do not know what is meant by fear."

In the mass of invaluable data John Derks wrote out for me I find the details of the foregoing passage, and it is among the passages for which he said I might quote him as being the authority.

"Aside from that affair," I asked, "what is the cause of Dempsey's hardly lily white reputation here in Salt Lake in those early days? Was it drink?"

Narrow Escape for Jack.

"No," said John, "it wasn't drink, although it is a fact that this time was the most crucial of Dempsey's life, and he came within a hair's breadth of becoming, instead of the world's champion pugilist, a bum. But it wasn't drink. He never drank much to excess. In other ways, however, he was in a fair way to glide rapidly along the broad and easy path. He was a young fellow in exuberant health, with few if any refining influences and no moral restraints, and he fell in with bad associates.

"But you've got to consider about this. As a class, prize fighters are physically so normal that by the arbitrary standards of morality they sometimes seem abnormal. They always are at the peak of health. But if you owned a dog that didn't take any interest in his physical life, you'd say he was a hell of a dog.

Why Not Fond of Women?

"Well, the strange thing about all this is not that a competent fighter should be fond of women, but that, by any chance, he should not be. Picture a young man in all respects perfectly healthy, with the blood pumping through a circulatory system without defect, a young animal in all regards positively male—why shouldn't he be fond of women, and many a woman of him? That's the story."

"And Dempsey personally—how have you found him?"

"Jackie's pleasant within his limits—a pleasant, obliging, good natured fellow—rather diffident in the early years and not brash after the great success—not a cursing or a flashy type. He used to be bashful in the presence of persons of larger mental attainments. That was natural, and the logical result of his upbringing. Lately he has lost much of this backwardness.

"Securely on his financial feet and gradually becoming accustomed to rubbing elbows with people moving in a higher walk than that in which he formerly lived, Jack is coming to the conclusion that in everyday life and thought and action he's as good as any of 'em, a conviction perhaps strengthened by the knowledge that physically he is the superior of any of 'em. When he was last with me he talked in the language of a man of substance.

"Discussing his future, he said he did not know of any young fellow who could be developed into championship caliber in less than three years. This implied that he felt fully assured of holding the title at least that long."

On the subject of the family John Derks was brief and to the point. He spoke, as most sporting people do, of Mme. Maxine as "the bad actress." He said that undoubtedly Jack's affection for his mother was genuine and fine.

I asked him what Father Hiram was like.

Derks crooked his finger and thumb to something that looked like a zero.

ORANGE RANCH LIFE AND PROFITS CONTENT CHANCE

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Next time you read about Frank Leroy Chance coming back into baseball as part owner of one of the million dollar clubs in the majors, don't get all het up about it. Take it for granted another coast scribe has stung a newspaper for a bit of soft money.

Not that the former peerless leader of the Cubs can't afford to indulge in the gamble of big league club ownership, but he doesn't want to, and neither would you if you had to give up what he would have to, for a large part of the year, if he came back. Listen:

We motored out from Los Angeles to Glendora the other day—an hour's trip that made the best part of Sheridan road seem full of hummocks by comparison—and surprised the former pilot of the great Cub machine in his "office" figuring up the 1919 profits from his orange grove, preliminary to telling Uncle Sam how much income tax to expect from that twenty-one acres.

Some Office, This.

Frank's "office" has no twin, so far as known. It's a cozy corner, glass partitioned off the back porch of his bungalow, and every time he looks up from a column of figures he rests his eyes on a smooth green lawn, profusely splashed with rose bushes and flower beds—a sort of al fresco patio, surrounded on three sides by bungalow.

That's a heap sight finer place from which to boss things than the most luxuriously equipped baseball office in the world we'll say.

The original architect of the bungalow was Mrs. Frank L. Chance, and she was the boss decorator, too; some of the furnishings coming from as far away as Chicago.

This gem of a domicile is set in the middle of the orange grove and at the end of a palm bordered driveway, entrance to which is made under a stone arch supported by two Cubs and bearing the legend, "Cub ranch, Frank L. Chance." So it will be your own fault if you miss it.

Bad Year; Only $12,000.

Although last year was a comparatively poor one, Chance found the comfortable balance of more than $12,000 on the right side of his books the day we surprised him. And recently he replanted one-third of his orchard with trees which will bear their first crop this year. Less than a month ago he laughed at a man who offered him $100,000 for the place. Besides, he owns the Frank Chance building, the most desirable business block in Glendora, and has to go only three-quarters of a mile to collect his rents.

What chance has baseball with Chance?

Pugilistic Pointers

By Ray Pearson

JOHNNIE CONNORS, once a scrapper himself, who is promoting the boxing shows at Springfield, Ill., is finding the boxing fans there hungry for the sport. He has staged a couple of shows with marked success and makes his third "start" next Wednesday with a card that interests the fans in the Illinois capital. Forty-two rounds of boxing are billed with a windup between Jack Sherley and Charley Powers, a couple of 160 pounders. Former Bantamweight Champion Jimmy Barry will officiate as referee.

Welterweight Champion Johnny Tillman hasn't been heard from for a spell and the explanation is given in a letter in which he says the reason he hasn't been fighting is that he has been having a battle with yellow jaundice.

Jimmy Peters, a Chicago lightweight, who has been idle for a long time, is going to return to activity. Peters has taken on a little weight and says he is willing to tackle the welters.

Jimmy Hanlon of Denver and Clint Flynn of Chicago have been matched for the windup of a show billed for Indiana Harbor next Friday. In another bout Bud Purrell of Terre Haute and Tim O'Neill of the stockyards will clash. A prelim between Sam Sterns and Jack O'Brien also has been booked.

SEMI-PROS PLAN FOR BIG SEASON ON LOCAL LOTS

Gunthers to Discard That Name for Pyotts.

Local semi-pro baseball magnates are busy preparing for the coming season, which from the present outlook will be one of the biggest Chicago has ever known.

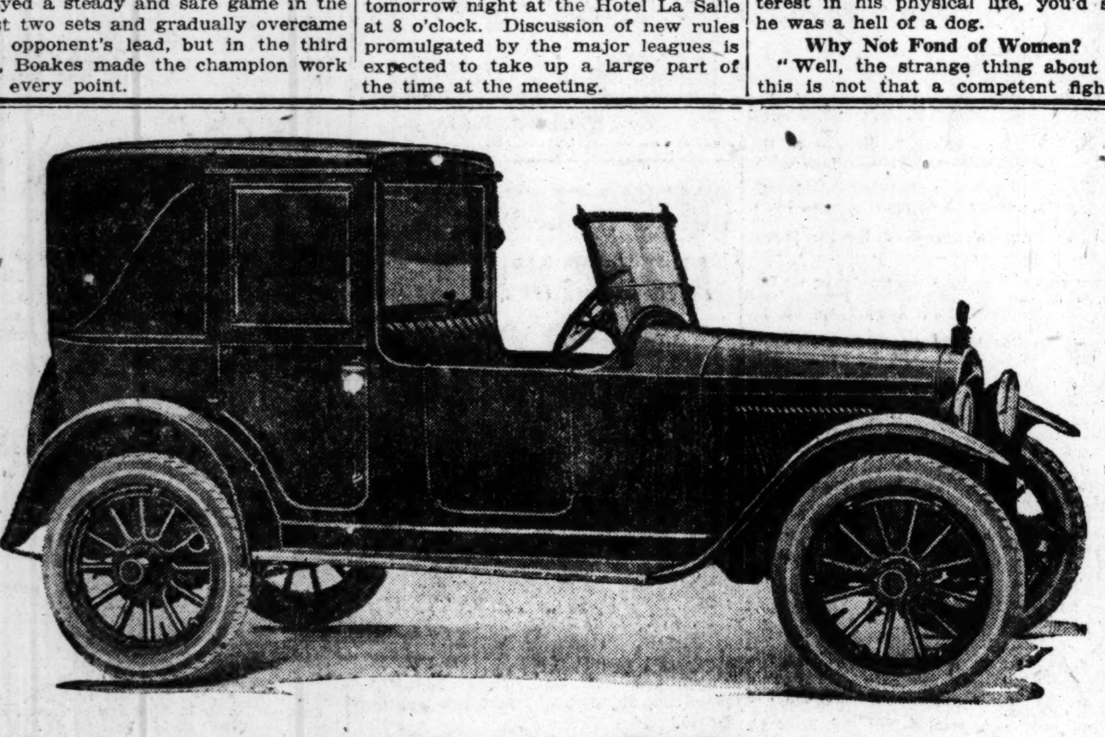
Bill Niesen has just returned to Chicago after a three months' stay in California. Niesen announces that after twenty years as pilot of the famous Gunthers he will discard the name and from now on his team will be known as the Pyotts. The old Gunther park at West Lake street and Kilpatrick avenue, will be called Pyott field.

The new owners of Normal park, Charles Giesman and Frank Toomey, are hustling around gathering in talent for their club. They expect to have one of the strongest teams in this part of the country.

James Callahan will have his usual string team at Logan Square park. Last year Cal had Phil Douglas doing his twirling, but this season the big southerner is going back to the Giants. According to Cal, he has another star hurler in view.

One new club has threatened to break into the game. Oak Park fans are organizing a company to put a good semi-pro team in the field.

The Knights of Columbus league, the largest amateur circuit in the country, will hold its first gathering of the season tomorrow night at 16 West Madison street. Promoter Jimmy Keown has the application from forty councils for franchises.



A Custom-Built Hupmobile Town Car

The large demand in the East for custom-built bodies on a small chassis prompted us to have a few special bodies made up for the Hupmobile chassis.

We have just received several of these special bodies in a beautiful Town Car Model.

Designed by one of the best known body-builders in the country, they represent the highest art in coach work.

They are roomy, comfortable, beautifully upholstered; and so constructed that when they are mounted on the Hupmobile chassis the increased weight and consequent increased running expense common to many enclosed cars is strikingly eliminated.

The long life, noteworthy economy, satisfactory service, and conspicuous performance of the Hupmobile are too well known to require further emphasis.

These sturdy qualities are enhanced by the beautiful new Town Car body which we are now displaying.

We suggest an early call at our salesroom, since the number of these distinctive bodies is very limited.

Immediate delivery can be made to early purchasers.

OAK PARK SCORES BASKET TRIUMPH OVER EVANSTON

Exciting Clash of Heavies Ends in 34-21 Score.

Oak Park ascended to probable championship honors in the Suburban High School league yesterday by defeating the last unbeaten rival, Evanston, 34 to 21, in a clash which was an exciting test of basketball abilities. The game was played at Evanston Y. M. C. A. before a hooting, cheering mob.

Blackmer and Robinson, Oak Park's fleet forward duo, sped up the scoring in the first half, but Evanston made a game fight, and the score stood 16 to 14 in Oak Park's favor at the intermission. Noyes started an Evanston rally which threw the home rooters into a din in the third quarter, and Evanston led for the first time in the game.

The reliable short passes of Coach Bunce's west surburbanites told as the game wore on and Evanston failed to keep the pace, its defense relaxing. Toward the close Oak Park's forward trio popped shots at the baskets from all angles. Blackmer and Robinson of Oak Park were closely pushed by Noyes of the losers in the race for individual scoring honors.

In the lightweight curtain raiser Evanston won from Morton High, 7 to 2, in a somewhat listless encounter. Heavy lineup:

SHATTUCK LOSES TO LAKE FOREST

Lake Forest academy wrested a place in the limelight as chief claimant for preparatory school basketball honors in the middle west by conquering Shattuck Military academy of Faribault, Minn., 38 to 23, in a flashy encounter at Lake Forest yesterday.

Lake Forest had poorer success in the two minor weight games which preceded the headliner, Austin lights of the Chicago Public High School league winning by 37 to 9, and Austin bantams by 25 to 11. The Austin lightweights' win was featured by Karstens' floor work and Bergstrom's versatile shooting. Heavy lineup:

YOUNG SHEA PINS AL CHAPELLE ON MAT AT C. A. A.

Young Shea, local welterweight, defeated Al Chapelle in the main bout of the wrestling show at Chicago A. A. last night. It was a one fall match, and Shea won in 21:40 with a body scissors and bar arm. Chapelle outweighed the victor at least ten pounds, but Shea's cleverness and ability to take advantage of openings kept him on the offensive all the time.

In the semiwindup Jack Linow, who is matched to meet Stanislaus Zbyszko at the Second Regiment armory March 18, defeated Tom Hedges in a one fall contest. Linow took the bout in 18:42 with a reverse body lock. Spiros Vorres, a Greek lightweight, defeated "Young" Londas in the opener with a head scissors and bar arm in 15:46.

For the first time, the national clay court championships have been split up. The women's singles and doubles, and mixed doubles, will be conducted June 21, at Detroit. The men's singles and doubles will be played at the Chicago South Side club, probably the week of July 10.

SISTER OF THE ANGLE

Mrs. Fred Bradford Ellsworth and Big Sailfish, Caught at Long Key, Fla.

BY LARRY ST. JOHN.

ANGLING is one of the many sports in which the ladies compete successfully with the men. Since 1496, when Dame Julianna Berners wrote the first book on angling in the English language, women have made noteworthy contributions to the gentle art. The love of singing waters birds, and breezes; the caresses of the south wind; the early morning hush broken only by the swirl of gamey fishes; the sweetness of the dusk of a good day—angling were not created to bring joy and solace to man only.

It took Mrs. Marshall Field Jr. 2:20 to land her big 225 pound marlin swordfish. It was caught at Catalina last September and is a big swordfish as may be judged by the fact that specimens weighing 100 pounds less have taken the season record. It is a fish that any angler would be proud to catch.

Catching big fish is no novelty to Mrs. Fred Bradford Ellsworth. She and her husband are noted as anglers all over the American continent. They were pioneers in the use of light tackle and the big sailfish, which measured nearly seven feet in length, was taken at Long Key, Fla., on regulation six ounce tip rod and nine thread line It made nine leaps, but Mrs. Ellsworth brought it to gaff in eighteen minutes.

Mrs. Frank J Keating is another successful Chicago anglerette. Last fall she landed a fifteen and a forty-one pound muskellunge while fishing at Deer Lodge, Three Lakes, Wis. Mrs. Keating is also a big game hunter and goes to the north woods every fall after deer. For several seasons she has shot a good buck.

Nearly fifty years ago Mrs. Anna M. Dugan made her debut as an angler, the net results being one shiner. Since then she has taken many a good bass, pike, and trout. Last fall she made a trip to the Georgian bay country in Canada with excellent results. Mrs. Dugan wears a heavy linen skirt, sweater, and boy's shoes, and the same apparel served as a bathing suit when she landed the big muskellunge.

Mrs. H. Smaltz, Marion, Ind., caught her twenty-one pound muskie at Little St. Germaine Lake, Wis., last summer. On the same trip she hooked "Big Pete," a muskellunge of fabulous size that inhabits those waters. She had him licked to a frazzle, but Friend Husband, who was handling the gaff, made a miscue and the big one got away as often happens. Any way, Mrs. Smaltz has good grounds for divorce—all she would have to do would be to demand a jury of anglers! However, she is going back next spring and Big Pete had better be careful.

ST. CYRIL High bantamweights held their undisputed sway in the Catholic High School league by larruping De La Salle of Joliet, 28 to 5, at De Paul academy. The victory was the sixth straight. ILLINOIS RELAYS TO BE KEEN FIGHT OF MANY STARS

Crack Varsity Track Men of East Are Entered.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Stars of the western college athletic world and a few luminaries of the east will compete in the renewal of the University of Illinois relay games to be held at Urbana next Saturday.

This event will rank second in importance to the annual indoor conference meet to be held at Patten gymnasium on March 19 and 20. The results of the relays and individual events will furnish a mighty good line on the prospective winners of the conference events and the team victor.

Aside from the Big Ten institutions, most of the larger nonconference institutions will be represented, including Nebraska, which undoubtedly will send its mile relay team to the games. In McMahon, the Cornhusker college has one of the best quarter milers in the west, and he is sure to be supported by three other good runners.

Notre Dame Entered.

Notre Dame will send a strong team into the games. Aside from being represented in the individual contests, the South Bend institution will have a one mile relay team and possibly a two mile quartet.

It is understood that Hayes, national 100 yard champion, and Murphy, running high jump champion, will not be permitted to represent the university in the games. The former violated a university rule by running for the Boston A. A. last summer. Murphy has not been at school long enough to represent his college in intercollegiate competition.

Charley Brewer, athletic director at Michigan Agricultural college, who developed a team which won the western conference meet while he was in charge of athletics at Missouri, is grooming a strong mile relay team for the games, in addition to several individuals. Brewer is a sharp track and field coach who commands the respect of other mentors.

Competition to Be Keen.

The struggle for honors among the conference colleges is certain to be close and interesting. Nearly every Big Ten institution boasts of at least one performer who should score in the individual events, while the relay teams are expected to make strong bids for places.

Michigan will not have the easy sailing it has experienced in carrying off the honors in the last two years. The Wolverines were given quite a battle by Chicago last winter in the indoor conference, but they will be given a much closer fight this year.

Coach Stagg has the nucleus of one of the best balanced teams which ever represented the university. In fact, the team will be stronger out of doors and will be weak in only a few events. His relay teams will be better than usual, and the Maroons will be hard to beat in the three relays.

Star 440 Man in Curtiss.

As anchor man on his one mile relay team Coach Stagg has Curtiss, who ran his heat in the outdoor conference last June in :48 4-5. He turned the lap in this remarkable time with scarcely any training, as he had been playing baseball up to within a few days of the meeting.

Curtiss will be supported by Kennedy, Harris, Speer, or Jones. In the two mile relay the Midway mentor will have Capt. Speer and Jones as mainstays, and in the four mile George Otis and Moore. Stagg has other half milers who are turning the distance around 2:04 and some milers who are doing better than 4:38. These men are expected to be better when the relays are held.

For the first time in recent years Stagg has a sprinter and hurdler in McDonald. Chicago has been weak in both events recently. Stagg always has been fortunate to get sprinters and hurdlers, and he will make the most of McDonald.

Higgins Class of Field Men.

Higgins, captain of last year's football team, is the class of the conference shot putters and he will be more valuable out of doors, when he will be used in the javelin and discus throws. Curtiss in the quarter, Speer and Jones in the half mile, and Otis in the one and two mile runs are certain to score points, no matter how fast the competition.

Wisconsin's victory over Notre Dame in a dual meet shows Coach Tom Jones has a team worthy of consideration. Wisconsin will be especially strong in distance runs, and should put a strong four mile team in the Illinois relays. Whether Coach Frank of Minnesota will attempt to do much with his athletes until the outdoor season is not known. In Arnold Oss of Football fame Minnesota has a great quarter miler who is practically the equal of Curtiss and McMahon.

Georgetown already has signified its intention of sending a team to the Illinois games, while Sherman Landers of Pennsylvania will be a contestant in the pentathlon. Coach Robertson of Penn also may send a one mile relay team.

ILLINI ATHLETES BEAT NOTRE DAME IN DUAL CONTEST

Two Urbana Records Broken.

Urbana, Ill., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Two local track records were broken and two more equaled today when Illinois defeated Notre Dame in a dual meet, 60 1-3 to 25 2-3. The Catholics gained their only first in the hurdles.

Capt. Bob Emery stepped the quarter in 51 seconds, a new mark for the armory track, outfooting Eddie Meehan. Emery again starred in the final lap of the mile relay when he came from behind and overtook Wynn, who was in the lead. The relay was a fifth of a second faster than the track record. Phil Spink, with "Davy" Brown close up, ran a fast half mile, two-fifths seconds slower than his own record of 1917. Johnny Prescott equaled the track record in the seventy-five yard dash.

Coach Gill's sophomore jumper, Osborne, made his debut by winning the high jump at 5 feet 10 inches. Yates defeated Burke of Notre Dame in the mile, but the Illini two milers scored a slam with ease. Summary:

Pole vault—Won by Buchanan, Illinois; Howard, Illinois, and Powers and Douglas, Notre Dame, tied for second. Height, 11 feet 4 inches.

75 yard dash—Won by Prescott, Illinois; Nagel, Illinois, second; Bailey, Notre Dame, third. Time, :08.

75 yard high hurdles—Won by Wynn, Notre Dame; Starrett, Notre Dame, second; Kenney, Illinois, third. Time, :10.

Mile run—Won by Yates, Illinois; Burke, Notre Dame, second; McGinnis, Illinois, third. Time, 4:30 3-5.

Mile relay—Won by Illinois [Schlaprizzi, Prescott, Donohue, Emery]. Time, 3:29 3-5.

TRACK CHAMPS OF NOTRE DAME IN C. A. A. U. MEET

Club, university, and college teams will struggle for athletic supremacy on March 27, when the Central A. A. U. indoor track and field championships will be held at the Broadway armory under the auspices of the First Infantry Illinois Reserve Militia A. A.

The athletic committee, of which Roy Davis is chairman, is bending every effort to secure team entries from Chicago, Northwestern, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Michigan. Purdue and Iowa will be urged to send representatives, as will other colleges. The Chicago A. A. will have its strongest team on the floor, as will the Illinois A. C. Every event in the championships will be scratch, and there will be little room for athletes who cannot approach somewhere near Central association records.

Notre Dame will undoubtedly be represented by Hayes, national 100 yard champion, and Murphy, national running high jump champion. In addition, A. Desch, who established a new world's indoor mark for the 40 yard low hurdles at :04 4-5 at the 1st regiment games, will be on hand.

OLYMPIA TO USE 2 COURSES FOR WESTERN OPEN

Local Club to Hold Event Aug. 4 to 6.

BY JOE DAVIS.

With the selection of Aug. 4 to 6 as the date for the western open championship at Olympia Fields, all of the principal events, except one, in which Chicago golfers are interested, have been scheduled.

The exception is the annual tournament of the Professional Golfers' association, which will be played over a Chicago course. The local clubs can now go ahead with their schedules, and then await the coming of the buttercups and daisies.

Use Two Courses for Open.

In announcing the dates for the western open, Assistant Secretary Crafts W. Higgins stated it would be played over two courses at Olympia, while, if the third course is in shape, that may possibly be used.

This event will precede the national open tournament at Toledo by a few days, and so make it possible for the eastern professionals to take in both tournaments in one trip. It also will permit the British professionals to play.

The western junior championship will be held July 28 to 30 at the Bob O'Link club of Chicago.

Dates for Chief Events.

The main events of interest to Chicago players are as follows:

July 12-17—Western amateur at Memphis.
July 28-30—Western Junior at Bob o' Link.
Aug. 4-6—Western open at Olympia Fields.
Aug. 10-13—National open at Toledo.
Aug. 23-28—Women's western at Oak Park.
Sept. 6—National amateur at Roslyn, L. I.
Oct. 4-9—Women's national at Cleveland.

LOGAN SQ. A. C. TO MAKE FIGHT FOR CLUB HONORS

With athletes representing the Swedish-American A. A. leading by 10 points, Logan Square A. C. will throw its entire strength into the field on Wednesday night, when the final of a series of four indoor invitation track and field meets for athletes of small clubs affiliated with the Amateur Athletic union will be conducted by the Chicago Athletic association in the Cherry Circle gymnasium.

The finals of the two mile run, 1,000 yard walk, and 1,000 yard run will be held, in addition to the final of the 200 yard flat. Logan Square's strength lies in its distance runners, who are expected to overcome the 10 point lead of the Swedes.

In addition to the events for small club athletes, the final contests of the competition for the diamond medal emblematic of the C. A. A. all around championship will be held. The battle for honors rests between Frank Loomis and Tom Hoskins, with the latter leading by 2 points.

RIAL T. ROLFE of the Flossmoor Country club won the open championship of the St. Petersburg Country club, Fla., Friday, defeating I. M. Hopple of Lexington, Ky., 5 and 4, in the thirty-six hole final.

Jim Barnes, the western open champion, who was to have played a match with Frank Adams at Biloxi, Miss., had to cancel this and other engagements by reason of an infected foot.

During the progress of the Gold Golf vase tournament at Pebble Beach, Cal., William F. Blake of the Olympic club of San Francisco had the unsual experience of taking four shots to get away from the tee. His initial drive in the qualifying round hit a white ball which marked the limits of the tee and bounded back thirty yards, landing flush against a stone wall. He took two strokes to get into the clear, and then got his ball well down the course.

Secretary Wallace of the Cook County Municipal Golf association has asked each member club to nominate two delegates. As soon as these are appointed a meeting will be called. One of the first moves will be to look for suitable sites for a course on the west side. It is thought that at least one can be located on property controlled by the forest preserve commission.

Hagen Plays Belleair Course in 70 and 71

Belleair Heights, Fla., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Walter Hagen, open champion, played over the Belleair course today in a four ball match in which he scored a 70 in the morning and 71 in the afternoon. He will have Alex Smith for a partner tomorrow against Jim Barnes and Dave Robertson.

Hopkins Beaten in Final of St. Augustine Event

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—In the finals of the fourth annual spring golf tournament held on the St. Augustine links today Harold Weber of Inverness club, Toledo, O., defeated Louis J. Hopkins of Old Elm, Chicago. The victory gives him a leg on the W. H. Beardsley cup, which last year was won by Hopkins. C. C. Shades of South Shore, Chicago, won from F. H. Sargent Jr., Philadelphia, 3 and 2, in the third sixteen.

AT THE BILLIARD ROOMS.

Otto Reiselt broke even in his Interstate league series with Charley Ellis of Pittsburgh, taking the second game at Mussey's Madison street room, 50 to 47, in forty-four innings. Reiselt had two runs of 6 and Ellis one. Ellis led, 14 to 7, in ten innings, and then Otto scored freely and led, 22 to 18, in twenty innings. Reiselt will leave tonight for two games at Detroit and two at Cleveland and these will finish his schedule.

Bob Cannefax defeated Roberts, a local amateur, 25 to 9, in fourteen innings at Mussey's Madison room, getting a high run of 10. Cannefax has left the Hoppe troupe and will travel with McCourt, making his own bookings.

Clarence Jackson, who has won eighteen games and lost eight, appears to have the championship of the Interstate league clinched, but Ray Palmer of Cleveland, with sixteen wins and ten losses, has a chance to tie him. Reiselt is in third place.

Burlingame's count led Centennial to high team honors for the week with 989.

Sutherland of Rogers Park are tied for first place in aggregate totals for the two weeks' shooting already completed, with 396 of a possible 400. In the recent week's events, A. E. GRAFT CHARGES UPSET REVENUE OFFICES HERE

T. J. O'Brien Made Chief of Field Deputies.

Complete reorganization of the internal revenue department in the Chicago federal district was announced yesterday following the general shake-up, the series of revenue graft investigations, and the latest excitement over the tax indictments against Attorneys Daniel J. Schuyler and Charles Weinfeld.

The most important change announced is that of the appointment of Thomas J. O'Brien, special bond expert in the office of District Attorney C. F. Clyne, and the man credited with driving professional bondsmen from federal courts, as chief of field deputies to succeed G. G. Dunlap, resigned.

Good Record Cited.

"The record of Mr. O'Brien in the federal courts is sufficient to assure his success in this new place," declared Collector Harry Mager in announcing the reorganization. "We need his kind of fearlessness in the department."

Another reward for extraordinary services went to Charles M. Callner, the deputy who carried $15,000 cash to the federal building recently and charged A. H. Lauer, secretary of Briggs & Turivas, with handing it to him and asking him to properly "doctor" the contracting firm's income tax returns. He was made chief of the accounting division to succeed Karel Rada, resigned.

Schuyler and Weinfeld Case.

Elliott H. Evans was named assistant to the collector, and Mr. Mager announced that his own commission as collector has been officially approved in Washington.

Rumors and conjectures growing from the Schuyler and Weinfeld indictments continued to buzz about the federal building. Veteran prosecutors expressed the opinion that neither of the attorneys can be convicted in the federal courts, and that the indictments could have been nothing more than an opening to political disclosures.

D. E. Sunny, president of the Chicago Telephone company, denied yesterday that his company has been one of the clients of Schuyler and Weinfeld.

NEW CHIEF

Bond Expert Made Head of Field Revenue Deputies.

THOMAS J. O'BRIEN.

CITIZENS OF ALL WALKS MEET FOR CIVIC PROGRESS

Officials and Laymen Exchange Views.

A new experiment in civic improvement was tried out yesterday in Chicago. In the Francis I. room of the Congress hotel were gathered a group of business men, aldermen, society women, state senators, reformers, county officials, mayors of suburbs, and the like.

James B. Waller of 1365 Astor street called the meeting. Mr. Waller believes that though the government may be of and for the people, it is not sufficiently by the people. It is his idea that the last time the ordinary citizen sees the man he helps elect is just before election day. And he wants them to get together.

Unusual Situations.

So in this queerly dissimilar gathering an alderman paid his respects to a reformer, and the reformer replied; the sheriff told why he liked to have prisoners in the county jail see hangings, and the mayor of Morton Grove stood up to commend him; the chairman of a constitutional convention committee told where he stood on home rule, and the chairman of a finance committee described the terrors of budget making in the city hall.

And about the time the talks were coming to an end and the general discussion was beginning, waiters placed napkins on the laps of the audience and then brought in coffee and sandwiches, the discussion continuing between bites.

Mr. Waller Explains.

"My purpose in calling this meeting," said Mr. Waller at the start, "is civic coöperation — coöperation between the good official and his fellow citizens.

"It is not easy for a man who is not in a party to do much in politics. I think the people should know the public officials, and I hope in this way to help them get acquainted."

Sheriff Peters said statistics seemed to indicate a hanging does deter murder. In Janary, 1919, he said, there were twenty-six murders in Chicago. Last January, following a hanging, there were only nine. Last February there were twenty-two murders, and this month only nine.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every day the inquiring reporter asks five strangers at random a question of public interest. Today's question:

Should we make peace with bolshevik Russia?

MISS FRANCES KILPATRICK, 519 Aldine avenue, a graduate student—One of the greatest crimes perpetrated upon the world has been the blockade of Russia. The only way we have of rectifying this wrong is to make peace with Russia and give them an opportunity to solve their own problems.

J. W. ALLEN, 4028 Sheridan road, a cigar clerk—Certainly. They're going to be bolsheviks for the rest of their lives. We might as well make peace with them now as twenty-five years from now, and so get the benefit of trade with them.

J. J. FISHBURN, 260 West Adams street, a dry goods wholesaler—I'm inclined to think we should make peace with all the world, bolshevik Russia included. Then we will be better off in every way.

J. G. EVANS, 4520 North Racine avenue, a real estate dealer—I don't think we should make peace, because they're not sufficiently civilized yet. Their government is in too much disorder.

C. J. FISCHER, Milwaukee, a stock clerk—We should give all our attention to our own country at present, and let bolshevik Russia alone until we get our affairs straightened out at home.

COUNTY BUDGET RAISES PAY OF 3,000 $700,000

$6,000,000 Increase in Grant of $20,500,000.

Cook county's budget for 1920 was fixed by the county board yesterday at $20,500,000, an increase of about $6,000,000. For the first time in years politics was submerged and the budget was passed at a daylight session, without night wrangling and the turning back of the clock on the last day fixed by law.

Standardization and increase of the salaries of 3,000 employés and the adoption of a program of reforms looking toward the establishment of county service on the same efficiency basis as maintained by big commercial concerns are the important features of the budget plans.

$700,000 Salary Boost.

The salary increases total about $700,000. Post-war prices and conditions are given as the reason for the increases.

The budget carried by a vote of fourteen to one, Commissioner Joseph Fitzgerald standing out against standardization of the payroll until conditions become more stabilized. Commissioner Robert W. McKinlay also voted against the standardization plan, but did not withhold his support of the appropriation for supplies. McKinlay and Fitzgerald asked for higher pay for employés getting small wages, insinuating that political preference took care of the more favored ones. They were answered by Commissioner Frank J. Wilson, who has supported the standardization plan for which President Peter Reinberg has been fighting for the last three years.

Commissioner Charles N. Goodnow declared that the standardization plan insures equity and guarantees payroll stabilization for the future. He pointed out that the rank and file of county employés will be benefited to the extent of about $200,000 over and above the plan of nonstandardization advocated by Commissioners McKinlay and Fitzgerald.

Bases of Increases.

A ten per cent advance will be paid all employés receiving $150 a month and under. Those paid from $150 to $175 will receive a 7½ per cent increase, and those paid $175 to $200 a month will get a 5 per cent raise. Under the plan John Jones and Bill Smith, doing the same kind of work, will receive the same pay without the interference of political juggling.

"In the face of the financial limitations of Cook county, many factors of which are inheritance from years ago, I believe this budget approximates the best possible," said President Reinberg. "It is not perfect and could not be under the circumstances just mentioned. But it does aim to do justice to the meritorious county employé, especially the small salaried employé, in so far as our revenues properly permit. This budget marks more than ever before the elimination of political influence in grabbing big pay for political favories.

"It is a big step of accomplishment that should develop with each ensuing year."

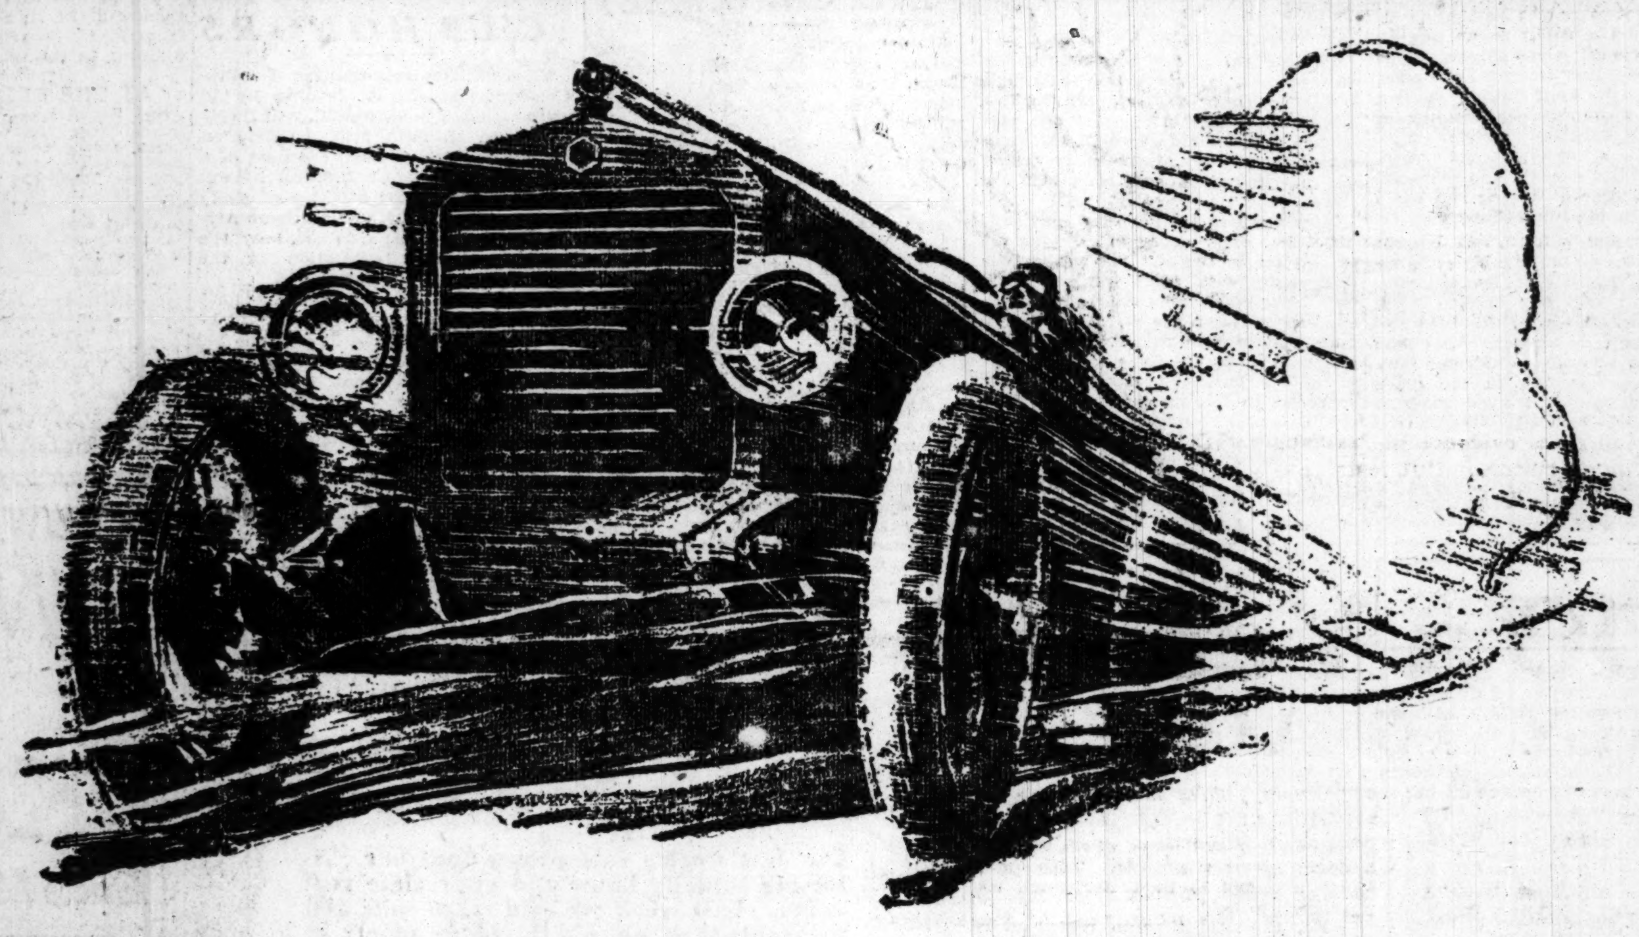
Blind Beggar Paid $40 a Week for Hotel Rooms

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. Peter R. Schneider, who claim Morgan Park as their home, were arrested as beggars here today. Peter, who is blind, was playing an accordion and soliciting alms. The police say the Schneiders were paying $40 a week for hotel accommodations.

MAY OPEN NEW BRIDGE OCT. 1.

The Franklin-Orleans street bridge, which has been under construction by the city for more than two years, is expected to be open and ready for traffic by Oct. 1. Strikes, the war, high cost of and inability to obtain materials have delayed the completion of the structure.

ESSEX MOTOR CARS



In Performance as in Style Essex Truly Leads

Its 50-Hours at Top Speed Endurance Mark is Unmatched But That is Proof of Only One of the Fine Car Qualities Essex Brings to the Light Car Field

Thousands at first bought the Essex, knowing nothing of its greatest quality. Perhaps no one expected great endurance in a light car. Perhaps its dynamic performance appeal swept aside the natural caution buyers feel about the durability of any new car.

More speed they found. More power—quicker acceleration—finer hill-climbing ability, and such riding ease as they had never known in a light car.

These things the Essex established quickly. A ride was sufficient. It left no vestige of comparison with former light car performance standards.

Such attractions were irresistible to those who knew former light car limitations.

But only time or abnormally abusive tests can prove car endurance.

It Won on Endurance Minus Useless Weight

Now Essex has met these requirements. Not only have more than 24,000 owners proved its dependable, punctual reliability and freedom from repair and replacement needs. Essex has set a new world endurance mark of 3037 miles in 50 hours. It is the only official test ever made of a stock car, driven at top speed for 50 hours. Counting other tests, the same Essex stock chassis travelled 5870 miles in 94 hours, 22 minutes, actual driving time, averaging more than a mile a minute. Officials of the American Automobile Association supervised the test and certified the stock character of the Essex chassis in every particular.

And another Essex stock touring car set a world 24-hour road mark of 1061 miles, over snow-bound Iowa roads. Not a single adjustment or tire change was made.

Surely such endurance proofs must redouble the value of Essex in the eyes of all.

Even before its official records of endurance it had become famous in all sections for the way it out-performed many notable cars. It holds hundreds of local records for speed and hill-climbing.

You will never class the Essex with other light-weight cars. For one thing its appearance instantly stamps it superior. You recognize the finest unholstery, fittings and details that can be put into a car.

See Why Essex Made a World's Sales Record

Moreover, Essex power means acceleration. It gives Essex right of way everywhere. It means that every performance is met at half effort—thus accounting for its long life.

These are reasons why in its first year Essex set a new world's sales record with more than $35,000,000 paid for more than 22,000 cars, in its first year.

This year it will be even more difficult to supply the Essex demand. Thousands waited last spring. Many were disappointed. Yet at that time Essex had not given the conclusive proofs of endurance, it now holds. You will avoid having to wait by making your reservation now.

New Almond Tract at Paso Robles, California

No Irrigating—No Fertilizing—No Crop Failures—Big Profits

We have repeatedly stated that desirable almond land in California is extremely limited. We wish you to consider this fact in examining the map below. This map shows the location of a new almond tract which our association has recently acquired, and which is now being divided into 10-acre units.

According to Mr. G. A. Nehrhood, our Field Manager, who is the acknowledged almond authority of the Pacific Coast, the Paso Robles district is the one ideal section of California for almond culture. Here, and here only, can almonds be successfully grown without irrigating. Nor is fertilizing necessary. This is because of the peculiar formation of the soil, which is largely composed of what is known as sea marl adobe, highly impregnated with lime and potash, the very elements which almond trees must have to insure sturdy growth and prolific yield.

We Select Only the Cream of This Choice Almond Land

You must not infer that all the land in the Paso Robles district is adapted to almond culture nor that all sections are alike as to productivity. For instance: A prospective buyer of one of our almond orchard tracts wrote to a government official in charge of the Pacific District, Agricultural Section at Los Angeles, inquiring about our Association and our almond land holdings. The first we knew of it was when we saw a bulletin signed by this official, reading in part as follows:

Subject—Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles

"This project has already received the endorsement of some of the leading horticulturists of California.

"The land purchased by this company includes some of the best almond producing land in America, and a purchaser from them will possess himself of land which will unquestionably produce successful crops of this type of nut.

"Concerning other lands in the locality which might benefit by the reflection of success gained in the holdings of the Association, it is not only advisable, but we consider it a necessary business formality, for a purchaser to acquaint himself personally with soil, climatic and water conditions before investing.

"The additional advice is given that, in the Paso Robles section, there are large acreages which carry upon their surface apparent opportunities in almond culture, but which, when brought to the test as to quality of soil, freedom from late Spring frosts and other questions necessary to success, can in no wise be termed favorable areas for almond culture."

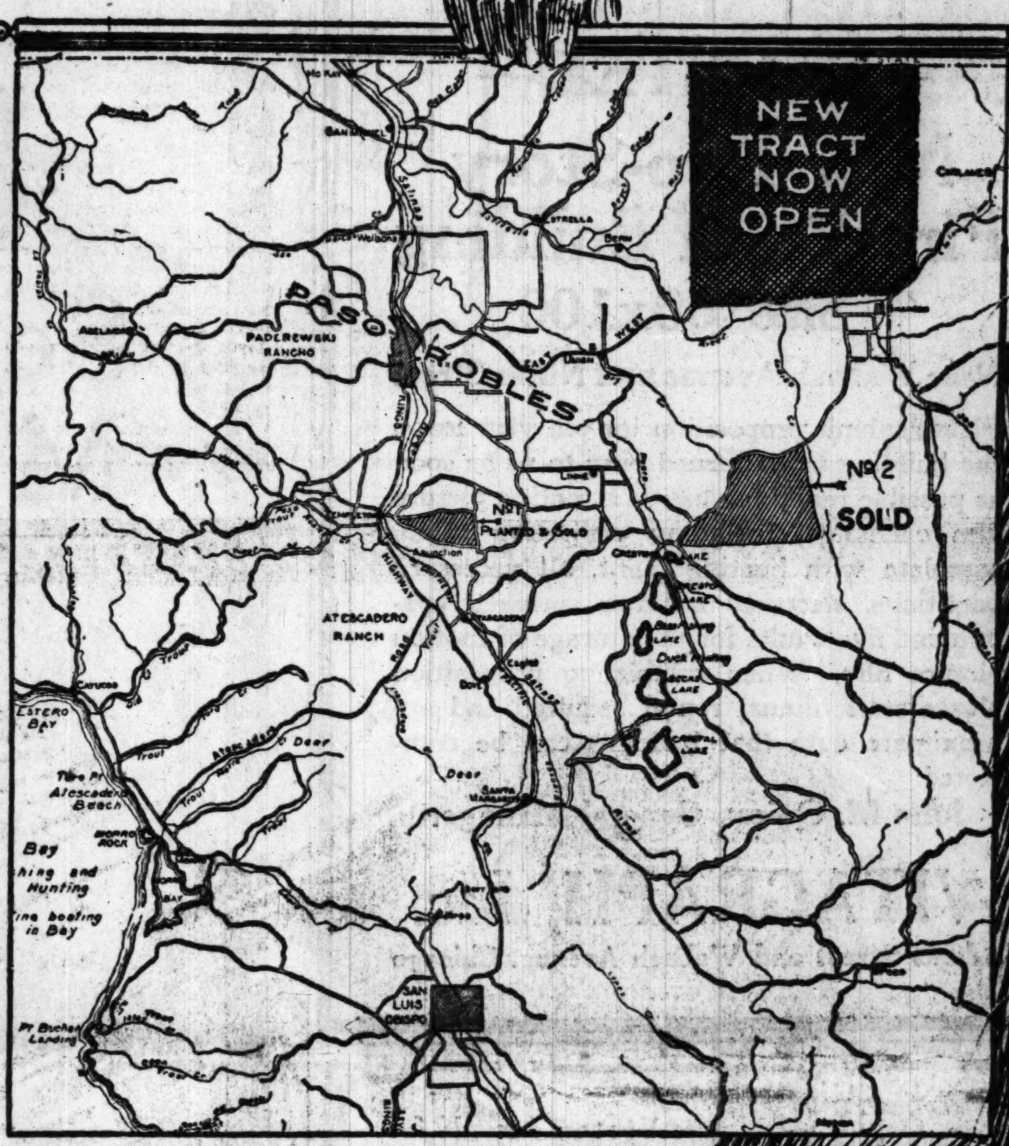
A copy of the complete Bulletin, signed by the Government official mentioned, will be mailed free on request.

Consider the note of warning sounded by the advice given "concerning other lands * * * which might benefit by reflection of success gained in the holdings of the Association."

Note also the additional advice regarding "large acreages which carry upon their surface apparent opportunities."

Soil Tested and Proved

Mr. Nehrhood takes no chances. He never relies upon surface indications, no matter how favorable they may appear. He selects all of the almond land for our Association, and under no circumstances will he give his O. K. to a tract until he has thoroughly tested the soil and is positively convinced that it has every qualification for successful almond culture. Notice the respective locations of the tracts already sold and planted and the New Tract recently opened. There are many thousands of acres separating these tracts, and a great deal of this land gives evidence of "surface opportunities" in almond culture. But tests covering large areas of this land prove that it does not measure up to requirements which we demand in our almond lands.



A Life Income plus California

$2500 to $3000 a Year for Life

FROM ONLY 10 ACRES

We tell you positively that if ever there was an opportunity for you to provide a sure and steady income as a protection against the uncertainties of the future—against the time when advanced years may find you outside the ranks of the money earners—this is that opportunity!

Why, do you realize that, within a few years after it is planted, one of these 10-acre almond orchards will NET you an income of from $2,500 to $3,000 a year FOR LIFE? This is a VERY CONSERVATIVE estimate. According to Mr. Nehrhood's estimate, comparatively young almond trees, when properly planted in the right kind of soil and given scientific care in the early stages of their growth, may confidently be expected to bear 20 pounds of almonds a year. We plant and bring into bearing 700 of the finest pedigreed nursery grown almond trees to each 10-acre orchard. The conservative estimate, therefore, is 14,000 pounds from the 10 acres. We figure profits on a selling price of 25 cents per pound, the price paid to Paso Robles growers in 1918. Last fall (1919) the price ranged from 30c to 32½c. Just figure for yourself what the profits actually are.

How Your Interests Are Absolutely Safeguarded The largest Trust Company on the Pacific Coast acts as custodian of the development fund created by the money sent to us by buyers and not a dollar of this fund can be used for any purpose except for orchard development—cultivating the ground, furnishing and planting the trees, pruning, harvesting, marketing. This Trust Company holds the title to the land and upon completion of your contract will deliver to you the deed and title to your orchard.

Crops Pay Half A moderate payment down and partial payments as low as $25.00 a month puts you in possession of one of these big profit-making 10-acre orchards of 700 almond trees. But you pay only half the price out of your pocket. We will accept payment for the balance from the sale of the almonds after the trees are in bearing. We must see that the orchard "makes good" for you before we can fully be paid. It is to our own interests to keep your property in the best possible condition.

Not a Crop Failure In 35 Years Where trees have been properly located there has not been a crop failure for 35 years. The ideal soil and climatic conditions which prevail here, combined with the choice pedigreed trees we plant and the scientific care given them by our experts, explain why the crops are so heavy and of the very finest quality.

Additional Profits From Increase of Land Values Your profit of $2,500 to $3,000 a year is only part of the revenue from one of these ten-acre almond orchards. From the day it is planted the land value begins to rise. It continues to increase in value at the rate of about $100 an acre, for from 12 to 15 years. If, therefore, after the completion of your contract, you should at any time wish to sell, you could do so at a big advance over your contract price.

Don't miss this lecture. It will prove a revelation to you—intensely interesting and highly instructive. The big colored lantern slides give you entrancing views of some of California's most magnificent scenery—snow-capped mountains, peaks that pierce the clouds, crystal lakes, foamy waterfalls, beach scenes, missions hoary with age, vine-covered bungalows without end, vast forests of giant trees, vivid flowers that cover hillside and plain as far as the eye can see and, which is of most momentous interest, panoramic views of the almond growing industry in every stage from the planting of the young trees to the gathering of the golden harvest. You will enjoy this lecture. COME—and bring your friends.

Read What Mr. Nehrhood Says

For a number of years I traveled over California examining lands and testing soils as to their productivity and adaptability to various crops for the purpose of establishing a basis of loans for several large banks and trust companies. In certain sections of the state—sometimes in widely separated areas—I found soil conditions favorable for oranges, lemons, figs, prunes, raisins, grapes, etc., but NOWHERE did I find the soil so ideally adapted to ALMOND CULTURE as in certain portions of what is known as the Paso Robles district. The fact that the soil does not require irrigation is a great factor to be considered. I have specialized in almond culture for many years and my experience, in this as well as in other almond growing sections, has proved to me that almonds grown in non-irrigated soil are far superior both as regards richness of flavor and meat content to those grown in soil that requires irrigation.

COUNCIL TO SEE FEW CHANGES IN ITS COMMITTEES

Not More than Six New Members to Place.

Organization of the new city council, which will probably contain not more than six new members, will be a simple matter. Council leaders have already agreed upon a tentative list of committee chairmen containing few changes.

There is only one sure vacancy in the present list of chairmen. That is on the compensation committee, of which Ald. Oliver L. Watson is chairman. He will not be a member of the new council and Ald. Passmore or Ald. Guernsey will probably be given his place.

There is also a chance of a vacant chairmanship in the committee on parks, playgrounds, and beaches, as Ald. Sheldon W. Govier, the present chairman, has Charles V. Johnson to beat at the supplementary election.

Little Chance for Changes.

But there is little probability that there will be changes in the chairmen of the important committees — finance, local transportation, railway terminals, local industries, judiciary, license, police, and buildings and city hall, and gas, oil and electric light.

Propaganda directed toward excluding the Municipal Voters' league from coöperating in the organization of the new council has thus far achieved no results. Council leaders are refusing to be stampeded from a plan which has kept the best element in the council at the throttle for the last twelve years.

Mayor Thompson's followers plan to defeat the old system of organization by pledging a majority of the council to remain away from the M. V. L. caucus, which will be called about the middle of March. Four of the most influential members of the council said yesterday that the mayor's effort will fail and that "honesty and fitness" will govern in the selection of committees for another year at least.

Richert to Head Finance.

As the council member with the most experience in finance, Ald. Richert will be returned as chairman of the finance committee. With the mayor working out a new transportation plan, Ald. Capitain will be returned to the local transportation committee because of his long experience in traction matters. The mayor's plan must come before Ald. Capitain's committee before it can be submitted to the voters.

Ald. Lipps is sure to be retained as the head of the railway terminals committee, as he has studied the lake shore improvement project for eight years.

With the council on record in favor of redistricting the thirty-five wards, Ald. Cermak, who had charge of the last redistricting ordinance, will undoubtedly be retained as head of the judiciary committee.

Smith to Head License.

Ald. Smith, leaders agree, will be retained as head of the license committee, which is now in the midst of a plan to increase revenue by more than 200 increases in license fees.

With the city embarking on a zoning program, Ald. Kostner, who headed the zoning investigation committee on its trip through the east, will be kept as chairman of the committee on buildings.

It is also practically decided that Ald. Fisher, Lynch, and Steffen will be returned to the chairmanships of the local industries, gas, oil, and electric light, and police committees.

Ald. Clayton F. Smith proposed yesterday to cut the size of the finance committee from seventeen to eleven members. He would make it a committee on revenue and expenditures instead of merely a committee on expenditures, as at present, and suggests that hte city treasurer and controller be made ex officio members without power to vote.

IRWIN RETRACTS ANY ASPERSIONS ON CAPT. RYAN

Harry L. Irwin, who is being sued for $50,000 by Capt. John Ryan of the Englewood station, wrote a letter to the Englewood Business Men's association and Chief of Police John J. Garrity Friday retracting any statements or impressions that were derogatory to Capt. Ryan. Capt. Ryan in the suit charges that Irwin stated that he was incompetent and inefficient.

The letter, in part, follows:

"Chief of Police Garrity and the Englewood Business Men's Association:

"It has been called to my attention that at a meeting of the Englewood Business Men's association on the nineteenth day of February, 1920, in which you were present, a wrong and injustice has been done by me to Capt. Ryan of the Englewood district and certain police officers. Not wishing to do any injustice to Capt. Ryan or any of the police officers of the Englewood district, I take this opportunity of correcting and retracting any and all derogatory statements or impressions gained from the remarks made by me."

He explains that Capt. Ryan had been in the district but a few days and could not be held responsible for conditions. He denies derogatory comparison of Capt. Ryan with Capt. Madden. He denies inference of incompetency on the part of Capt. Ryan or Policemen Long, Tobin, or McKenna.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

Robert Brooks of La Grange was arrested on charges growing out of injuries to his infant son. William Siebert, the employer of Brooks, was reported as having told the police that Brooks "seemed to be demented." Mr. Siebert denies he made any such report to the police or to any one else.

Harry L. Irwin was reported as saying he possesses evidence of police corruption in connection with the Fountain café at 6318 South Halsted street. Mr. Irwin writes: "I wish to call your attention to the fact that I was not interviewed on this subject."

Get behind the steering wheel of the National Sextet, and you learn how masterful this engine is.

With equal alacrity, it answers the urge of the accelerator and obeys the retarded throttle. It is smooth and silent in operation, flexible as a riding master's whip, dependable always.

At 3,600 revolutions a minute, the Sextet engine develops 71 horsepower—a remarkable gain of 57.8 per cent over the National Six of last year. Yet the bore and stroke measurements are the same.

There's one salient feature of the car, however, that is not evident to the eye. It is the close and fine workmanship that characterizes each and every part of the Sextet, no matter how small.

Precision methods of manufacture, many of them exclusively National, contribute not a little to the quiet operation of this rugged and powerful engine, and endow the Sextet with a capacity for unfailingly reliable service over a period of years unusually long.

LADY ASTOR FOR SLOW FUNERAL OF BARLEYCORN

She Wants Local Option First in England.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Lady Astor, fresh from her triumph in the house of commons, said today she intends to concentrate at this session on the liquor problem.

"It's big enough to take all of any woman's time and effort, and I look on it not as purely a woman's question, but it is a broad human question. There are no woman's questions; all are human."

Lady Astor was greatly gratified by her sympathetic reception in the house and press which was unanimous that her speech was equal to the finest parlimentary effort on record. Some papers take the view of the rather emotional side, but all agree she was unequaled in marshaling the facts and figures, and they welcome introduction of the human element in the rather cold atmosphere of the house.

For Easy Stages.

Lady Astor insisted again she is not a prohibitionist in the sense she wishes to force prohibition of drink against the wishes of the English people. She favors state purchase of the liquor trade and local options as the first step with the hope that in time England will come voluntarily to prohibition, and even then she favors compensation to the trade on a fair basis.

"I am relying on the strong sense of fair play in the English people," she said. "Nowhere else in the world is that sense so developed. I have had it in my experience with soldiers in war hospitals where I have known thousands intimately. England will do no unfair thing, and much as I hate drink, I don't hate the traders, and I am sure it would be unfair to expropriate or abolish it without compensation. I object to the idea of compulsion, but I believe when the British workingman, who is the best father in the world, realizes drink is hurting wives and children, he will agree voluntarily to abolition. My ideas of state purchase and control lines up with the Carlisle experiment where it is not the interest of the manager of a public house to sell liquor, and, if he does, he sells the best beer and the best whiskey and not the worst as at present.

"Drink Greatest Lie."

"I believe drink is the great lie of the world. It promises everything, gives nothing. I don't want to take the joy out of life, but I want more for my money than a drink gives. I am not bigoted. I don't say you must not drink anything, if you want to. I have drink in my house, but don't use it myself.

"The reason I think this country is unripe compared with America is because America's educated classes drank too much and England's educated classes don't."

COURT OBJECTS TO EVIDENCE IN NEWBERRY CASE

Rebukes Witness on Handwriting.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 28.—Testimony on the handwriting of Richard H. Fletcher, state labor commissioner, was presented at the Newberry elections conspiracy trial today. The effort of the prosecution was directed toward establishing the authenticity of Fletcher's signature on state pay rol vouchers in order that they might be compared by Francis B. Courtney with handwriting on petitions nominating James W. Helme as a rival of Henry Ford in the 1918 Democratic primary.

Not Sure About Signature.

Morris D. Kirby, chief clerk of the state labor department since 1908, said that he sometimes signed the pay rolls in the commissioner's name or in the deputy's name.

Kirby was shown ten pay vouchers introduced Thursday as government exhibit 127. He looked at the certifications signed "R. H. Fletcher" and also the same signature on the first line of each roll.

Court Doubts Testimony.

He said he could not say that it was Fletcher's signature, and added that he had never seen Fletcher sign his name in the time he had been connected with the labor commissioner.

When counsel for the government excused him Judge Session intervened.

"I want you to go back to Lansing and send some one here who knows that signature," he said.

Daniel C. Cody, a Bay City bank employé, said he brought Fletcher's signature card from the files of the Farmers' State Savings bank. He was shown the signatures, which Kirby could not recognize, and affirmed they were those of Fletcher.

PAIGE
The Most Beautiful Car in America

Friendship Honestly Earned

When the Paige first introduced its seven-passenger "Essex" model we straightway made a prediction.

We prophesied for this car a triumph and we declared with confidence that it would quickly win the leadership in its field.

That prophecy has been fulfilled in even greater measure than we had foreseen.

The distinctive beauty of its lines and above all the superiority of a power plant that only years of manufacturing experience could produce, compelled admiration and won instant allegiance.

Now, with the same mechanical excellence on which its leadership was originally based, with its magnificent power plant still further refined and perfected, it has entered the new year—the car of many friends.

The Paige "Essex" has won this friendship honestly because of superior quality and its greater measure of value.

And so long as Paige manufactures cars the ideals that won this friendship will continue to be its guide.

Adaptable to any modern type of furnace—steam, hot water or hot air

Nokol will make your furnace self-operative and oil burning

If your furnace is a good working plant, it doesn't matter what kind, whether steam, hot air or hot water, you can do much toward making it serve you more efficiently.

The process is simplicity itself. All you need do is to take your fire grates out and put Nokol in. A half day's work, yet it means the solution of your heating problem. For Nokol does for heating what electricity did for lighting.

An even temperature at all times

Nokol is the modern scientific oil burning system that automatically tends itself. It keeps your home at whatever temperature you desire, and it does so day and night without variation. Your furnace transformed by Nokol into an oil burning system will have a new and pleasing meaning to you.

Tends itself

The entire action of Nokol is automatically controlled by the thermostat. Through thermostatic control the house temperature is constant and even. You can take a vacation for a week and still be certain that Nokol is heating your home as you want it heated. And best of all, Nokol wastes no fuel. When the temperature you desire has been attained the thermostat shuts off the fuel, when it falls below the desired degree the flame is ignited and burns instantly at maximum efficiency the moment of ignition.

Eliminates the drudgery and mess of coal

And think what all this means to you and your family: No more of the dirt, ashes, soot and grime of coal. No more nasty furnace tending jobs when the janitor isn't around.

And it eliminates coal soot which ruins more fine draperies, curtains, laces, rugs and furniture than any other known agent. And is the ruination of many a finely decorated wall and the contaminator of the air. Nokol the efficient oil burner does away with all the nasty dirty coal fussing job.

A proven success

In the past two years Nokol has proven itself to be the most dependable and efficient heating apparatus as well as the cleanest and easiest operated wherever installed.

You will find its name on the approved list of the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

See Nokol demonstrated at your nearest dealer, or if there is no dealer in your territory, write for further data.

Price is $325.00 f. o. b. Chicago, complete without storage tank.

MAYWOOD WALKS TO AVOID PAYING 7 CENTS FARE

Citizens' "Strike" Told Of to Utility Board.

Maywood citizens are on a strike. Rather than pay 7 cent street car fare they are walking.

This declaration was made by Attorney Ode L. Rankin, representing the Maywood Commercial association, in whose behalf he appeared yesterday with a petition before the public utilities commission to have the car fare in Maywood reduced from 7 to at least 5 cents.

Voted for Reductions.

Commissioner Walter A. Shaw, who is hearing the case, was told by Attorney Rankin that 112 members of the association at a meeting Jan. 24 voted in favor of a reduction of fares in the village. The Chicago and West Towns railroad, which operates in Maywood, is the defendant.

The petition alleges that citizens in Maywood must pay 7 cents car fare for rides of hardly more than one-half mile long. This, the petition says, is the distance from the south end of the town to the business district, and from the residential district to the east, where the people connect with the Chicago lines. Attorney Rankin declared that a 10 cent fare is charged wherever the passengers want to transfer to the elevated or Chicago surface lines.

Give Up Using Cars.

"With such exorbitant prices for short distance hauls, many in Maywood have given up the use of street cars entirely. Others, when they are extremely busy or in a hurry, will use the transportation," Attorney Rankin said.

A request is also being made for additional and improved tracks.

Evanston and Wilmette to Discuss Consolidation

A massmeeting will probably be called some time next week in Evanston at which residents of that town and Wilmette will discuss the annexation of the latter to Evanston. Some of the residents of Evanston have been in fear that Chicago will eventually take in the two north shore towns through annexation. To combat this possibility some residents of the two towns are in favor of the consolidation of Wilmette and Evanston.

ETTELSON AID TO WED.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Adolph Radnitzer resigned yesterday to take a position in the investment department of the Union Trust company. Mr. Radnitzer spent Thursday buying furniture, and his marriage to Miss Marjorie Barr, daughter of Alfred E. Barr, president of the Chicago public library, is expected to take place soon.

ROBBERS BIND THREE AND GET $1,236 PAY ROLL

King Lock Co. Phone Girl Finds Victims.

Holdups using a license number on their automobile for which no owner could be found yesterday visited the King Lock company, on the fourth floor at 319 West Ohio street, bound three of the officials, and obtained $1,236.

They timed their visit with the arrival of the payroll. It had just been delivered. R. J. Lovon, manager of the company; J. T. Munds, assistant manager, and J. E. Battenfield, cashier, were in the office counting it and preparing when the four men entered.

Girl Frees Victims.

They covered the three officials with their revolvers, trussed them up with rope they had brought, and laid them over in a corner. Then they scooped up the money in silver and paper. In leaving one of the robbers tried to wrench the telephone from the wall. The receiver fell from the hook. Miss Helen Frank, observing the continued signal, went to the office, found the three prisoners, and unbound them.

Mystery in License Number.

Witnesses said the robbers drove east in Ohio street in a Dodge touring car which bore the license number 19651, 1920. That license is registered as issued to Frank Rogers of Sandwich, Ill., rural route 2. The chief of police there said he knew of no one of that name.

Capt. Dennis Malloy of the East Chicago avenue station and a squad of men in an automobile toured the district, but could find no trace of the robbers.

Defective Gas Jet Kills Two in Rooming House

A defective gas jet caused the death of two persons yestreday. Noticing that two of his roomers failed to get up to go to work, Albert Dietare, rooming house keeper at 1022 South Sangamon street, broke into the room occupied by Mike Papa and August Agucale, and found them dead.

FAMILY COLD AND ILL; REVIVES PLEA FOR COAL FUND

Renold Lusiani and his wife and five babies have been fighting a desperate battle at their shabby home at 855 Vernon Park place. The father is very ill, and is unable to work. The mother has pneumonia, and the babies are undernourished and cold.

That's just another of the pathetic pleas for help that come to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE coal fund. Capt. Dick, the good woman who does slum work for the Salvation Army in their district, sent a tiny coal supply to the sick family, but it will tide them over only briefly.

The babies had no clothes, only rags, and a few have been provided until something more can be done. The pantry was empty, but Capt. Dick sends bread each week.

THE TRIBUNE is asked to send enough coal to help the family over this cold spell.

If you want to help such worthy poor as the Lucianis, you can do it by contributing to THE TRIBUNE coal fund. There is an army of worthy poor just like them.

INDICT W. H. SAGE AND A. H. LAUER

The federal grand jury, completing its month's work yesterday, returned indictments against W. H. Sage, former head of the government narcotic bureau; Albert H. Lauer, secretary of Briggs & Turivas, salvage contractors, charged with handing a $15,000 bribe to a revenue agent; Irene Elizabeth McAuliff, absconding Franklin Park postmistress, and numerous lesser offenders.

Eleven counts appeared in the indictment against W. H. Sage. He is formally charged with accepting $4,400 from Dr. A. L. Blunt for unlawful purposes while he was a government officer.

Miss McAuliff is charged with taking $13,000 in government funds from the Franklin Park postoffie, and "spending it in company with Merle B. Inks." The latter is still in jail awaiting federal action upon his part in the runaway romance.

Byron Parks, colored leader, and his five accomplices in the "war risk" robber ring, were also indicted.

SPEEDWAY MAY GET HOSPITAL BY COMPROMISE

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—A final settlement of the controversy over the speedway hospital near Chicago seemed near today following another heated debate over the proposition in the house.

The house by a vote of 196 to 24 instructed its conferees to accept an amendment to the deficiency appropriation bill increasing the previously authorized fund for the completion of the Speedway project from $3,000,000 to $3,400,000. An amendment added by the senate had increased the amount to $3,500,000.

House conferees had refused to accept the amendment and returned to the house for additional instructions. On the motion of Representative Cannon of Illinois, one of the conferees, instructions to the committee to compromise at $3,400,000, with a proviso that the additional sum should not include any profit to the contractor, were voted.

Before the final vote was taken the house on a roll call defeated, 81 to 28, a substitute offered by Representative Byrnes of South Carolina repealing the entire authorization and directing the secretary of the treasury to build a new hospital on some other site in the vicinity of Chicago at a cost of not more than $3,000,00.

Chicago members who championed the cause of the speedway project, included Representatives Madden, Mann, Sabath and Chindblom.

Look in the Basement First

About the three most useless things in the world, aside from an alligator pear and the gas inspector, are a referee in a poker game, a belt when you are wearing galluses and a heating boiler which evades the issue just when you need it most.

The referee is superfluous, the belt is four-flushing and the decrepit heating boiler causes more misery than boils, backache and biliousness or the woman who lives over you and walks down the hall on her heels at bedtime.

How many times this winter have you hunched up to the radiator and worn out your vocabulary on the grinning image of J. Frost sitting athwart the top. And what have you said to yourself, about yourself, for renting that flat without LOOKING IN THE BASEMENT FIRST for the

KEWANEE

When are you going to learn, Austin, that you can't rent a flat intelligently by allowing your ideas of beauty and location to dominate your choice? When are you going to get wise to the fact that you've got to go into the basement—down there where the flat's heart beats—and find out whether it's a healthy heart or a halting one.

The American flat is just as good as the boiler that heats it. If the boiler is bum, the flat is bum no matter how beautiful it may be. But if it has a Kewanee Boiler in it, all its other beauties are accentuated. The trouble is that you choose your flat during the Summer-time, when the sun is hot and the boiler is far away from your thoughts. You don't look ahead to December and January. But you ought to.

Bear this in mind when you rent your next flat and meantime educate yourself as to the Mission of the Heating Boiler with relation to the life and disposition of the tenant. There's a big sermon in it.

Factory Enlarged—Production Doubled to Meet Increasing Popularity of Cole Aero-EIGHT

DURING 1919 only a fraction of the demand for Cole Aero-EIGHTS could be supplied, despite the fact that it was the largest production year which the Cole Motor Car Company had ever had. With the expansion of the factory to twice its former size, this production of Aero-EIGHTS will be more than doubled in 1920.

Though this will enable many motorists to own Cole Aero-EIGHTS who never before have been able to enjoy that privilege, several thousand unfilled orders carried over from 1919, must be accorded preferential deliveries during the early months of the present year.

Hence, all who now contemplate the purchase of Cole Aero-EIGHTS are urged to place their orders without delay, indicating the date of delivery desired, so that equitable distribution of the product may be made and prompt deliveries assured.

MOTOR AND WALK TO "FRESH FROM FARM MARKET"

Northwest Side Flocks to New Food Center.

BY AL CHASE.

Public markets in European cities are taken for granted by the citizens of Europe—and patronized. No city or town is without them. For some unexplained reason, the idea has never made much headway in this country. The famous market in Washington, D. C., is a notable exception. There are a few others in eastern cities that have made good.

But Chicagoans in the main have been indiffernet to market projects Several have started with a roar and ended with a whisper. During the last twelve months the worried housewife has begun to look askance at her rapidly increasing meat and grocery bills and wonder if there was a remedy.

Forthwith stepped the market gentleman and announced in loud and penetrating tones that the public market is a remedy—and for the first time Mrs. Chicago has listened and pondered. And then she got out a basket or maybe she climbed into her car—and to the market she hurried.

Buy New Market Site.

One of the most interesting of Chicago's market projects and one which has nearly a year of success to its credit and which has important plans for development, is the Irving Park Public market which opened for business in July, 1918 at Elston and Central Park avenues. It has been so successful that its promoters, the business men of the neighborhood and the Cook County Truck Gardeners' and Farmers association, with 1,600 members, have incorporated the Elston Farmers Market company, with $65,000 capital, and purchased a new site, three times larger than the present one. The new market will open early in July. It will be called the Elston Farmers' market.

It is at Elston and Ridgeway avenues, with 142 feet on Ridgeway, 326 feet on Elston and 31 feet feet on Belleplaine avenue. Its reported cost is $33,000. It is predicted by Gustave H. Jacobsen, of Fry & Jacobsen, one of the incorporators of the new company and broker in the real estate deals, that a chain of markets similar to this one will be established throughout the city.

From Wagon to Housewife.

The new market will have a building 75x70 to accommodate the counters of the grocery, fruit and meat men. Outside there will be an open space 50x125 for the wagons of the truck gardeners. These run from seventy to 100 loads daily with a high point of 130 loads reached last summer. Produce is sold direct from the wagons to the customers.

Ond don't think the customers all come by foot. One day last summer 2,300 machines were counted, whose owners were trotting around the market buying vegetables which were fresh from the farm and at prices lower than they paid at their neighborhood grocery store. The high record of customers for one day was 39,656.

"Fresh from the Farm."

"Fresh from the farm" is a slogan which is made a lot of by the market folk. "Vegetables don't have to go way to South Water street and then come way back the next day or so, wilted and dusty" explained Mr. Jacobsen. "The market is open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. Wagons are there when the markets starts business in the morning, loaded with freshly picked vegetables. An every load is a bona fide lot of produce grown by the owner of the wagon. We don't allow any peddlers who have bought a load from South Water street or some one else to resell it here. Every seller is a grower of the stuff he sells.

"Each farmer pays 15 cents daily for the privilege of using the market to dispose of a single load of produce. If it's a double load he pays 25 cents.

Open Year Round.

"Inside the building we have six different fruit men, a grocer, a meat market, a fish shop, a bakery, a flour and feed concern, a flower and seed company, an ice cream booth, and a lunchroom. The merchants pay $2 a front foot of counter space, ten feet deep, per month. This includes light and janitor service. We make two year leases with all but the fruit dealers. We make no leases with them. Our gross sales range from $7,000 to $20,000 daily."

The outside market is open from May to November. The inside market is open the year round. The new market will open on July 6 and at that time the old market will be given up.

Downtown Loan Made on a 5½ Per Cent Basis

With interest rates creeping up to 6½ per cent it is interesting to note that Edgar M. Snow & Co. have made a loan of $75,000 for five years at 5½ per cent secured by the four story brick building and fee, 25x101, at 532-34 South State street.

HENRY FIELD HOME WILL BE K. P. CLUBHOUSE

'Kid' Howard Loses His Famed Haven.

Another of the famous old residences in Chicago's first north side gold coast —"the old Field house"—erected by and for many years the home of the late Henry Field, brother of Marshall Field, at 16 East Ontario street, has been purchased through Harold Bradley & Co. by the Knights of Pythias for $48,000, and will be used as a clubhouse.

The house was built by Mr. Field at a cost of $75,000. Later he added a fireproof annex to house his famous collection of paintings, now in the Art institute, at a cost of $28,000. The interior is said to contain some of the finest woodwork to be found in Chicago. The rooms are so large that it is understood no alterations will be necessary to make them suitable for club purposes. The house is 38x40 and has twenty-five rooms.

After Henry Field moved to England to live Mrs. David Wegg lived there for several years. Later it dropped in the social scale to a boarding house and still later slid a peg farther down when it became "the Howard club," operated by "Kid" Howard, and recently achieving first page fame with a nifty Fred Pasley story about a police gambling raid.

NORTH SHORE HAS BUILDING BOOM

A north shore building boom of large proportions was disclosed yesterday when Assessor George R. Harbaugh of New Trier township announced that his investigation shows that permits issued during the past year for the construction of new homes total nearly $2,000,000.

Winnetka and Wilmette are running a close race as a location for new north shore suburban homes, the figures showing that permits aggregating $790,490 were issued in the former, while Wilmette's total was $709,489. Glencoe issued permits for new construction amounting to $292,175.

Some of the more expensive Winnetka structures are: Laird Bell, $50,000; W. G. Walling, $30,000; T. N. Brooks, $25,000, and Mrs. C. Bulger, $30,000. Mrs. J. P. Hooker will be issued a permit for a residence costing $125,000. Several new homes costing between $20,000 and $40,000 are being built at Indian Hill.

Pay $300,000 for Four West Side Buildings

Nathan J. Ullman and Jacob N. Nusbaum, owners of the Continental Clothing house, have purchased from the heirs of Solomon Fischman the three story building, 24x100, at 1245 Milwaukee avenue; the three story building at 1232 Milwaukee avenue; the two story frame building at 1256 Milwaukee avenue, and the one story frame building at 1608 West Division street, for $300,000, subject to $50,000. The two frame buildings afterwards were resold to Louis P. Mann and S. Sigal for $92,500. Joseph G. Sackheim & Co., Shaeffer & Foster, and Straus & Straus represented all parties.

Another Milwaukee avenue sale was the purchase by Herman Voss, manager of the Continental Clothing house, from Leon Sigman of the Scotch Woolen Mills, of the three story building, 46x100, at 1379-81 Milwaukee avenue, for a reported $82,500, subject to $35,000, through Sackheim & Co.

Trades 1,200 Acre Canada Farm for North Side Flats

A 1,200 acre farm in the Red River valley, south of Winnipeg, Man., valued at $70,000, was given by A. F. Shepherd of Springfield, Ill., to W. J. Macdonald for the equity in the twenty-eight apartment building at 1523-27 North La Salle street, subject to $30,000. The lot is 75x150. Hulton, Seelye & Co. were brokers.

RE-ENTERS NORTH CENTRAL FIELD.

Arthur S. Carruthers, agent for University of Notre Dame, is resuming management of the Louise A. Boyd properties given up when he entered service. He will remove his offices to the Bush Temple and continue to specialize in the Calumet district and the management of estates. Elmer A. Hedin will be associated with him.

SUGGEST ACKLEY FOR ZONING BODY.

Ivan O. Ackley, former president of the Chicago Real Estate board, has been suggested to Mayor Thompson in a resolution adopted at the weekly meeting of the board, as a member of the new city zoning commission. A committee of three will advise the mayor of the selection.

BOOSTERS' CLUB ITEM.

Julius F. Cornelius of the Chicago Real Estate board has been appointed by the mayor as chairman of the real estate division of the Chicago Boosters' club.

ELECTRIC SHOP CUTS WAY THROUGH WALL TO DEARBORN ST.

Chicago's Electric Shop, the largest in the world, having gradually absorbed all the available floor space in the Edison building, 22,000 square feet, has been forced to knock a twenty foot hole in the wall of the Marquette building and lease 9,000 square feet of space now occupied by Grommes & Ullrich, wholesale liquor dealers.

This will give the Commonwealth Edison company an entrance on Dearborn street, and an under cover walk or arcade a block long for customers on their way to the general offices to pay bills, etc. The Dearborn street frontage will extend from the main entrance of the Marquette building north to the alley. In addition 6,000 square feet of storage space in the Marquette building basement is leased for the same period—ten years. The new annex is expected to open early in April.

The Electric Shop first opened its doors in the Railway Exchange building in 1909. When the Edison company bought the Continental and Commercial National Bank building at Clark and Adams streets and renamed it the Edison building, they opened a second Electric Shop. In 1918 the Michigan avenue shop was merged with it.

DREXEL CAFE AND M'DERMOTT'S TO BE FOOD SHOPS

Two more well known thirst shops in Chicago's south side wet lands—the Drexel café, cabaret and bar, at the northeast corner of Cottage Grove and Thirty-ninth street, and McDermott's bar, at the northeast corner of Wabash and Van Buren, have decided to quit business, and John R. Thompson has aided them in this resolve.

He has leased McDermott's, 25x100, from Richard Curran for ten years from March 1, at $14,000 per annum, and will open his hundred and steenth eating place as soon as possible. Silver's "new" Friars' inn is in the basement and the Eat Shop cafeteria directly overhead on the second floor.

The Drexel, one of the best known of the south side cabarets, will be remodeled at a reported expense of $50,000 into a high class dance hall. A new name is to be selected. It will open March 16, according to present plans.

A Thompson lunchroom will occupy the corner where the Drexel bar used to be. Improvements to cost $25,000 are now under way. The other four stores in the building have been leased by the new management of the property, Clyde R. Bates, for long terms at advanced rentals.

Pays Rent for 30 Years Without Lease, Then Buys

For the last thirty years Bernard Weinstein has had a jewelry store at 1334 South Halsted street, at the southwest corner of Maxwell street. During three decades he has paid rent promptly, but has never had a lease. Four months ago his landlord, Alexander Byers, sold the two story frame building, with 100 feet Halsted street frontage and 47 feet on Maxwell, to Henry Wolf. Yesterday Mr. Weinstein decided he had paid rent long enough. He bought the property from Mr. Wolf for $92,000 cash, through Rosenberg & Lurie.

LOGAN SQUARE DISTRICT LIKE A NEW WILSON AVE.

Many Buildings Under Construction.

Logan Square is fast getting to be the Wilson aveneu district of the northwest side. It has many points of similarity with its north side rival. The district is crossed by a magnificent boulevard, and it is the terminus of an L line.

There are several big projects under way, which are almost ready to be made public. Several more have been given out during the last few days.

From a business standpoint one of the most attractive of the new projects is the Buick sales building to be erected by the Charles Lange & Brothers company at 2627 Milwaukee avenue, 100 feet northwest of Kedzie avenue, to cost approximately $250,000. It will be used exclusively for the selling of automobiles.

Will Use Flood Lights.

Architect Clarence Hatzfeld has designed a building 75x125 square feet, sixty-five feet high, with a clock tower 38 feet above the roof, with dial faces on four sides eleven feet in diameter. Flood lights will glow on the tower and clocks at night. The building is expected to be ready for occupancy in the early summer.

Another important addition to the Logan Square district will be the $300,000 Masonic temple, also designed by Architect Hatzfeld, at the northeast corner of Kedzie boulevard and North Albany avenue. The property was recently purchased for $37,500 and three modern buildings are being torn down to make way for the new temple, which will be 95x120.

It will be the home of the Logan Square lodge A. F. and A. M. Masons, the Logan Square Royal Arch Masons, the Logan Square chapter of the Eastern Star, and several other northwest side lodges. It will contain a large ball room, three lodge halls, a large banquet hall, club rooms, and other features.

Plan $110,000 Synagogue.

Still another big improvement in this district is the new $110,000 synagogue to be built by the Logan Square Congregation Shaare Zedek on Fullerton avenue, just east of Kedzie boulevard. Plans are being drawn by Alexander H. Spitz and Aroner & Bacon, associate architects, and work will begin next month. There will be a social center with a capacity of 1,000 on the first floor, with library, Sunday school rooms, gymnasium, kitchen, and dining room, and rabbi's study. The synagogue will seat 1,200. The lot is 75x133. A building fund campaign is now under way.

Another big project to start in a few weeks is the 3,500 seat movie to be built by Lubliner & Trinz at the southwest corner of Milwaukee and Sawyer avenues. The site was bought through F. S. Kunkel & Co. for $65,000. It has a Milwaukee avenue frontage of 250 feet. If certain negotiations now under way, are carried out, the theater may be made to seat 4,500. Its cost will be in the neighborhood of $600,000. Walter Alschlager is architect. Inclined planes will take the place of stairways. Lubliner & Trinz now operate nineteen theaters in Chicago and vicinity.

Illinois Steel Buys 34 Acre Tract in Thornton

Five hundred dollars an acre, or $17,163 for thirty-four and one-third acres, has been paid by the Illinois Steel company to Margaret D. Morse of New York for property adjoining its present holding of 160 acres in Thornton and fronting on the Belt Line railway. Title was taken in the name of E. B. Harkness, assistant treasurer of the steel company. J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co. and E. A. Cummings & Co. were brokers. It is understood the steel company plans extensive improvements later on.

Motor Truck Company Rents $76,000 Building

Motor row's newest building, a one story structure, to cost $76,000 and to be erected at the northwest corner of Calumet avenue and Twenty-third street, 120x175, has been leased by Alfred H. Gross, through Oliver & Co., to the Clydesdale Motor Truck company for fifteen years at a term rental of approximately $177,000. Subsequently the Triangle Motors, Inc., subleased the west half of the building at an annual rental of $7,500.

NEW GARAGE FOR MAYWOOD.

Davies & Co. of Maywood have purchased from C. R. Craig Jr. of Harvey the entire Madison street frontage, north front, between Second and Third avenues, Maywood, for a reported price of $6,000. The lot is 262x132. A garage covering the entire frontage is planned.

NEW YORK BANK STATEMENT IS MORE FAVORABLE

The weekly statement of the New York clearing house banks, issued yesterday, made a more favorable exhibit. Although there was some increase in loans, this gain was almost covered by the increase in deposits. In the working out of the week's business the aggregate cash of reserves on hand increased $28,069,000. The increase in deposits and the higher reserve requirements were more than offset by the gain in cash so that the surplus reserve was increased by $27,121,240. This item now stands at $35,192,660. The treasury department further reduced its balances until this item now stands at the small amount of $18,029,-

Chicago Bank Satement.

The weekly statement of the federal reserve bank of Chicago gave evidence of increased demand for credit. The member banks increased their borrowings on government obligations by about 000,000, and also increased their borrowings on commercial paper by about 000,000.

These sharp increases in borrowings are regarded as responsible for the advance on Friday in the rediscount rate on loans secured by treasury certificates of indebtedness and an advance yesterday from 5 to 5¼ per cent in the rate on loans secured by bankers' acceptances. These advances show the purpose of the reserve board and banks to deflate expanded credit as represented by loans.

Other reserve banks showed a decrease of about $7,500,000 in their borrowings from the local institution.

The increased demand for money is evidenced in the increase in federal reserve notes in actual circulation, this item rising to $508,925,205, an increase of $7,-925 over the previous week.

The expansion in rediscounts and note circulation was accompanied by a decrease of $7,305,000 in gold reserves, so that the reserve ratio fell to a new low record of 44 per cent, compared with per cent in the preceding week.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account for the week ending Feb. 25, 1920, reported by 187 banks in twenty-three leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $982,410,000, compared with $1,111,029,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account of twenty-two of these clearing house centers were $977,810,000, compared with 419,000 for the corresponding week of last year.

R. G. Dun & Co. reported 130 commercial failures last week compared with 124 in the preceding week and 136 in the corresponding week in 1919.

The new non-par common stock of the General Motors company will be traded in on the New York stock exchange tomorrow. The 15,703,310 shares form the largest single holding on the exchange, superseding the common stock of the United States Steel corporation, of which there is slightly more than 5,000,000 shares.

The syndicate which offered the $13,000,- first mortgage seven per cent serial bonds of the Chicago By-Products Coke company reports the entire issue sold.

Total gold holdings of the United States on March 1 were $2,762,905,481, a decrease of 006,825 from Jan. 1 and the lowest amount since December, 1916, when they were $2,741,669,491. January was the consecutive month to show a decrease.

Dividend and interest requirements in March are estimated at $267,990,504, compared with $259,981,785 in March, 1919.

STOCK BUYING IS CONFINED TO RAILWAY ISSUES

The New York Times.

New York, Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Buying of stocks in today's session was confined mainly to the railroad list and among these it was the low priced issues which received greatest attention.

After fairly extensive advance in the first hour, prices became affected by a persistent output of realizing sales, as was the case on other days of the week after the rail stocks had moved forward.

There appeared, however, to be comparatively little pressure from sales for the short account, either among the rails or industrial shares, and at the close fractional gains predominated.

Optimistic Over Rails.

While the movement of stocks last week were irregular and hardly of themselves indicative of positive speculative opinion the comment of commission houses indicated considerable satisfaction over the railroad outlook. This was based more on the fact that the railway bill received the approval of the attorney general and went quickly to the president for his signature than upon particular features of the act. The improvement of sentiment toward the carriers was enough to cause at least a moderate expansion of speculation for the rise of the retarding influence of adverse credit factors had been present.

Forward Movement Remote.

As the bank statements disclosed a less favorable condition in respect to loans and discounts in today's reports than a week before, the chances of a genuine forward movement of stocks under substantial buying seemed remote.

SHORT SELLERS ARE CAUGHT IN GRAIN MARKET

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Overconfidence on the part of the short sellers led to their undoing, as commission houses and local bulls bought on the breaks, and a general evening up for the week made a strong close at nearly the highest of the day. Selling pressure was lighter. Net gains for the day were 1c to 1⅛c on corn, ⅜c to ¾c on oats, and 1c to 1¼c on rye. Southwestern corn markets were not as strong as Chicago.

Lowest prices for grains were made at the opening of the week and highest on Friday, with the close at net gains of 6@6½c on the near futures and May corn, and 2⅛@3¼c on distant months. Oats gained 2c, rye 4c, barley 2½c. Pork was 15@35c higher, lard 12½@17½c lower, and short ribs 17½@20c higher.

Short Covering Rallies Corn.

Local traders were more disposed to press the short side of corn. Prices were forced off about 1c on the May, but at $1.35 and under commission houses were free buyers on resting orders, taking the surplus out of the pit. Toward the last shorts started to cover, evening up for the week, and found limited offerings. A bulge of 2⅜c followed with the close about the top, or 5⅝c over the July, against 5⅞c over Friday. February broke 4½c early, and rallied that much, closing unsettled at $1.44½@1.45½; March was $1.44½.

With the railroads back in private hands the trade expect larger receipts in the near future, but there was little in the cash situation to cause much bearishness. Country offerings small, with outside markets outbidding Chicago as much as 10c per bu downstate for deferred shipment.

July Oats Gaining Friends.

July oats are fast gaining many friends on account of the big discount under the May. Bulk of the pressure was on the latter delivery, and, with corn weak, prices declined, only to rally toward the last on short covering and closed within ⅛c of the top premium over July, narrowing ½c. Shipping business was checked by lack of offerings for prompt shipment. Country offerings were small.

Seaboard bids on rye advanced ¼c to 12¾c over May, track Baltimore, a new high on the crop, with sales of 25,000 bu here. Duluth sold 700,000 bu to the seaboard for shipment at the opening of navigation at 4c over May c. i. f. Buffalo. The northwest sold May here, while cash interests and houses with seaboard connections bought, futures closing higher. No. 2 on track was 1c under May.

Barley dull and unchanged, with malting sold at $1.40 and screenings at $1.23. Receipts 9 cars.

Liquidation in Lard.

Lard was sold fairly by commission houses and packers' brokers, and broke 25c, with a reaction of 15c at the last. Buying was by stockyards interests. The Armour circular made a bearish situation out of the export trade. Cash business was light. Packing in Chicago for the winter season is approximately 3,146,000 hogs, or 899,000 short of last year. Shipments of lard and meats for the week were the lightest in some time, and materially under last year's. Prices follow:

PRODUCE MARKETS

Butter prices advanced ½c on Saturday, with a more active trade in small lots. Receipts for the week were 31,930 tubs, against 26,833 tubs last year. Cold storage stocks are down to 5,908,706 lbs, against 3,813,617 lbs last year.

Eggs were sold readily at former prices. Supplies are liberal. Receipts for the week were 73,191 cases, compared with 68,005 cases last year. Fresh firsts were 51@51½c. Sales of 30 cars fresh, March delivery, were at 39½c, and 11 cars storage packed, April, at 41c.

Live poultry prices were unchanged, the market being firm, with a good demand, fowls bringing 35c, spring chickens 33c, and old roosters 24c.

Potato prices were higher at $4.60@4.75 for round white stock in car lots in bulk. Arrivals were 36 cars Saturday and 220 cars for the week, or 28 cars less than last year.

Omaha reported a big demand there, but prices were unchanged, while at Kansas City the call was very slow with considerable hard winter carried over unsold, prices being 3@8c lower. Red winter was unchanged. Minneapolis unchanged.

While receipts of corn here were rather liberal for a Saturday, the demand was fair and prices were unchanged to 2c lower, with No. 3 mixed showing the most decline. The close was about the top. Receipts 109 cars. St. Louis unchanged to 3c lower; Kansas City, 1@3c lower; Omaha and Peoria unchanged to 1c lower; and Milwaukee 1c lower.

Premiums on cash oats at Chicago were firm, with No. 2 white 8@8¼c over and No. 3 white 7¼@7¾c over May. Sample values unchanged to 1c lower, with receipts 80 cars. St. Louis unchanged; Omaha, Kansas City, and Peoria ½c lower, and Milwaukee 1c lower.

Grain Movement Better; Embargoes Are Modified

The grain movement is increasing. Chicago had 4,952,000 bu last week, an increase of 433,000 bu over the previous week and 1,488,000 bu above last year, although the total was 788,000 bu short of the five year average. The big gains were in corn and oats for the week and last year.

The last report of revenue loadings to be issued by the regional director in the northwestern zone was for the week ended Feb. 24, showing 10,105 cars of grain loaded, compared with 9,892 cars the previous week and 9,546 cars last year. Total loadings of all freight were 112,605 cars, or 11,113 cars more than last year.

Eastern roads are modifying their embargoes and have taken considerable foodstuffs for New England, where supplies are light. The situation at Chicago and Buffalo has been greatly improved.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The bearish view taken by the traders who paid attention to Baruch's statement got the shorts in bad yesterday, as commission houses took their offerings and reversed the market's action. There is a great deal of bearish sentiment and talk, based largely on the economic conditions, which so far has not dislodged any great amount of corn to the country. The rally made the bulls more confident and the bears less so. The general impression is that purchases on sharp breaks and sales only on quick upturns are to be considered seriously.

It is said that July oats were heavily oversold and that the 7c discount under May is too great. The trade in general is looking for oat reserves on the farms to be moderate, although Clement Curtis returns indicate that they may be larger than expected.

Deliveries of cash corn on February sales yesterday were 80,000. There was a slight technical mixup on 20,000 at the last. Lewis paid for 50,000. Total deliveries for the month of February were 275,000 bu.

With a return of the railroads to private ownership today the grain trade is looking for considerable improvement in transportation facilities. One of the closest students of conditions says that the first step will probably be to rearrange things so that shippers on the individual lines can be taken care of. Since 1914 a large proportion of equipment from all roads has naturally moved to trunk line territory, where much of it has been held indefinitely, so that eastern lines have had from 125 to 280 per cent of ownership. This is one of the reasons for long and continued scarcity of cars in the grain belt. He believes that western roads will now adopt the policy of keeping cars at home and where they will be available for agricultural interests.

A sharp break in wheat prices is expected at Minneapolis. Mills there have been buying considerable grain of late in order to get cars to ship their produce, but with the roads back in private hands they are said to have been assured that cars will be available. There is still much wheat held at terminal markets belonging to mills who have been unable to secure a shipment, and unless the grain can be moved within a reasonable time it is expected that it will be turned back to the grain corporation from which it was purchased.

Sales of flour by the grain corporation to the public are regarded as having some effect on the wheat market. A miller figures that every time a barrel is sold by the government it is sufficient to take care of the needs of one person for a year.

There has been more or less cash corn bought of late by Canadian mills despite the low rate of exchange. Both white and yellow have been taken.

Frank F. Thompson has been admitted as a general partner in the firm of James E. Bennett & Co.

Some of the seaboard exporters expressed the view that the purchase of 700,000 bu rye at Duluth was to fill ocean room, while others thought it was for Austria and was financed through Paris.

Joseph Wild, with E. W. Wagner & Co., estimates that farm reserves of corn will range from 1,020,000,000 to 1,080,000,000 bu, but is inclined to believe that the world's situation will support May corn within a range of $1.25@1.60, but hardly above that figure.

The Kensington Elevator company will take over the Michigan Central elevator at One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street and Cottage Grove avenue on March 1. The company is headed by W. P. Anderson, president, and F. H. Mealiff as vice president and general manger. A number of other Board of Trade people are interested.

Forman Farm Mortgages and The Forman Monthly Payment Plan
How Forman Farm Mortgages Are Made

For Those Who Can't Afford to Lose

There are many people who are not satisfied with the low interest received on their savings accounts and yet are afraid to make investments which pay higher rates because of the great danger of losing all they have.

One form of investment, however, is free from that great danger and pays 6% and 6½% interest.

We mean FORMAN FARM MORTGAGE INVESTMENTS.

Banks, Trustees and Insurance Companies are the heaviest investors in this type of investments because they "can't afford to lose." If Forman Farm Mortgages are safe enough for them they are safe enough for you and you can start at once to make your savings earn 6% or better.

CANDY EXPORTS FROM U.S. SHOW IMMENSE GAIN

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—Exports of confectionery from the United States during 1919 increased tenfold over 1918, according to statistics compiled by the department of commerce, the declared value being $12,305,000, against $1,225,000. Imports totaled only $195,000.

The enforcement of embargoes by foreign countries during the first half of last year prevented the record exports from being at least 30 per cent greater, it was estimated.

Great Britain ranked first among the consumers of American candy, exports to British ports composing 34 per cent of the total. Shipments to the orient also showed large increases.

The advent of American soldiers in foreign countries undoubtedly had much to do with the increased popularity of the sweets to which they were accustomed, the report said.

Steel Corporation to Build Homes for Employes

New York, Feb. 28.—The United States Steel corporation has completed plans for the erection of homes for its employés on a cost and easy payment basis, which it will recommend to each of its subsidiary organizations, it was learned here today.

The proposed homes include wood, brick, stone and stucco structures, with prices ranging from $3,000 upward. These will be sold to workers at 10 per cent down, and the rest in installments extending over a ten year period.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS

Federal Reserve System Under Fire in Congress

Washington, D. C., Feb. 28.—Investigation of the entire federal reserve banking system, especially to determine if there is an inflation of currency responsible for the high cost of living, was proposed in a resolution introduced today by Representative King, Republican, Illinois, a member of the banking and currency committee.

Inquiry also would be made as to reports of coercive measures to force banks to join the reserve system; competition and open market transactions, "alleged and unexpected" earnings, said to be 110 per cent for surplus alone; payments of salaries and bonuses, and alleged attempted destruction "of the independence of the great state bank systems."

From the accompanying letter of Wm. J. Casey, President of the Company, we summarize as follows:

BUSINESS: THE CASEY-HUDSON COMPANY, of CHICAGO, is an Illinois corporation, doing a very large general business in automatic screw machine products besides manufacturing and marketing several important articles in large quantities. It is probably the largest company of its character in the Middle West.

Gross sales for the year 1919 were over $850,000. From the present indications this should be doubled during the year 1920.

NET QUICK ASSETS: The Net Quick Assets including Brown & Sharpe Automatic Screw Machines, valued at $139,000, exceed $442,000, or $147 per share of Preferred Stock.

TOTAL NET TANGIBLE ASSETS are $617,459.93, or over $200 per share of the Preferred Stock.

EARNINGS: Average Annual Net Earnings of the Company, before Federal Income Taxes and depreciation, for four years ending December 31, 1919, were $109,177.98, or over four and one-half times dividend requirements on the Preferred Stock. After Federal Taxes, but before depreciation, the Average Net Earnings for the same period amounted to $88,402.01, or three and one-half times dividend requirements.

Net earnings for the year 1919, before Federal Taxes and depreciation, amounted to $121,530.67, or five times dividend charges and after deducting a liberal allowance for Federal Income Tax, they figure the dividend requirements are earned nearly four times.

DIVERSIFICATION: The business of the company's customers and the work done for them is such that the diversification of its products cover parts of automobiles, sewing machines, adding machines, talking machines, typewriters, electrical apparatus, telephone and telegraph parts, small and large tools, cameras, soda water fountain supplies, surgical instruments, and a large number of parts used in many products.

The company's customers include such firms as Marshall Field & Company, Packard Motor Car Company, Brunswick-Balke-Collender Company, Duntley Pneumatic Tool Company, Stromberg Motor Devices Company, Stutz Motor Company, Oliver Typewriter Company and many other of the leading industrial companies of the Middle West.

PREFERRED STOCK PROVISIONS: The Preferred Stock is preferred as to assets and dividends. No mortgage or other lien, except purchase money mortgage, may be placed on the properties of the company ranking ahead of, or equal to, the Preferred Stock, without the consent of 75% of the amount of Preferred Stock outstanding.

Net Quick Assets shall be maintained at all times to an amount equal to 100% of the outstanding Preferred Stock.

The Company will not issue stock of one maturity in exchange for stock of a different maturity.

No redeemed stock can be reissued.

LEGALITY: All proceedings in connection with the issuance of this stock have been carried out under the supervision of Messrs. Mayer, Meyer, Austrian & Platt, Chicago, Illinois, and their favorable opinion as to legality is on file in our office.

AUDIT: The books and accounts of the company have been audited by Messrs. Haskins & Sells, Chicago, Ill.

APPRAISAL: The property of the company has been appraised by Coats & Burchard.

ROAD BIDS FOUND 'UNREASONABLE' BY CONFERENCE

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 28.—[Special.]—Gov. Lowden, state highway officials, road advisers and representatives of the Chicago Motor club, in conference today, decided that road contractors are attempting to profiteer in Illinois. They did not say so bluntly, but politely referred to the bids as "unreasonable," doubtless meaning bids between $43,000 and $48,000 a mile.

At present prices of labor, materials and freight, they reckoned, after detailed inquiry by state engineers and cost analysts, that roads can be built at a fair profit for less than the last bids received.

440 Miles Assured.

Illinois will go ahead with contracts awarded last year for about 440 miles at an average price of $32,000 a mile. If some one falls down on this, there will be trouble.

"I think this will be more than any other state in the union will be able to construct this year," commented Gov. Lowden.

The Illinois Farmers' institute sent a letter to the governor saying:

"We recommend for consideration to the department of public works the cessation of letting contracts for road-building at present excessive prices for material and labor."

Will Complete Work Begun.

After the conference a statement was issued saying, "It was unanimously decided that the state will use every influence to complete this year all uncompleted roads now under contract, amounting to about 440 miles of the federal aid system, and will contract to construct such additional mileage as can be built at anything like a reasonable price."

It continued:

"The ability to secure cars will largely determine the program. It is expected that location, surveys and grading and possibly some bridge work on other roads included in the $60,000,000 bond issue will go forward."

Besides the governor, those at the conference were: Director of Public Works Bennett, Assistant Director Vennum, Superintendent of Highways Bradt, Chief Engineer Older from the Chicago Motor club, F. E. Jack, F. R. Cook, Frank Childs, Owen O'Malley, and W. G. Edens, Joseph M. Page, Harry Shade, and Arthur Hall, state highway advisors.

On March 3 the state will receive more bids for highways.

Revolution in Railway Finances.

In preparation for the return of the railways to the companies, after over two years of government operation, both houses of congress have adopted a bill to provide for their finances. Their equipment is run down and inadequate, and their operating expenses have increased so enormously that many of them are not earning their fixed charges, and few are earning dividends.

In order to enable the companies to keep out of bankruptcy and restore the properties to an efficient operating basis the bill continues the present government compensation for six months and provides for a year and a half thereafter average earnings of 5½ per cent on the "value of the property used in the service of transportation." This value is to be fixed by the interstate commerce commission. After March 1, 1922, the commission may change the average rate of return.

For the purpose of making rates which will yield 5½ per cent the commission is to divide the country into districts. Each district will have its rates adjusted so that the aggregate return on all the railway property within its limits will be 5½ per cent. As some roads are more favorably located than others, and some, through abler management in the past, have become more efficient, they evidently will earn more than the average return, while the poorly located and inefficient roads will earn less.

If a road earns more than 5½ per cent it may use the first one-half of 1 per cent in unproductive improvements, such as building terminals or eliminating grade crossings. All that it earns over 6 per cent is to be divided, one-half going into its own reserve fund and the other half into a "general contingent fund," held under the control of the interstate commission. This contingent fund may be loaned to railways in need of assistance at 6 per cent interest, payable semi-annually, and on security approved by the commission. In effect, then, a road that can earn more than the average return will pay half of its extra profits to the government, while one that cannot earn the average will get merely what it earns. If its credit is too poor to borrow elsewhere it may be able to negotiate a loan from the government at 6 per cent.

After March 1, 1922, the financial fate of the railways will be wholly in the hands of the interstate commission. It can reduce the average return far enough to starve all the poorer roads into bankruptcy, or it can keep the rate high enough to enable them to build up their credit and earning power. The only thing it cannot do is to let the well located and well managed roads keep all they earn.

The "general contingent fund," which will be in the hands of the commission, is likely to attain great size and importance. The commission may not only lend it at 6 per cent interest, but can use it for the purchase of equipment and facilities which may be leased to railways at a rental sufficient to pay a 6 per cent return on the money, plus depreciation.

Brief Answers.

ANILINE DYES
CHEMICALS RIT

Aniline Dyes Are Used by 75% of All Industries

Nature, the Artist, paints a scenic splendor with color pigments of her own making. And Man creates an Industry that he may rival Nature with a colorful brilliancy of his own. Centuries of use have fashioned the consumption of dyes in such a multiplicity of ways that we little recognize the extent to which we do put the made Colors of Man. Almost everything that we wear or use in the home, factory and office extends a market to the Dye Industry.

Because it is an economic necessity the Dye Industry is stable and permanent. American made dyes have taken the place of the German product.

While manufacturers of Textiles, Leather Goods, Paper, Paints, Inks, etc., use millions of pounds of dyes annually, another big source of profit for the dye manufacturer is in the perfection of the art of dyeing garments in the home. In the rapid development of this profitable part of the Dye Industry the Sunbeam Chemical Company is universally acknowledged to have played the leading part. Their product—the trade name of which is "RIT"—has attained world-wide distribution. The "RIT" product is only part of the business of the Sunbeam Chemical Company, but its sales alone reach tremendous proportions.

Over 50,000,000 packages of "RIT" have been sold through 4,000 Jobbers and 350,000 Retailers. At Cable, Wisconsin, a fully equipped manufacturing plant, with an annual capacity of 1,500,000 pounds, is in operation making aniline dyes of all classes. Here also the Sunbeam Chemical Company manufactures the dyestuffs used in the production of "RIT," also allied chemical products, materially reducing manufacturing costs, as well as increasing net revenues.

Many of these allied products are prescribed and used by leading physicians, surgeons, hospitals, municipalities, factories, etc., and constitute another and additional source of income.

The Sunbeam Chemical Company has behind it an unusual record for stability and capable management—and before it an earning capacity of great proportions.

34,000 INCOME TAX PAYERS USE TRIBUNE BUREAU

More than 34,000 income tax return blanks have been given out to taxpayers by THE TRIBUNE's income tax bureau during the last six weeks, since the beginning of the filing period. The majority of these were for incomes of less than $5,000. THE TRIBUNE printed at its own expense 20,500 blanks for the return of such incomes, so that the public might continue filing during the periods when the government supply was exhausted.

Two Weeks Left.

Only two weeks remain in which to file returns of income, as all returns must be in the hands of the collector of internal revenue on or before March 15. Those who have been putting off their filing are urged not to delay further, as it is going to become more and more difficult to get advice and assistance owing to the increasing rush at all income tax bureaus as the last day of grace approaches.

There seems still to be considerable doubt in the minds of many people as to just who is required to file an income tax return. A good many are under the impression that every one must file regardless of the size of his income. This impression is erroneous. The only ones who are required to file a return are single persons whose net incomes for 1919 amounted to $1,000 or married couples (living together) whose net income was $2,000 during that year.

Service Salaries Exempt.

Those who were in the active military or naval forces of the United States during any part of the year need not file a return if their incomes from such source was $3,500 or less and they had no other income of an amount sufficient in itself to require them to render a return of income.

A typographical error which occurred yesterday in the answer to "C. E. W." in this column is here corrected: The first sentence should have read: "You will not have to include the earnings of this child in your return, as he is not dependent on you and you are not in a position to appropriate his earnings."

M. W. writes: "As I am interested in the restaurant business and must file an income tax schedule for 1919, I would like to know if I am allowed to figure my employés' meals as an expense the same as wages, as I must pay for the food they eat and do not get any returns for the some."

Answer: Yes, these are part of the compensation paid to your employés and are an expense to you.

U. S. Geological Survey Agrees with Newport Principles of Automatic Heat

It says: "The hand firing of plain furnaces violates all the principles laid down for securing good combustion"—Bulletin #334

Fig. 3

These diagrams show the arrangement of the patented, water-cooled throat and sloping grate in the Newport. Fig. 1 shows the throat in position for using pea or buckwheat fuel. Note the thin fuel bed.

Fig. 2 shows the throat adjusted for larger sizes of fuel—automatically giving a greater fuel bed depth.

In Fig. 3 the throat is extended for still larger sizes of fuel. The fuel bed depth is again automatically increased. In all positions the fuel bed is always uniform, and of the exact thickness for the proper mixture of air and gases. No other boiler uses or can use this system. It's a patented Newport feature.

THROUGH the Newport Automatic Feed Boiler, engineering skill has made the Automatic Heating of homes and business buildings agree with all established principles for securing best results.

It has relieved you of the frequent coaling of your heater. The Newport is its own fireman. Once in two to ten days—depending on the weather–you fill the double-capacity Newport magazine. Gravity automatically feeds the fuel onto the patented, Newport sloping grate. The fuel feed is gradual, even—coal is never heaped—the first basic principle for securing complete combustion.

The Newport requires no hand regulation of drafts. This is done automatically by a patented, combined check and draft which is controlled by a sensitive, automatic regulator. Proper control of drafts is the second essential of best results.

Thus automatic heat from the Newport obeys these two fundamental laws of proper heating, and automatically maintains an even temperature day after day, with no other attention than an occasional shaking of the grate. The disagreeable hand coaling of your heater heaps the fire bed—allows great quantities of heat energy to escape. In the Newport Boiler the automatic fuel feeding is gradual—even.

The U. S. Geological Survey says: "The more nearly the feed approaches a continuous and uniform supply the better the results."—Bulletin 334.

And the automatic regulation of the Newport combined check and draft also saves fuel. If draft changes are sudden, as in old-style boilers, great quantities of heat energy are lost up the chimney. In the Newport draft changes are gradual—no waste of coal by improper draft regulation—no over-heating, no under-heating.

The Newport water-cooled throat is adjustable. It uses practically all kinds of fuel with equally good results. You can use the smaller, cheap sizes of fuel with perfect satisfaction. Note in the diagrams that the fuel bed depth varies according to the size of fuel used. This is another principle that reduces your coal bills, and increases the efficiency of your heating plant in case of fuel famine.

The Newport Boiler is an established success. Year after year it has met every heating requirement in small bungalows, in the largest residences, in business and public buildings, in steam, hot-water and vapor heating systems, in mild and severe climates, during wartime fuel restrictions—everywhere, the Newport has made a remarkable record.

If you are tired of shoveling coal; if you think your coal bills are too high; don't fail to write for a complete analysis of this advanced-type boiler. Or, come to our display rooms for a demonstration. Then ask your architect or heating engineer to confirm your judgment. Send for your copy today.

WOMEN WHO HAVE MADE STYLES

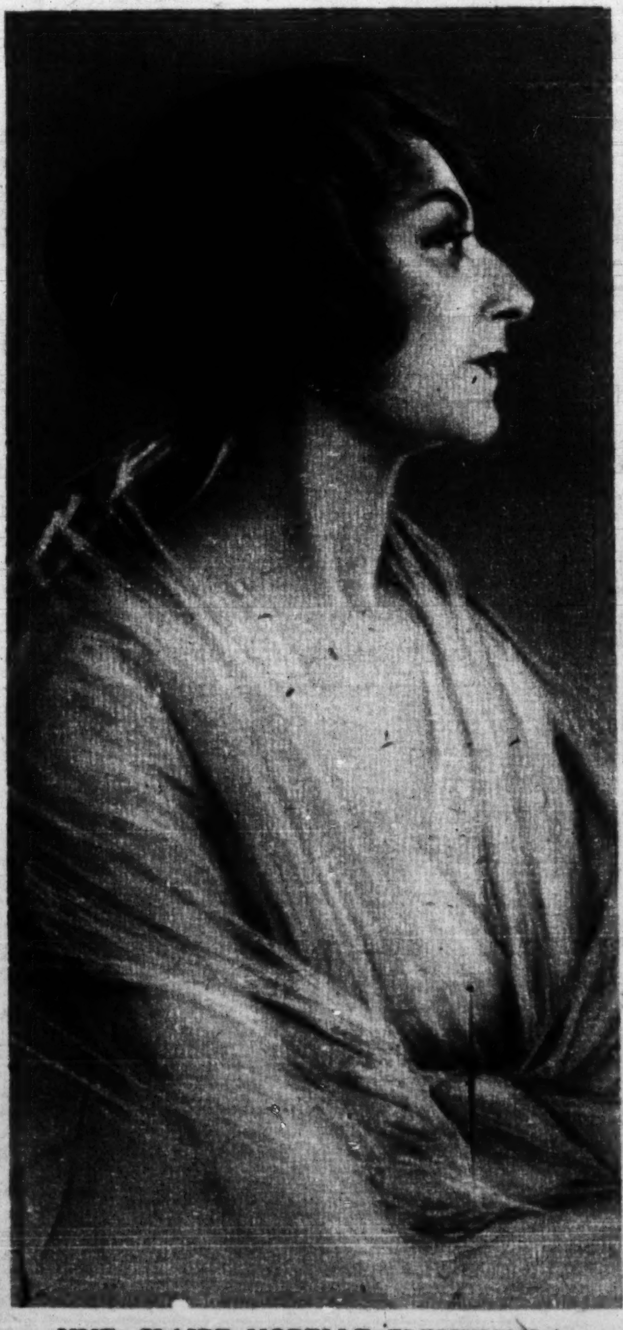
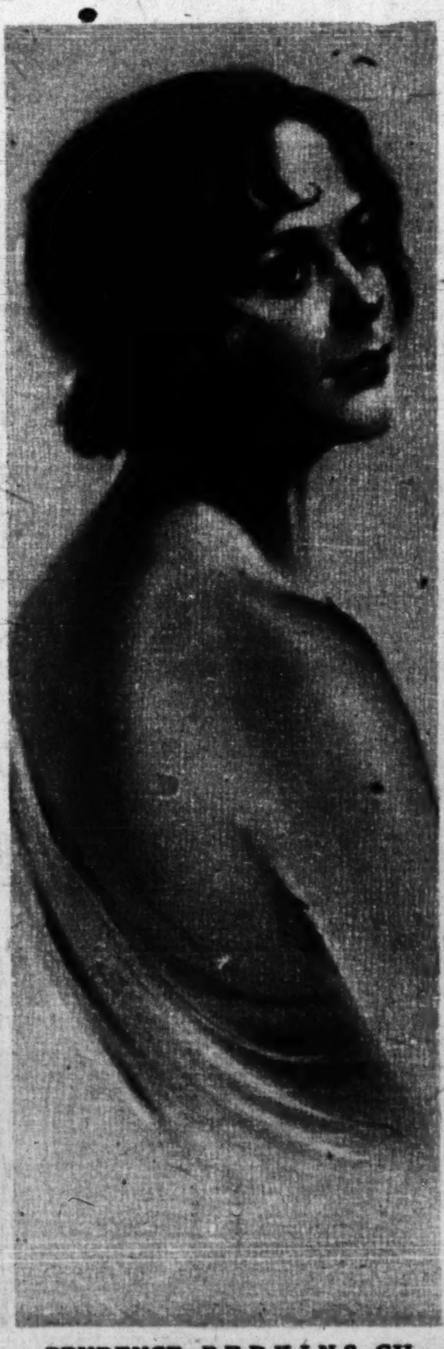
MLLE. CECILE SOREL—"No longer young," says an authority, "but still the most chic woman of modern Paris." She lives in one of the old houses along the Seine, in the section inhabited by the nobility of the old regime, and has filled it with rare tapestries and furniture of the periods of Louis XV. and Louis XVI. Mlle. Sorel was the daughter of a concierge, it is said, and was at one time a milliner's assistant.

At the right:

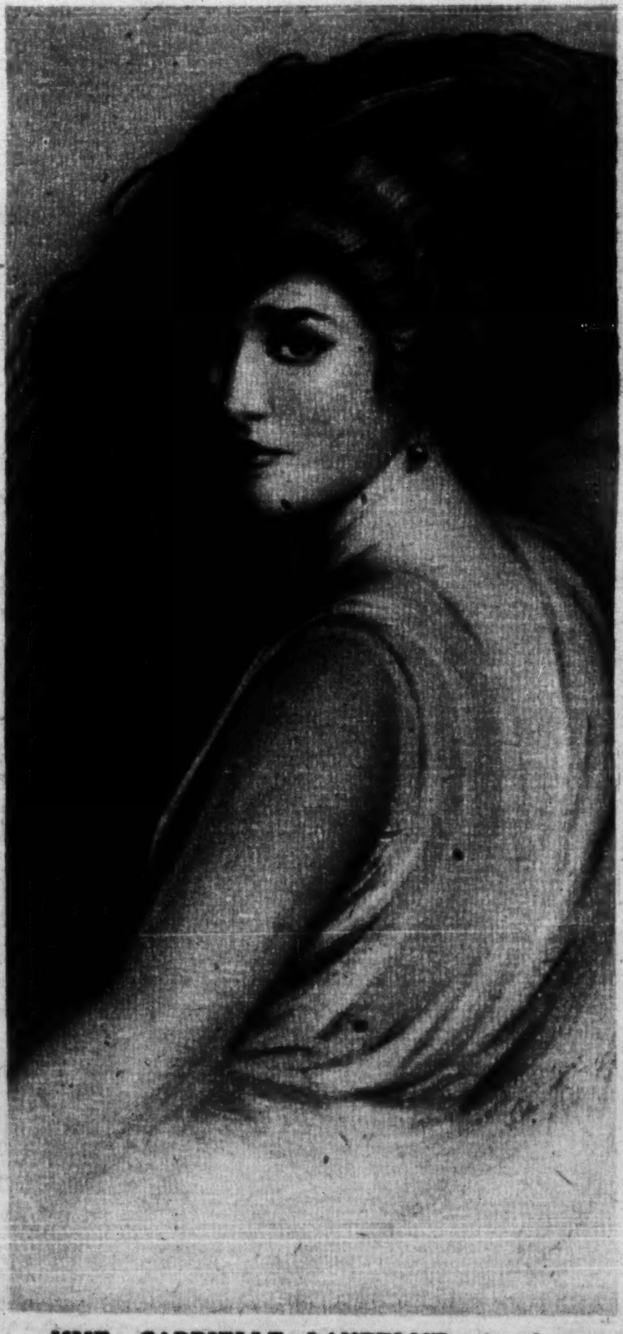
MLLE. JACQUELINE FORZANE, noted as the inventor of the "debutante slouch." Upon the Forzane poses fashion artists now draw constantly for the prevalent one-foot-behind-the-other heroine of our best Sunday clothes. Mlle. Forzane is a pronounced type of blonde beauty, with wonderful ashen hair and violet eyes, and, unlike Sorel, inclines to the severest lines, both in hats and gowns. She first attracted attention when she was employed by the great dressmaking house of Doucet.



MME. CLAIRE MORELLE FLEISHMAN is an American who has spent many years abroad. Her home is divided between Brussels and Paris, but she has made a deep impress upon the life of the latter city, where she is identified with the smartest society. Many struggling artists have been proteges of Mme. Fleishman.



PRUDENCE PERKINS GILCRIESE is another "converted European." This vivacious American introduced first to Paris the drawing room dances by which her own country had taken the chore out of Terpsichore.



MME. GABRIELLE LANTELME, the famous comedienne, was generally regarded, before her death, as the most beautiful woman in Paris. She was drowned in the Rhine under circumstances that have always been a mystery, but she still lingers in the minds of most Parisians as the most electrifying presence of recent years.

"Out they came, the financier patting Preston on the shoulder in a fatherly sort of way. . . . 'Come to see me as often as you can, Mr. Preston, and remember that I'll back you to the limit.'"

The Most Convincing Talker I Ever Met

Everywhere this man goes, people shower him with favors and seek his friendship. Things which other people ask for and are refused, he gets instantly. How he does it is told in this amazing story.

LET me ask you this: There is a big business deal to be put through. It involves millions of dollars. Putting it through depends wholly on one thing—getting the backing of a great financier.

But this man is bitterly opposed to your idea and to your associates. Seven of the most able men and women in all America have tried to win over this financier. They failed dismally and completely.

Now, could you, a total stranger to this man, walk in on him unannounced, talk for less than an hour, and then have him take your arm as a token of friendship, and give you a signed letter agreeing to back you to the limit? Could you?

"At luncheon one of our directors said, 'Why don't you run down to New York and take a shot at it, Preston?' and Preston answered, 'Your're on!'"

ASTOUNDING? Yes! But it WAS done. And I'll tell you how. Here is the way it all came about. For a long time the directors of our company had felt the handicap of limited capital. We had business in sight running into a million dollars a month. But we couldn't finance this volume of sales. We simply had to get big backing, and that was all there was to it.

Because of trade affiliations, one man — a great financier in New York—controlled the situation. Win him over and the rest was easy. But how to win him?—that was the question. No less than five men and two women—all people of influence and reputation—had tried. They were all repulsed—turned down cold and flat.

You know how a thing of this sort grows on you and how bitter utter defeat is. Well, we were talking it over at a board meeting when one of our directors announced that he knew of only one man who could possibly put through the deal—a man by the name of Preston.

So it was agreed that Preston was to be sounded out at luncheon the following day. He proved to be a fine type of American. At 34 years of age he had become president and majority stockholder of a thriving manufacturing business rated at three-quarters of a million dollars.

Preston was deeply interested, as any one would be over the prospect of closing such a big deal. The director in question said casually, "Why don't you run down to New York and take a shot at it, Preston?" Preston looked out of the window for a moment, and then quietly answered, "You're on."

I WENT along with Preston simply as a matter of form to represent our interests. Aboard the 10:25 train out of Chicago, we headed for the smoker and got to talking with the crowd there.

Then I noticed something. Preston had dominated them all. Every one was eagerly hanging on his words and looking at him with open admiration. No sooner would he stop talking than one of the men would start him up again. And as the men dropped off at stations along the way they gave Preston their cards, with pressing invitations to look them up. No doubt about it, Preston was THE man aboard that car.

The colored porter, too, came under his sway. For that night when the berths were being made up, the porter came unasked to Preston, told him that his berth was right over the car trucks, and insisted upon changing it to a more comfortable one.

And so it went all the way to New York. Every one who met Preston took a great liking to him the instant he spoke. They seemed to be eager for his companionship—wanted to be with him every minute, openly admired him, and loaded him with favors.

Even the usual haughty room clerk at the hotel showed a great interest in Preston's welfare. He showered us with attention while a long line of people waited to register.

The next morning we called on the great financier—the man who was so bitterly against us and had flatly turned down seven of our shrewd influential representatives.

I waited in the reception room—nervous, restless, with pins and needles running up and down my spine. Surely Preston would meet the same humiliating fate?

But no! In less than an hour out they came, the financier patting Preston on the shoulder in a fatherly sort of way. And then I heard the surprising words, "Come to see me as often as you can, Mr. Preston, and remember that I'll back you to the limit!"

AT the hotel that night sleep wouldn't come. I couldn't get the amazing Preston out of my thoughts. What an irresistible power over men's minds he had. Didn't even have to ask for what he wanted! People actually competed for his attention, anticipated his wishes and eagerly met them. What a man. What power! . . . Then the tremendous possibilities of it all—think what could be done with such power!

What was the secret? For secret there must be. So the first thing next morning I hurried to Preston's room, told him my thoughts, and asked him the secret of his power.

Preston laughed good-naturedly. "Nothing to it—I—well—that—is," he stalled. "I don't like to talk about myself, but I've simply mastered the knack of talking convincingly, that's all."

"But how did you get the knack?" I persisted.

Preston smiled, and said, "Well, there's an organization in New York that tells you exactly how to do it. It's amazing! There's really nothing to study. It's mostly a knack which they tell you. You can learn this knack in a few hours. And in less than a week it will produce definite results in your daily work.

"Write to this organization—The Independent Corporation—and get their method. They send it on free trial. I'll wager that in a few weeks from now you'll have a power over men which you never thought possible . . . but write and see for yourself." and that was all I could get out of the amazing Preston.

WHEN I returned home I sent for the method Preston told me about. It opened my eyes and astounded me. Just how he had won over the financier was now as clear as day to me. I began to apply the method to my daily work, and soon I was able to wield the same remarkable power over men and women that Preston had. I don't like to talk about my personal achievements any more than Preston does, but I'll say this:

When you have acquired the knack of talking convincingly, it's easy to get people to do anything you want them to do. That's how Preston impressed those people on the train—how he got special attention from the hotel clerk—how he won over the financier—simply by talking convincingly.

This knack of talking convincingly will do wonders for any man or woman. Most people are afraid to express their thoughts; they know the humiliation of talking to people and of being ignored with a casual nod or a "yes" or "no." But when you can talk convincingly, it's different. When you talk people listen and listen eagerly. You can get the people to do almost anything you want them to. And the beauty of it all is that they think they are doing it of their own free will.

In committee meetings, or in a crowd of any sort, you can rivet the attention of all when you talk. You can force them to accept your ideas. It helps wonderfully in writing business letters—enables you to write sales letters that amaze everyone by the big orders they pull in.

Then again it helps in social life. Interesting and convincing talk is the basis of social success. At social affairs you'll always find that the convincing talker is the center of attraction, and that people go out of their way to "make up" to him.

Talk convincingly and no man—no matter who he is—will ever treat you with cold, unresponsive indifference. Instead you'll instantly get under his skin, make his heart glow and set fire to his enthusiasms. Talk convincingly and any man—even a stranger—will treat you like an old pal and will literally take the shirt off his back to please you.

You can get anything you want if you know how to talk convincingly. You've noticed that in business ability alone won't get you much. Many a man of real ability who cannot express himself well is often outdistanced by a man of mediocre ability who knows how to talk convincingly. There's no getting away from it, to get ahead—merely to hold your own—to get what your ability entitles you to, you've got to know how to talk convincingly.

THE method Preston told me about is Dr. Law's "Mastery of Speech," published by the Independent Corporation. Such confidence have the publishers in the ability of Dr. Law's method to make you a convincing talker that they will gladly send it to you wholly on approval.

You needn't send any money—not a cent. Merely mail the coupon, or write a letter, and the complete course "Mastery of Speech," will be sent you by return mail, all charges prepaid. MADGE ET MAMMA KENNEDY have been maidless all winter—but they don't look like they had worried much about it, do they? Mrs. Kennedy says it's a comfort once in a while to be chief cook and bottle washer and lady's maid to a famous woman—when that famous woman happens to be your own daughter.

Miss Kennedy has just finished work on "The Blooming Angel" for Goldwyn and will soon start filming a story by Octavus Roy Cohen.

JACK MULHALL is what is known as a "free lance." Now you see him—with one company—and then he's will-o'-the-wisped to another.

This promising young chap is a New York boy and was educated at Columbia university. He was on the stage for several years, playing in vaudeville and with James K. Hackett in "The Grain of Dust." His screen career started with Biograph, where for four years he played leads. Since then he's been playing around with various companies, his address at present being given as Famous Players-Lasky.

Mr. Mulhall is five feet 11 inches tall, weighs 150 pounds; motors, rides, dances, fences—and heaven knows what not! Mae Tinee.

MISTAKES WOMEN MAKE IN THE CARE OF THEIR COMPLEXIONS

Much homeliness is caused by three common little mistakes

FIRST, many women powder the wrong way. Many women who appreciate the importance of powdering fail to understand the right way to do it. Again and again during the day, on the street, in the shops—everywhere—they are powdering, in a frantic effort to overcome a shiny face.

Yet the ugly glisten keeps cropping out.

This is because people make the mistake of applying the powder directly to the skin.

If powdering is to be at all lasting, the thing to do is always to apply a powder base. Before you powder, just take a little Pond's Vanishing Cream on the tips of your fingers. Rub it well into your face. Instantly it disappears, leaving your skin softened and refreshed. Now powder, and don't think of it again.

Pond's Vanishing Cream has no oil, so it cannot come out in a shine. More than this, it holds the powder fast to your face two or three times as long as ever before.

Dermatologists say that such a powder base is a protection to the skin. It keeps its texture from the coarsening due to exposure.

Failing to freshen the complexion when you dress

When you are preparing to go out for the evening, do, do remember that the most important part of dressing is the freshening of your complexion.

Some women make the mistake of overlooking this.

You may feel and look exhausted. Yet there is no excuse for letting your skin look tired, drawn.

Lightly smooth a little Pond's Vanishing Cream over your face. The cool touch, the delicate fragrance, will make your skin actually feel fresher. At once this greaseless cream vanishes. Your poor tired skin drinks in all its refreshing softness. The tense, drawn feeling is relaxed. The dullness has gone, leaving a soft, transparent look. More than this, the soothing cream keeps your skin soft and smooth, and prevents chapping and roughness.

Never neglect this Pond's Vanishing Cream freshness before going out. It makes all the difference between looking commonplace and looking beautiful.

It is a bad mistake to omit the cold cream cleansing

Because you have learned to depend upon Pond's Vanishing Cream for a powder base, for freshening the skin and protecting it from chapping, do not forget the importance of cold cream.

The very oil which makes cold cream impractical for use before going out is what the skin requires at other times. The pure, creamy oil base in Pond's Cold Cream makes it the most perfect cleanser you have ever known.

When you are all ready for bed, rub some Pond's Cold Cream into your pores and wipe it off with a soft cloth. You will be horrified to see how much dirt comes out. Yet it will please you so to realize how much cleaner the pores of your skin are than ever before that you will make this face bath a regular habit. In this way your skin will be kept clear and free from dullness.

If your skin is dry or rough, leave some Pond's Cold Cream on over night to make up for the deficiency of natural oil in your skin.

Subtract a few years from your age

When you are feeling all tired out, yet have to look your best, rub a little Pond's Vanishing Cream into your face and neck. At once the drawn feeling around your mouth and eyes goes. Your skin takes on a fresh, transparent look. This cream disappears instantly and will not reappear in a shine.

Wind and dust ruin your looks

A day in the wind and dust plays havoc with your complexion. It chaps it; it dries it; it blows away the powder. Before going out, protect your face and hands with Pond's Vanishing Cream. For years it has been famous for overcoming chapping and roughness. Without making your skin shiny, it will keep it soft and prevent the dust and powder from working into the pores. Applied over this protecting cream, the powder stays on two or three times as long as it ever did before.

You will find, too, that you can give yourself a wonderful massage with Pond's Cold Cream. It has just the consistency that is perfect for working well into the skin.

Every skin needs two creams

The creams that your skin needs are each very different from the other.

It is Pond's Vanishing Cream that you should use as a powder base, as a protection from cold and dust, and to freshen the complexion. Pond's Vanishing Cream is without oil. It is based on an ingredient which physicians have recommended for years for its softening, beautifying properties.

On the other hand, for cleansing, for supplying a lack of oil, and for massage, Pond's Cold Cream should be used. Its formula was especially worked out to supply just the amount of oil required for these uses.

Neither of these creams will encourage the growth of hair on the face.

Get a jar or tube of each cream today at any drug or department store.

The dust will shock you!

You have no idea how much dust can work into the pores of your skin until you see how much comes out in the first Pond's Cold Cream cleansing. Your skin needs this wonderful oil cream cleansing at night.

The Art of Keeping the Hands Beautiful

FOUR SIMPLE OPERATIONS EACH WEEK AND THE HANDS ARE ALWAYS PERFECTLY MANICURED

There is no beauty so easy to gain as lovely hands

LOVELY hands are more and more regarded as one of the chief charms of a beautiful woman. It is hard to get through a single day now without being judged by one's hands. Badly groomed hands are more harshly criticized today than ever before. And no wonder. For really lovely nails are so easy to acquire.

Soften and remove surplus cuticle with Cutex. It will leave a thin, beautiful nail base.

Fifteen or twenty minutes a week will keep your nails in perfect condition.

File the nails to the proper length and shape, preferably oval.

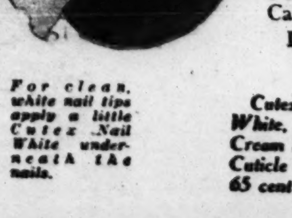
Now for the cuticle. Here is where many women make mistakes. The wrong care of the cuticle causes hangnails and rough places. Never trim it with scissors. This leaves a raw edge, which gives rise to hangnails and often causes a sore or swollen rim of flesh about the nail.

Cutex was prepared to meet the need for a harmless cuticle remover.



For clean, white nail tips apply a little Cutex Nail White underneath the nails.

The care of the cuticle

In the Cutex package you will find an orange stick and absorbent cotton. Wrap a little cotton around the end of the stick and dip it into the Cutex bottle. Then carefully work the stick around the base of the nails, gently pushing back the cuticle. Wipe off the dead surplus skin and wash the hands.

Now whiten the nail tips

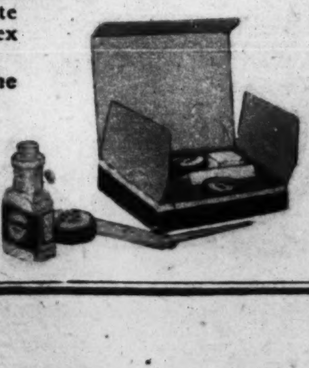
Apply Cutex Nail White directly from the tube underneath the nails. Spread it under evenly and remove any surplus cream with an orange stick. Cutex Nail White will remove all discolorations from underneath the nails.

A jewel-like gloss

Cutex Cake Polish rubbed on the palm of the hand and passed over the nails gives them a quick, waterproof polish. If you wish an especially brilliant finish, apply Cutex Paste Polish first, then the Cutex Cake Polish.

If your cuticle has the tendency to become dry and harsh, apply Cutex Cold Cream just before going to bed.

If you want a brilliant lasting polish, use Cutex Paste Polish first, then Cutex Cake Polish.



Cutex Cuticle Remover, Nail White, Nail Polish and Cold Cream are each 35 cents. The Cuticle Remover comes also in 65 cent bottles.

Give your nails this Cutex manicure regularly. Do not expect your hands to stay well groomed with irregular care.

You can get Cutex in any drug or department store in the United States, Canada and England.

A complete manicure set for only 20 cents

A natural Emphasis of its Charm

You Golden Blondes, here so delightfully portrayed by Penrhyn Stanlaws! You will remember—always—will you not, that your natural charm is your greatest charm? Yet, it is necessary at times, if you would preserve the natural beauty of your type, that you add a simple, a natural emphasis to its charm.

You will use Djer-Kiss Rouge and Djer-Kiss Face Powder, of course!

LIGHT BRUNETTE
Eyes of gray or bluish gray. A fine strong white skin contrasting with light brown hair.

Formula: Either Djer-Kiss Charlotte Corday or Duchesse Marie Rouge, with Chair Face Powder.

SPANISH BRUNETTE
—embraces darker brunette types with deeper Oriental coloring of hair, skin and eyes.

Formula: Use ruddy-toned Rouge Princesse Jacqueline. And with it, Djer-Kiss Rachel Face Powder.

GRAY-HAIRED TYPE
This cannot actually be called a type—as no one is born with gray hair. The gray-haired woman is the distinguished woman—the type of Grande Dame.

Formula: If the gray-haired type possesses blue eyes or gray eyes, the Duchesse Marie Djer-Kiss Rouge should be used, with Blanche Face Powder. If dark eyed, use Princesse Jacqueline or Charlotte Corday Rouge with Chair or Rachel Face Powder.

Select your own type—the type which most nearly includes your own beauty of coloring.

THE SPOON THE PIG BIT by GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

The Big Fellow Starts to Tell His Pirate Story to the Boy, But Finishes It for Her and Her Alone.

IF you enter the park at the big gate at Seventy-second street and turn to the right you will come immediately upon a miserable little pond encircled, not by grassy banks, but by 400 yards of plank border three feet wide and almost flush with the water. Scarcely a setting for romance, one would say, yet on the restricted bosom of this ugly puddle great armadas have fought, treasure laden galleons met and sunk, swift yachts raced for the true gold of honor alone and at the sight young throats have swelled with tears and hearts have often well nigh burst.

Here through an eternity of generations the scions of Manhattan, 69 years old and under, have foregathered to launch a thousand ships against the complacent towers of youthful minds' imagining; met reverses, losses, and disaster with bellows of rage or stolid fortitude; hailed occasional conquest with paeans of victory in the vernacular, and ignored the remonstrances of the apron stringed brigade of shameful attendants, bent on injecting their feminine cries into an atmosphere of battle, brigandage, and manly bane.

On an early Saturday afternoon in the kingly month of October, Young Waldron, 5 years of age and sturdy as the product of an acorn, breathless, bulging eyed, and bearing under his arm a two masted schooner with the scull and crossbones flying at her peak, descended upon the scene of many a former emprise, followed closely by a girl who was certainly not his mother, evidently not a nursemaid, but undoubtedly the person temporarily responsible for his safekeeping.

A keen analyst in class distinctions would have placed her at once as a nursery governess by grace of outrageous fortune, one of those beautiful brown haired girls who are well bred, still neatly garbed, healthy, and pink of cheek, but whose deep blue eyes are filled with the sadness of the first hard knock of fate and in rare moments of reverie grow wider and wider and moister and moister with thoughts of what was and what might have been, until they become so entrancingly lovely, so winsome in their young despair, so innocently demanding of tenderness and love, that men line up to kneel and presently distracted guardians are looking for another, one not quite so darned pretty this time, please.

Such were the musings of an enormous young man who sat on one of the benches under a lone catalpa tree as near as possible to the water's edge and watched with twinkling eyes the approach of the youngster and the girl. He was not fat; he was big, broad shouldered, mightily thewed, and the rough gray tweeds in which he was loosely clothed fell about his person in sweeping long folds that made him look like a genial statue off its pedestal for a smiling spree. One knew that he had sat on the bench before and there was that in his eyes which indicated acquaintance by sight only with the hurrying newcomers.

His observant gaze seized promptly on the schooner under young Waldron's arm, perceived its brand newness, studied the furious eagerness in the face above it, and then swept the placid, glasslike surface of the pond, only to return with an expression of commiseration for the grief that he knew to be impending. The privateer was launched. With drooping sails and wilted burgee, it lay quiescent, absolutely immobile, stillborn and dead upon the apathetic water. Then and then only did young Waldron raise his outraged eyes and his voice on high.

"What a horrid day!" he yelled and burst into tears.

"Why, Waldron!" cried the girl, "how can you say such a thing? It's a lovely day. Look, dear, not a cloud in the sky, not one, and it's blue, blue, blue."

"Rot, rot, rot," rumbled the enormous young man from the bench as though the sheer spaciousness of the feminine argument had been too much for his reserve and had forced him into open alliance with his sex. "It's a rotten day; not a breath of wind, not one. Rot, rot, rotten day."

Young Waldron swallowed his tears in a single, strangling gulp and stared wide eyed at the stranger. The stranger stared back. They stared mutually as only the perennially young can stare. They stared until they forgot completely woman and all her ways, so that the girl's murmurings to her charge as well as her discretion in lowering her eyes and freezing her warm face were utterly lost on both the men present.

"You interest me," continued the enormous one in a tone that was conversational, but whose reverberations sent thrills up and down the back of the atmosphere in general and of young Waldron in particular. "You interest me because you are the first pirate, bar one, that I ever saw cry."

"Bar one?" demanded Waldron, aghast with wonder.

"Bar one."

A long silence ensued, during which the girl reached for Waldron's belt and missed. He was too far on the way to the bench.

"What was his name, Big Fellow?" he asked.

"Waldron!" protested the girl nervously and at a loss to know just what else to do. She felt a sinking premonition that the moment for action had already sneaked by on incredibly swift wings, leaving her charge securely hooked on the words of an utter stranger whose deep voice assumed to her distress the sound of a knell.

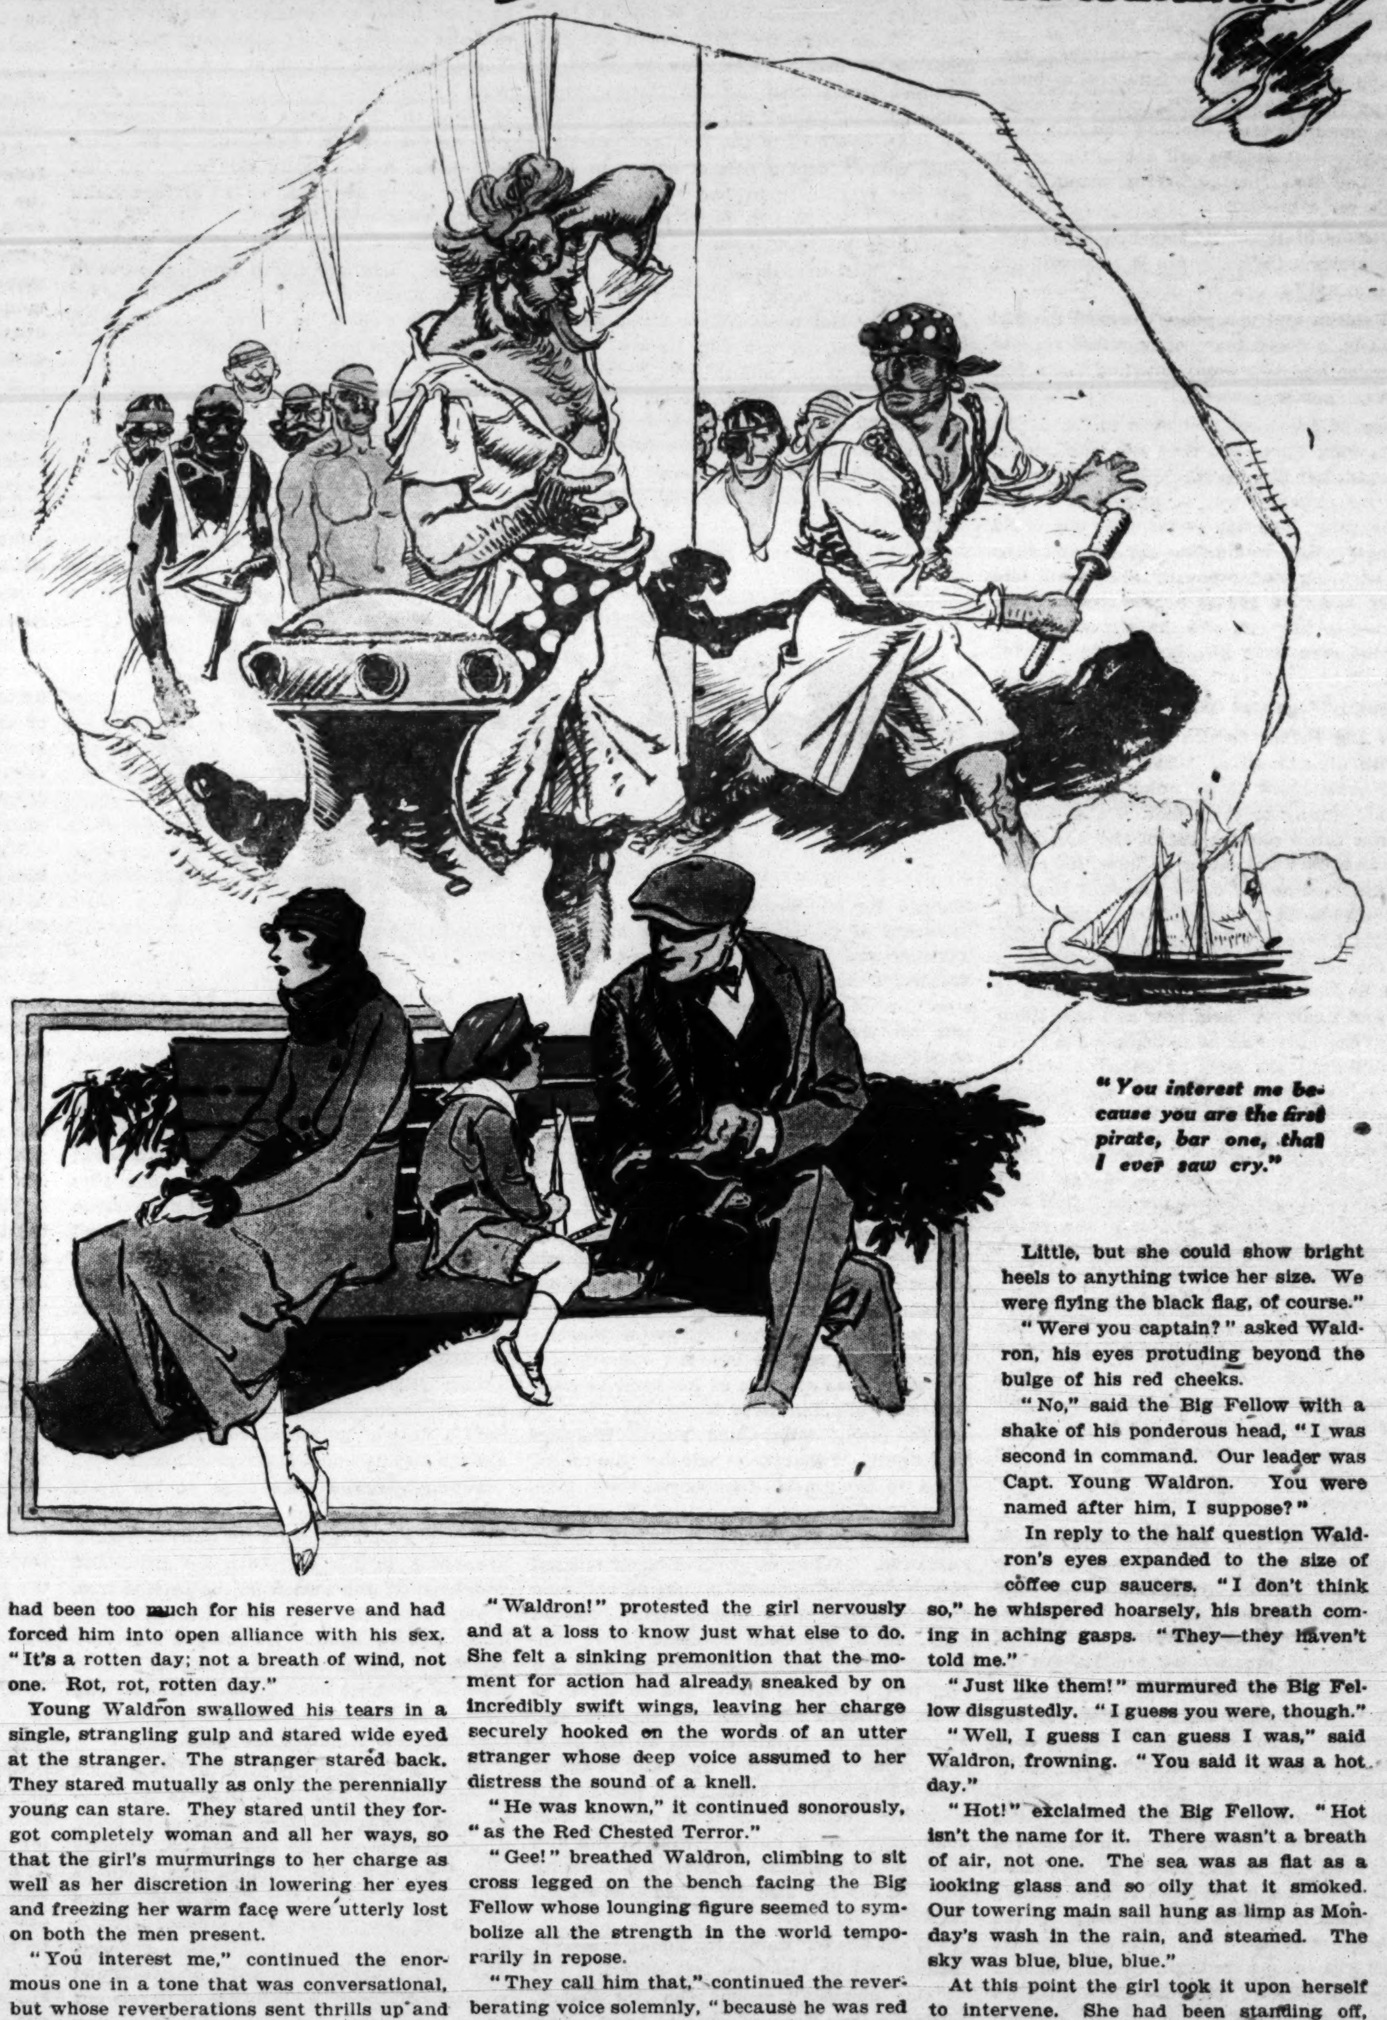
"He was known," it continued sonorously, "as the Red Chested Terror."

"Gee!" breathed Waldron, climbing to sit cross legged on the bench facing the Big Fellow whose lounging figure seemed to symbolize all the strength in the world temporarily in repose.

"They call him that," continued the reverberating voice solemnly, "because he was red chested and because he was a terror, but I saw him cry."

"When?" demanded Waldron as one who has an inborn right to know of such matters.

"It was long ago and on a day like this," complied the giant readily, "only hotter, a thousand long sights hotter. We were lying off the coast in the gulf of Guayaquil in the cutter corsair, the Bleeding Hand. Sharp as a knife she was, narrow beamed, and with a draft so deep she had combed the seaweed hair from every bar in the Spanish Main. Little, but she could show bright heels to anything twice her size. We were flying the black flag, of course."



"You interest me because you are the first pirate, bar one, that I ever saw cry."

"Were you captain?" asked Waldron, his eyes protuding beyond the bulge of his red cheeks.

"No," said the Big Fellow with a shake of his ponderous head, "I was second in command. Our leader was Capt. Young Waldron. You were named after him, I suppose?"

In reply to the half question Waldron's eyes expanded to the size of coffee cup saucers. "I don't think so," he whispered hoarsely, his breath coming in aching gasps. "They—they haven't told me."

"Just like them!" murmured the Big Fellow disgustedly. "I guess you were, though."

"Well, I guess I can guess I was," said Waldron, frowning. "You said it was a hot day."

"Hot!" exclaimed the Big Fellow. "Hot isn't the name for it. There wasn't a breath of air, not one. The sea was as flat as a looking glass and so oily that it smoked. Our towering main sail hung as limp as Monday's wash in the rain, and steamed. The sky was blue, blue, blue."

At this point the girl took it upon herself to intervene. She had been standing off, tacking anxiously this way and that before the bench looking for an opening in the impersonal cliff the two men had raised about them. Now she thought she saw it in the stranger's impertinent allusion to her remark on the character of the day which had started the trouble and she sailed in.

"Waldron," she said with nervous determination, "come away at once. Do you hear me?"

Apparently Waldron did not hear, nor did the giant, which was not surprising, for no female voice, however imperious, can reach from the park to the gulf of Quayaquil. They two were far, far away off the barren coast of Ecuador and any one who wanted them badly enough could jolly well beat it down there and board the Bleeding Hand in the face of cutlass, sabre, and culverin.

"The Red Chested Terror," continued Big Fellow placidly, "was sitting all alone amidships, away from the rigging, on account of

THE TEENIE WEENIES

BY WM DONAHEY

WHO SAYS THE LADIES ARE AFRAID OF MICE?

TESS BONE and Buddy Guff were inseparable. It was a case of love at sight. Tess lengthened her skirts, and with the help of the Lady of Fashion she soon looked quite a lady. Buddy thought a great deal of Tess, but one day something happened which made him think she was the most wonderful Teenie Weenie alive.

This is just how it happened: The Cook made a big cheese cake one morning. He baked it in the top of a salve box and set it out on the back porch to cool.

A young mouse who lived near happened along, and, picking the pan up in his mouth, he scuttled off as fast as his four feet could carry him.

"Stop thief! Stop thief!" yelled Gogo, who happened to see the act, but it had no effect other than to make the mouse run faster.

The Teenie Weenies came running from all directions at the sound of Gogo's voice and immediately took up the chase, for the little folks were mighty fond of cheese cake.

The mouse ran across a yard and under the foundation of a house near by, where the Teenie Weenies had a hard time following the trail, but the Indian soon picked out his tracks and trailed him to a hole. The hole was quite a big one and very dark, so the Teenie Weenies came to a halt before it and stared into the gloomy place.

"Well, this isn't getting that cake," growled the Cook. "It won't do a bit of good to stand here and stare into that hole."

"Quite so, quite so," said the General. "Er-er-er, officer, hadn't you better step into the hole and persuade that mouse to hand over the cake?".

"Well, sir," answered the Policeman, "I've been thinking it would be much better for you to speak to the mouse. He is likely to pay more attention to a general than a common policeman, and besides, you can threaten him with the army."

"Jimminie fishhooks!" exclaimed the Dunce, "if I didn't have a cold I'd go in that hole and take that cake away from that fool mouse."

"Afraid the mouse will catch your cold, Dunce?" snickered the Turk.

"It's a pretty dangerous thing to tackle a mouse in a dark hole," said the Policeman. "They are pretty bad customers when they're cornered."

"Why couldn't we smoke him out?" asked the Cowboy.

"You men make me tired!" cried Tess Bone. "Standin' around here afraid of a mouse. I'll bring that scamp out." And before any one could stop the plucky little girl she picked up a pin which lay on the ground and dashed into the dark hole.

Almost immediately loud squeaks were heard, and presently Tess came out of the hole leading the mouse by the ear. The mouse looked scared half out of his senses, and in his mouth he carried the pan of cheese cake.

Tess marched the mouse back to the shoe house and made him set the pan of cake on the porch. "Now, look here," she said, giving the mouse's ear a tug, "if I ever catch you snoopin' around here again it won't be healthy for you!"

The mouse lost no time in getting away, and Buddy Guff, right before everybody, took Tess in his arms and called her his brave little Teenie Weenie.

his hair. You will realize the danger to tarred stays and inflammable things like that when I tell you that around his corrugated brow was a charred string of silk, all that was left of the bandana he had put on fresh that morning. His hair stood up from his head and bared chest in flames that seemed to lick the face of the brazen sun and smile."

"Waldron!" called the girl weakly.

"Capt. Young Waldron," continued the sonorous voice, "was lounging in a hammock on the poop deck. He glanced keenly at the cloudless blue sky and shouted in a clear voice that carried half across the seven seas, 'You Red Chested Terror, stand by to whistle for a breeze!'

"'Breeze be jiggered,' called back the Terror hoarsely. 'Whistle for it yourself.' It was mutiny!"

"Waldron and you you—" begged the girl piteously, a dozen tears of impotent rage in her voice and two more crawling down her cheeks, "please, please—"

They paid no heed, not even to the extent of glancing up to see that she was crying, so she bit her lip and sat down at Waldron's back far enough away to appear to be out of the party, but not so far that she could not hear. She would bite her lip and turn pale as a lily and presently she would bite her lip and turn red as a rose saying good-morning to the sun, and the angry tears in her blue eyes were like dew at the flush of dawn.

"Mutiny!" gasped Waldron.

The Big Fellow nodded gravely and went on with his narrative. "Every man in the pirate crew knew it as quick as you and they all sprang to their feet. Capt. Young Waldron threw one leg out of the hammock and leaned forward, elbow on knee, his piercing gaze fixed on the curved back of the sullen Red Chested Terror. He was the youngest chief I ever served under, but I've never seen his better. Like his ship, the Bleeding Hand, he was small, but his muscles were of steel and I can see them now as I saw them on that day quivering as do piano wires when you strike all the keys at once. I started toward the Terror, but the captain stopped me with a wave of his hand.

"'Leave him to me, Big Fellow,' he murmured and the next instant he ran three steps for a takeoff, leaped the poop deck rail clean, sailed fourteen feet into the ship's deep waist, and came down whangwollop on the Terror's back. That was a fight of your life! Short, but O my! Red Chest bucked him into the scuppers for a start off and then stood upon the main hatchway, pulled open his shirt, and bellowed: 'I am the Red Chested Terror, the human volcano, the pillar of fire with two legs. Look at the flames on my breast, hear them roar, and come on if you dare and singe yourself, you chickaninny pinfeathered bantam!'"

Young Waldron gave a little gasp not of interruption but of glorious, never before completely surfeited satisfaction in the line of straight talk with action still to come. Only the remarkable carrying qualities of the voice could have made it heard above the drumming of his big young heart.

"But our captain hadn't waited for the invitation," it rumbled on. "He snatched a belaying pin from the bulwarks, ran lightly up the ratlines and, dropping from aloft to the hatch, swung the iron with both hands and brought it down with a crash on the red man's head. He would surely have crushed in the skull had it not been for the matted hair which protected it, but even so the Terror stood stunned for a second, and that second was enough for Capt. Young Waldron. He sprang forward, pinioned the mutineer's wrists, carried them behind his back, crossed them, quickly changed hands, and then pulled. The man was trussed as securely as any spring chicken for a roasting, but, knowing his almost superhuman strength, our captain was not satisfied. He threw up his head savagely, striking the Red Chested Terror on the point of the jaw. Slowly he forced back the flaming head until he could bury his strong teeth in the victim's bared throat. Then and then only he muttered with his mouth full: 'Step forward, the starboard watch! Do your duty!'"

"Waldron!" gasped the girl.

"All fight," continued the rumbling voice, ignoring the punty interruption to an epic, "was gone from the Terror's limp body. We spreadeagled him just where only a moment before he had bellowed defiance at a better man than he. We laid him out on his back, his right hand braced to the after starboard corner of the hatch, his left to the after port angle; then we trussed out his legs in the same way only for'ard. The hair on his bare chest stood up like a field of goldenrod."

"Waldron!" moaned the girl, almost aimlessly and certainly without hope.

"Like a field of goldenrod," repeated Big Fellow doggedly, a sullen light gathering and smoldering in his eyes. "Boy!" he exclaimed, fastening his gaze on Young Waldron's rapt face, "those were the days when the red blood in a man's veins was so thick it wouldn't run if you cut his throat, when 'curmudgeon' and 'blathermuskite' were the shortest words in the English language, when women kept a bale of cotton in each ear and when a man had to go easy on swearing for fear a mere average oath would tear his back teeth out by the roots. Yes, sir, those were days."

The girl sank back in her seat with a sigh of despair. Her tense body relaxed, but she had to clench her two fists tightly to keep the corners of her mouth from dimpling to a smile. "Outrageous!" she repeated over and over to herself. Was she to be forced to seize her charge and carry him kicking and wailing out of the park and home? On the other hand, could she appear to countenance for one moment this unwarranted intrusion of an enormous young stranger? "If ever you are accosted, my dear," Young Waldron's mother had instructed her, "don't stop to argue; call the police at once." That was all very fine, but this extraordinary statue at large had not accosted her. Far from it. Amazing as it might seem, she was convinced that he and his captive equally considered her very much in the way and his next words seemed to prove it.

"Days," he continued, "when we men had the earth to ourselves and the seas, too, and needed them both for room to swing in. Days when words went around without petticoats and two men talking made a whole thunderstorm. Days when the very best standard hold for a wrestling match was the other fellow's left ear between your molars and six inches of knife in his back to keep him from slipping away."

"You said," interrupted Young Waldron impatiently, "that the hair on his chest stood up like a field of goldenrod."

"So I did," agreed Big Fellow, accepting the rebuke and returning promptly to his narrative. "When we got him nicely trussed so you could have played a tune on his arms and legs they were strung so tight, I offered Capt. Young Waldron the meat ax we usually used for executions when we were too lazy to run out the plank, but he waved it aside, a wicked smile curling his thin lips. He ordered us to wait, sprang up the gangway to his quarters, and presently returned with a large ball of twine and a pair of nail scissors. He glanced up at the sail and then commanded me to cut the twine in two and three fathom lengths. I obeyed, a sneering smile on my lips also, for I had guessed his diabolical purpose."

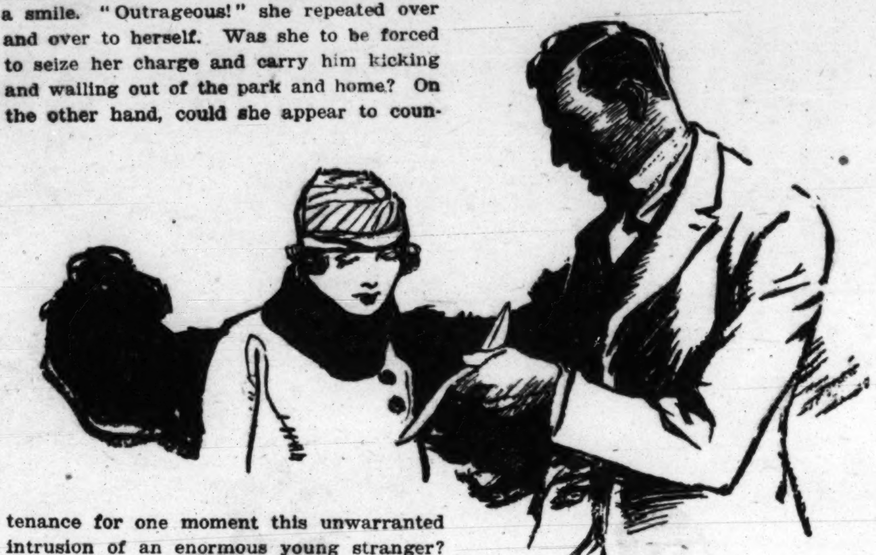
"What was it?" demanded Young Waldron, feeling that he had been left behind.

"One moment," replied the Big Fellow, raising a long fingered, sinewy hand. "As soon as the cord was entirely cut up the skipper tied one end of a length to a hair on the Red Chested Terror's breast and the other end to a reef knot on the limp sail above; then all hands were ordered to fall to and do the same by every flaming lock, and in less time than it takes to tell it we had a solid warp of twine rising like a fan from the Terror's front to the reef lines. When the work was done Capt. Young Waldron commanded the port watch to the taffrail to whistle for a breeze and the starboard watch to stand by and laugh."

Young Waldron was leaning over so far that he almost toppled into the big man's lap, but so veritably fixed were his eyes on the face of his God-sent new friend that they actually sustained him against the laws of gravity. "Stand by and laugh," he repeated with bated breath to fill an unpardonable pause.

The Big Fellow nodded with pursed lips and presently continued dreamily: "Never will I forget that scene; twenty men grouped aft whistling in unison, twenty more lined up around the hatch limbering up facial muscles that had not been used in years, everybody sweating, the brazen sun blazing, the oily sea flinging back the hot rays, the Red Chested Terror lying on his back trying to chew tobacco, continually swallowing his cud and coughing it up again, and only Capt. Young Waldron as cool as a winter cucumber. At last the breeze came catpawing slowly along the flat waters, and, as it happened, took us fair a-back. Consequently the great sail began to slat lazily this way and that and at every swing it pulled sixteen hairs off the red man's chest.

"At the first tug Capt. Young Waldron gave the signal for mirth by calling out in a high, singsong voice: 'Sixteen hairs off the Terror's chest!' and then we laughed all together, 'Ho! ho!' and 'Ho! ho.'



"For you," he said. "The spoon the pig bit."

"It was a moment of jollity unrestrained, not such mirth as you hear nowadays falling with the tinkle of breaking icicles off cold lips that have never tasted blood. No, sir. When the Bleeding Hand's starboard watch laughed at the word of command its eyes stood out an inch and so did its arteries. Its gullets opened clean to the waist line and what came out of them was of the stuff that makes straight hair curl and maidens cry for help. It was then, lad, at that moment of terrific merriment, that first I saw a pirate cry, saw the Red Chested Terror weep tobacco colored tears, not for pain, mind you, but for shame and grief at the passing of such a field of goldenrod as grew but once and whose like would never grow again."

Young Waldron sank back on his heels with a long-drawn sigh of absolute repletion. The Big Fellow leaned over and whispered something in his ear; then he arose and wandered off due west from the catalpa tree. Young Waldron's eyes grew wide and suddenly hungry again. He jumped from the bench and was off so precipitously in pursuit that the girl once more missed her snatching hold at his belt and was forced to trail after him with less dignity than speed.

Of all the paths in the park that one which meanders from the little pond to Seventy-seventh street west comes nearest to being a retreat from the city and gas and gasoline and cops. It is really umbrageous, it climbs mountains, it skirts the sharp indentations of the Big lake, it crosses a purling river, it leans over precipices, it glimpses caverns, and when you get to its sadly mundane end you actually have to shake the squirrels out of your pockets or run the risk of getting arrested for larceny. It was half way up the third steep rise of this scenic route that the girl came within striking distance of her quarry, but for some occult reason she did not immediately seize it.

Why? Because she was young and deserted and envious, because in her heart she knew herself to be a mere woman, and bowed instinctively to the stern withdrawal of the male species, because she felt left out and tremulously wished she were frankly in and of this astounding excursion of two beyond the bounds of tedious, everyday affairs. But most of all because she was lonely and had once been happy.

She stared at the couple in front, Young Waldron reaching up to cling to the dangling hand of his newfound god, his short fat legs twinkling in a half trot to keep up with a mighty though leisurely stride. In his free hand the enormous young man carried a fat malacca cane with which he was boyishly trying to spear dead leaves along the path's border. They were not talking, both of them being apparently agreed on some determined destination.

Suddenly the girl awoke to the realization that her charge was being kidnaped, soul as well as body, under her very nose. Her shoulders drew erect, her soft lips straightened to a hard line, her eyes flashed with determination, and she dashed forward, seized Young Waldron around the middle, swung him off his feet, and tugged. He came away easily, for the Big Fellow made not the slightest effort to defeat her purpose. Indeed, he seemed entirely unconscious of the rescue; his long stride continued on its even way.

There was something so surprising in this masterly indifference that the girl was for a moment thrown off her guard. She stared disconcerted and a little aggrieved at the disappearing figure of the enemy, whom she had certainly expected to show at least a little fight in which her tongue might have a chance to relieve itself of a mountainous burden of accumulated recrimination. That negligent moment proved her undoing and incidentally supplied her with as pretty a sample of miniature battle as heart could wish.

Not in vain had Young Waldron but recently been regaled on the fighting methods of his famous namesake. Squirming from the treacherous rear attack of his governess, he turned, and, finding that a bare five years of growth precluded his fastening his teeth in the left ear of his opponent, he set them valiantly in her leg just above the knee and for equal reason attacked her shins in lieu of trussing her wrists behind her.

"Why, Waldron!" gasped the girl, seizing him by the slack of his shoulders and lifting him once more ignominiously in air. "What do you mean! What do you mean!"

Then did Young Waldron again give way to the shame of tears, threw back his head and bellowed: "You put me down, you woman! You leave me alone! He's going to tell me the sto-story of the sp-spoon the pig bit."

A look of stunned amazement swept across the girl's face, followed instantly by one of doubt, and then by one of intense questioning. She turned pale.

"Waldron," she said, lowering him until the tips of his toes just touched the asphalt, and by that stroke of supernal wisdom stilling his cries by the wizardy of hope reborn, "listen to me. If you will repeat exactly what the Big—what he—whispered to you, I'll let you go."

"He said," stuttered Waldron, even while he twisted his head and eyes in eager search for his mighty friend, "'if you'll come with me I'll tell you the mysteerous story of the spoon the pig bit.' That's what he said."

Faithful to her word, the girl released him, watched him dart off with his nose half way to the ground for all the world like a pup on the tracks of a lost master, and then stood for a moment quite still except for the fluttering of her breast, the dreamy widening of her big blue eyes, the quivering of her tremulous half smiling lips, and the ebb and flow of a rosy tide of color in her cheeks.

As one walking in sleep but led by a happy dream she took up the westward trail, walked swiftly until she caught sight of the reunited adventurers and then still followed meekly, ten paces in the rear. Her face was transfigured. No longer did it look lonely to the verge of tears; mischief and wonder had dawned in her eyes. No more could her life be coldly measured by numbers, twenty-one rising twenty-two. She was any age, no age; she was Youth, God bless her, with its tongue out and on the way to cream.

The eternal triangle made its silent but expectant way to the gate at Seventy-seventh street, crossed Central Park west, turned into a side street, entered the portal of a vast edifice, took the elevator, rose to the twelfth floor, paused with calm or racing pulse in the penumbra of the hall, listened to the click of a latchkey, came to the appointed end of its pilgrimage in a room as vast, as surprising, and almost as wonderful as its owner, the enormous young man.

It was a room flooded with soft light straight from Harlem, it was four-square and the high reaches of its walls carried with an air of complacent condescension large unframed canvases. In a big fireplace embers glowed and perfumed the silent, drowsy spaces with memories of campfires in the open. On the scarred floor there were rugs, well worn [illegible] a little rumpled; ponderous furniture that seemed to defy moving days by William Johnston hung up the phone, as Rush stood there watching him. He staggered weakly to a chair and collapsed, muttering to himself, apparently unmindful of his secretary.

The woman came out on the porch. Clinging to her skirts was a child with big blue eyes that with no great stretch of the imagination might be said to resemble those of Ruthina Dushane.

"If it wasn't Treptikoff," Rush heard him muttering perplexedly, "there's only one other thing possible. There's a traitor in camp—a traitor in my own office."

. . . . .

"Mr. Hardy has excellent judgment," said Miss Blair. "His deduction agrees entirely with mine. There certainly is some one with brains behind Caspar Dietz who put him up to this."

"I think you are both wrong," asserted Rush. "It looks to me like the crudest sort of a servant's plot to blackmail a silly girl. That's all there is to it."

It had been half-past 2 before she had telephoned him that she was ready to start for Westchester. Although he had felt some compunction at leaving his employer alone, for after his telephone conversation with Grundy, Mr. Hardy had seemed on the verge of collapse, Rush had hastened to join her. As they rode north through the park in Miss Blair's roadster, which she handled with a skill that won her companion's admiration, he had told her in detail of his conversation with his employer and of his advice that Hugh Smith be called in to handle the case.

"I agree with Mr. Hardy," said the girl, "that some person of brains planned this blackmailing plot. Servants don't think in such large sums of money. If it was Caspar's own idea he would have asked for a few thousands. When we find the real criminal—if we do—I am confident that it will be some one familiar with what goes on in the financial district, some one who knew of this money having been paid over to Miss Dushane."

"I wonder," said Rush, thoughtfully, "if it could be some one in Mr. Hardy's office?"

As they journeyed northward, interestedly discussing the case, it came out that Miss Blair had called at Miss Dushane's home in the interval between her visit to the hotel and the time they began their journey, although she did not confide to Rush what had been the object of her call.

"She only wrote Dietz three letters altogether," she announced. "We must make certain that we get all three of the letters."

"If we get them," said Rush, dubiously.

"We must get them," cried his companion. "We must."

"But how? He probably guards them with the utmost care."

"I have a plan. Let me do all the talking when we get there."

They had little difficulty in locating Dietz's home, an unpretentious frame house, much in need of paint, that was located about half a mile from one of Westchester's many pretty little villages. It stood somewhat back from the main road, but there was a rudely lettered board—"C Dietz. Dogs Boarded. Puppies for Sale"—that guided them to the place.

An Airedale puppy tied to a tree in the front yard was yelping dismally as they drove up, and a vociferous chorus of dogs of all degrees dashed forward to proclaim their arrival.

As Miss Blair skillfully guided the car up to the front door and sprang out, her companion watched wonderingly as she lifted from the floor of the car a camera. What had been her purpose in bringing it with her? Did she, he asked himself, hope to find an opportunity to snapshot Dietz and his wife, in the hope of being able to identify their pictures later in the rogues' gallery at police headquarters? Before he had time to put any questions to her about it the front door opened and a slatternly garbed woman of middle age peered suspiciously out.

"What is it?" she asked, politely enough. "Do you wish to see about a dog?"

"I'm a dog photographer," Miss Blair announced. "My specialty is taking pictures of puppies. Have you any dogs you want photographed?"

The woman now came out on the porch. Clinging to her skirts was a child, a boy about 2. He was blond, with big blue eyes—eyes that with no great stretch of the imagination might be said to resemble those of Ruthina Dushane.

"No, we don't want no pictures taken," the woman was saying, her air of politeness quickly vanishing as she discovered the visitors had not come to buy, when a man came slouching around the house. He was in his shirt sleeves, squat, broad shouldered, with a stolid, almost vacuous face. He walked with the stodgy tread of men who work in the soil.

"What is it, Sophie?" he asked, almost inhospitably, his thick gutturals betraying his foreign origin.

"These people here," said his wife, hostilely, "want to make pictures of our dogs. I told them we didn't want none."

Caspar Dietz eyed the visitors silently for a moment and then looked thoughtfully at the camera Miss Blair was carrying. It was a good sized one, with a tripod.

"You take dog pictures?" he asked.

"Yes," said Miss Blair. "Pictures of puppies are my specialty."

"You have your camera there, yes?"

"Here it is."

"You take pictures of other things, too, maybe?"

"Of course," replied the girl.

To Rush, watching her closely and wondering what was the coup she was planning, it was evident from the sparkle in her eye that things were going to her satisfaction, but he puzzled in vain to discover her motive.

"I can photograph anything," she repeated.

The man studied her for a moment without speaking, with a troubled expression in his face as if he was debating something with himself.

"Sophie," he said, turning sharply to his wife, "go into the house." As she obeyed him he came closer to Miss Blair and spoke again, this time almost in a whisper.

"Can you photograph writings—letters—just like they are?"

"Certainly."

"How much would you charge to make pictures of some letters?"

"How many are there to be photographed?"

"Three letters."

All at once his companion's clever scheme for getting hold of Ruthina Dushane's letters dawned on Rush, and he looked with new admiration and respect on Anne Blair. Of course, he understood now what her idea was. She had figured it out that before the man made any use of the documents he might want to have them photographed. She had reasoned that the sight of the camera would naturally suggest such a proceeding to him. But how, he wondered, did she hope to escape with the letters, even if she should succeed in getting them into her hands?

He looked anxiously at the car and noticed with satisfaction that she had taken the precaution to leave the engine running. He felt again in his pocket to make sure that his automatic was within easy reach. It was not to be expected that Caspar would surrender the papers without a struggle. If Miss Blair should seize them and make a dash for the car, he was determined to block the man's passage until she had made her escape with them. After all, what were Ruthina Dushane's letters to him? It was Anne Blair's safety that concerned him most.

"How many copies of each letter would you wish?"

Caspar debated Miss Blair's question mentally for a moment before he answered her.

"Two copies of each letter—that would be six pictures."

"Fifty cents apiece," she answered, promptly. "That would be $3 for the lot."

Still the man seemed suspicious and doubtful, unable quite to make up his mind.

"Would you have to take the letters away with you?" he inquired.

"No, indeed. I can photograph them here right in front of your eyes. I'll bring you the prints tomorrow, and you can have the plates, too, so that no more copies can be made."

Pretending to play with the dogs that romped about the lawn, Rush began edging nearer and nearer to where Miss Blair was standing. He was anticipating that she might endeavor to snatch the letters from Caspar the moment he exhibited them, and he wanted to be where he could lend a hand at once. Slowly Caspar drew forth his wallet and with deliberation brought out three letters without envelopes—letters that both Miss Blair and Rush eyed with wild desires for possession springing up within them.

"We'll have to pin them up against the side of the house in the sun," said Miss Blair, setting up her camera on its tripod. "Can you get me some tacks or some pins?"

If she had been expecting the man to intrust the letters to her while he went for the pins, her ruse failed, for, tightly clutching the letters in his hand, he vanished into the house, returning a moment later with a paper of pins. Standing close beside Miss Blair, he handed her the pins and the three letters. Though Rush's nerves were in a state of high tension, Miss Blair seemed as calm as ever, the only indication of nervousness lying in the fact that just as she was about to pin up the letters she dropped the pins. Quickly Caspar stooped and picked them up, standing guard over the letters after they were in place as the girl moved off to the camera and adjusted it. There came a click from the instrument.

"That's all," said Miss Blair.

Hastily old Caspar tore down the letters and, folding them up, restored them to his wallet, with apparent relief.

"I pay you tomorrow when you bring the prints," he said.

"Certainly. That will be all right," said Miss Blair pleasantly, folding up the tripod and placing it with the camera in the car. As she did so she motioned to Rush to get into the car. Puzzled beyond measure that she had made no effort to retain the letters in her possession, he obeyed her. Climbing in beside him, she waved her hand to Caspar Dietz, and starting the car, drove steadily but speedily away, glancing back as they turned the corner to watch the ex-gardener still standing there, looking after them.

"It worked," she cried gaily, as soon as they were safely out of sight from the house. "I just knew it would."

"I don't understand," said Rush perplexedly. "Even if you have photographic copies of those letters, what good will they do? He still has the originals safe in his wallet. As long as they are in his possession Miss Dushane is in danger. What good will your photographs do?"

"I didn't take any photographs," she answered with a merry laugh. "That's where the joke on old Caspar comes in. I only took the letters."

for all time to come; easels and a working platform on wheels, and lastly there was a throne. It was a contented, comfortable, smiling, slightly supercilious room, a room where only giants could lounge, but where frail, unobtrusive mortals might quietly be happy.

Young Waldron, a little awed, stopped, put a finger of his free hand in his mouth and stared contemplatively at the throne. The Big Fellow lifted and swung him into its high seat, placed a pile of cushions under his dangling feet, and remarked: "Your chair. Whatever chair you look at first, it's yours. That's the rule."

The girl, still in the grip of what appeared to be an hypnotic trance, yet heard him subconsciously, walked forward hesitatingly, seated herself on the edge of a chair beside the fireplace, folded her hands in her lap and clasped them tightly to still their nervous trembling, but she was powerless to hide the betraying, uneven flutter of her breast. Slowly and shyly she raised her eyes and fixed them with purposeful intensity on the Big Fellow's face. He seemed wholly unconscious of her scrutiny, which pleased her, for her thoughts had a long road to travel.

He busied himself unconsciously with tea dishes and a sturdy movable table, produced biscuits and a loaf of cake which fairly oozed raisins, kicked the embers to a flame, fed them with fresh logs, hung a kettle on an iron hook, and swung it over the fire, and while he was doing these homely things he talked.

"Young Waldron," he said, "have you ever seen a farm? You have, have you? Well, then you know that there's no real farm without pigs, no pigs without food, no food without a spoon."

Waldron nodded in solemn acquiescence, his eyes fastened on the sticky fruit cake, his short arms outstretched to grasp the sides of the throne in a self-restraining grip.

"Well, it was this way," continued the young man's big voice. "There was a time when I wasn't a fullfledged pirate, when I hadn't yet killed man or woman nor assisted at the keel hauling of any mutinous mate; a time when I lived on a farm that lay cheek by jowl with another. Nevertheless, I was happier then than I've ever been since because I was a captain in a small way and had a crew of one under my complete control. It was made up of a woman."

The Big Fellow nodded thoughtfully. "Yes," he said, "she was a woman even then, with fight in her blue eyes and round chin. Three foot ten she stood in her rubber boots, but there was a man's peck of courage in her heart, as you yourself would have admitted if you could have stood by when I swung her off her feet by the two braids of her brown hair to see if she would cry."

"I suppose she did," remarked Young Waldron, half interestedly.

"Yes, she did," confirmed the Big Fellow, "but she bit, scratched, and kicked at the same time until what was left of me gave her the blood oath and took her on for a whole crew on the usual share basis. There wasn't much loot to be taken by fair means or foul on the rolling prairie, but whatever we got from the watering tanks, the overflow from the twin wells, or the mighty pigs' troughs, it was share and share alike, half to the forecastle, half to the quarter deck. But sooner or later to every Jolly Roger comes the day of treasure-trove and it came to us—a day as black as ever sun shone on, for it bared the pirate's cruel heart and broken faith that was in me."

The Big Fellow shook his head sadly from side to side. "It happened at one of the pigs' troughs," he continued. "They had dumped in the kitchen leavings and we were ranging up and down looking for plunder when the biggest porker in the pen, the crew and I simultaneously caught the bright unmistakable glint of silver. The porker got there first, seized the booty, and was off, but we were close on his heels. We drew alongside and gave him a broadside; got the wind of him, ranged forrard, and raked him stem to stern. Finally a solid green apple shot sent across his bows caught him in the snout by a miracle of chance. He dropped the plunder with a squeal of rage and fear. We swooped down on it, luffed, caught it up at the slack of the sail, and the next second we were off on the other tack and presently made the neck to the secret inlet behind the barn."

The enormous young man hung his head as though ashamed to go on. "When we had landed," he continued eventually, "and set to the work of burying the treasure, I insisted on a hole three feet deep and four feet long. The crew was puzzled, protested again and again that her back ached, and asked me why and wherefore, but I remained unmoved, smiling faintly at the treacherous thought that was to give me the name of the Tiger of the Plains. When the hole was at last completed to my satisfaction I dropped the silver in its depths and said to the crew in a rumbling voice, 'You, too. Get in. None shall tell this secret.'

"'What!' she gasped, her great blue eyes staring at me in wonder, unbelief, and overwhelming doubt.

"'Your grave,' I rumbled, pointing at the hole.

"Her lips trembled. She stood stunned, knocked silly by the blow of broken faith, and shook her head from side to side. That's the worst of women; they can't believe the blackness in the heart of man, its utter subjection to the call of cruel greed. Casting off my jacket, I stopped, leaped forward, caught her around the middle, tripped her, threw her, rolled her into the hole, and, not daring to reach for the spade, began ruthlessly to push the fresh red earth in double handfuls in upon her.

"'No! No!' she screamed and then sobbed as though her heart would break. 'O Captain, O Captain!'"

At this point a glimmer as of a jewel flashing in the sun distracted Young Waldron's fixed gaze from the cake. The gleam came from what appeared to be a single great tear, rolling slowly down the smooth oval of the girl's flushed cheek, but as never before had he seen a grownup cry and as the tear was not followed immediately by a flood, he dismissed the phenomenon and on a sudden instinctive impulse bellowed the one word, "Cake!"

Staring dreamily at the wet streak on the girl's face, the enormous young man picked up the plate containing the loaf which so richly oozed raisins and thrust it into Young Waldron's lap. "But when some of the earth got in her mouth," he continued firmly, "she suddenly stopped crying, gave a wriggle, hunched her back, and came out of that hole like six wildcats out of a wet bag. Her head struck me on the chin and as I was sitting on my heels over I went backwards and the next minute she fell on me, boarded me, tooth, nail, and foot, stamped on my face, and then ran. It was as quick as that. She went and she never, never came back. But the great thing, Young Waldron, was that she never told, never whispered a single word about the spoon the pig bit."

Young Waldron paid not the slightest attention to what was apparently the conclusion of a very mediocre yarn. His mouth was full of cake; cake smeared his cheeks, his ears, his nose, and oozed in streaks from the corners of his eyes, reminiscent of the tobacco colored tears which the Red Chested Terror once had shed. The Big Fellow stared at him, marveled absent mindedly, and then turned his gaze frankly and solely upon the girl.

"I carried it from place to place," he said to her and to her alone, "hid it again and again until it became like a black shadow buried in the darkest corner of my heart. I was glad when the farms struck oil and ours sold out while the other didn't. Worse than that, when the oil petered out and the other farm had lost its chance I heard of it at school far away and smiled because I thought now the crew could never get the money to follow me across the world and claim her own. But little does brutal youth know of the reach of the arm of justice or the fine mesh of the net of retribution!"

He drew from the table drawer a very old, thin, and dented silver spoon, leaned over and dropped it in the girl's lap. "For you," he said. "The spoon the pig bit."

"For me?" whispered the girl, seized the spoon, stared at it, and burst into tears. "O captain," she sobbed, "you've grown so terribly big and—and so famous, and of course I've seen your name, but I thought it must be a very old man to have done such great things and how could I know you anyway because all your freckles are gone and you're so big, so terribly big, and——"

"Crying!" muttered young Waldron scornfully through a mouthful of cake.

"For you," repeated the enormous young man, striding up and down rapidly before the fireplace, and cracking his knuckles like pistol shots.

"Stop that!" cried the girl suddenly. "Don't do it! I don't like it." She stood up and stamped her foot.

"For you," repeated the Big Fellow, unheeding, but presently desisting to wave his arms in a wide windmill gesture. "For you sun, moon, world, and stars, fame, fortune, my heart, and the spoon the pig bit because you were there; because you're of me; because time began for you and me equally and left all else strange and strangers to us two forevermore."

The girl stepped forward boldly, stood directly in his path, reached up and seized the lapels of his rough tweed coat. "Stop a minute," she said quite calmly. "Now, tell me. What are you talking about?"

"Love," said the Big Fellow, staring down into her determined face. "Not a spasm of affection, you understand. Not German measles nor paratyphoid nor varioloid nor any of those passing affectations of the deluded mind. No! Smallpox, the real thing, branded in the flesh."

The girl shuddered and half turned from him. He swept his arms about her, raised her slowly, tenderly, firmly from the floor until she rested secure against his breast. "Bury you," he whispered, but even a murmur from that voice was like thunder, sleepy and good natured, but thunder for all that, vibrant with distant possibilities of storm. "Bury you," he repeated, "bury you alive, here, in my heart, home again whether you like it or not, for the rest of life."

The girl shook her head from side to side so close to his face that her hair tickled his nose and made it wrinkle funnily so that she wanted to laugh, but she said quite soberly, "No; you take everything too much for granted. I can't give myself like that; never."

"Everything is never too much," declared the enormous young man calmly and tightened his arms until he felt the girl's heart [illegible] to beat fast and faster. "It's the [illegible] that only take half who go smash! All the people in the world who only take half. And as for giving yourself, you poor dear, we had nothing to do with that and you know it. They grew you mine just as they grew you with the deepest blue eyes and the brownest brown hair, and how do I know? Because I was stone and now I can talk, because big juicy words are fresh on my tongue today and because presently I shall roar and frown to my heart's content, and you know and I know that you won't run away and hide. Buried, you are; buried alive and your heart is beating so fast, so very fast, my darling, that it will burst and splatter us both with our blood if you don't look at me, look at me now and please—please—"

Silence, an incredibly long silence, fell upon the room; it was young Waldron who finally broke it.

"Kissing!" he muttered, disgustedly, stickily, sleepily.

After a while the girl whispered, "Aren't you tired?"

"Tired?" rumbled the giant in her ear. "If it weren't for having to call a taxi, fetch young Waldron's boat, and deliver him charges paid, goods subject to exchange, you and I would stay here just as we are while walls crumbled and nations passed away, till Martians on the wing would poise and say, 'So grew these two of equal mingled blood and bone and flesh that it was given them to stand like some forgotten statue and laugh forever in the face of time.'"

MIRAGE

by M. E. Gordon

[Adapted by E. Charles Vivian.]

MY lady and I were having supper together. Neither of us would have cared to count up how many years had passed since last we had supper together at a dance. Yet, in point of age—as the world generally reckons age—we were neither of us old, any more than were her husband and my wife, also having supper together that night somewhere in the same house.

I could still face my nephews and my own sons across a tennis net, nor fear comparison between my figure and theirs; my lady could have claimed, had she so chosen, a whole program full of partners, nor had she, any more than her daughter—who had just come out—cause to blush with dismay at the thought that, in accordance with convention, she must garb herself in a low frock for a dance like this.

Yet, as we sat there behind the tall screen that gave us shelter—sat at the little table and made a pretense of eating in our seclusion—we were old, she and I, old—old—old—not as the world that lives superficially may count but as the smaller world that feels must reckon. Still, we laughed and talked of nowadays and of nothing else. She spoke of the coming marriage of her eldest daughter, and I spoke of my work, for now, as always, that pleased her best, from me.

That there ran, deep below the ripple of our talk of today, a fierce current of the other days—that we knew, I think; so deep below was it, however, that one could almost have thought that there was no such strong underflow, and our talk was merely a shallow little stream, deep enough only to hold the sun ripples. This dance, at which we had met now, was a particularly well managed affair, for one could take supper where and when one pleased; there were unexpected corners, all over the house, offering little tables and seclusion to any who wished it. These tables, too, were not too near each other.

Beyond the screen that hid our own corner, beneath a great flowering summer breathing lilac bush, were two deep chairs. This we knew, having left them but a few minutes before. And so old were we that a lilac, flowering thus in mid-winter, casting its scent and shadow over the two deep chairs, had seemed to us the refinement of exquisite torture.

But we heard light steps, the rustle of soft garments, and then a rising and falling of subdued voices, and thus we knew that to some others that corner was exquisite—but not in torture. Since the two there were not of our acquaintance—neither one of her daughters nor a son of mine—we forgot them after the girl's first little cry that caused us to smile—"This is a delicious place!" But suddenly, when a pause had fallen in our own talk, they were recalled to us, for the girl's voice was suddenly raised. There was in it just the faintest rise in tone, just enough to bring it to our ears.

Do you know—we barely caught the words that were not meant for our ears at all—I wonder if—if the others have told you. Do you know that you have the very dearest mouth in all the world? The—very——" Then silence, and I looked across at my lady.

She had grown as white as her own slender wrist, and her eyes were full of tears. As I still looked at her she half turned with a little restless movement that was young as a child's and buried her face in her arms upon the arm of the chair. So she stayed.

Stayed while I gazed in old despair at the little space behind her ear that was still so soft and white—at the little soft dent in the nape of her neck, the little dent that had always been half hidden by a tiny curling of her hair. Then, just when I would have risen to leave her alone—for the old madness had come upon me, despite the years between—she lifted her head, slowly, from her folded arms. She leaned her elbows on the table and her chin upon her closed hands and so looked at me. There were no stains of tears about her eyes, but they were very soft and very bright.

"I am such a fool," she said, "and so—I can see it by your face—are you. But I am all right, now—it was a mirage, you know, that is all. So long ago since one could have said that—since one did say it."

Her voice failed and two big drops that had quivered on the underlids of her eyes slipped and rolled and lay a moment, shining and exquisite, on the satin of her frock.

"So long ago!" she said, and stretched out her hand across the table to grasp my own. I held it very closely, very tightly, for it was cold, and it was so long a while since her hand had lain cold in mine.

"Your hand, Frank"—she spoke with a little shadow of a laugh—"Your hand is so cold. Why—why—it has not been——"

But I still held her hand, and as she looked at me I think a sudden realization of time came to us both—a memory of the big sons and daughters who had, just for that one minute, become as unreal as ghosts.

"The—the very dearest mouth in all the world," I whispered, and we two listened, but there came to us now no sound from beneath the lilac tree that had flowered in mid-winter.

"It was—just mirage, my lady," I said.

WHICH?

Blair. "She is coming to see me tomorrow at 11. Can you come up to my rooms then?"

Breakfasting alone the next morning in the hotel dining room, with his mind still absorbed by the perplexing events of the night before, Rush involuntarily kept turning toward the entrance several times, hoping against hope that Anne Blair might repent her decision and join him at the table.

"Miss Blair will not be in this morning," said the voice of Meyer at his elbow. "She had breakfast sent to her rooms."

"Did she send you to give me that message?" asked Rush frigidly, flushing with annoyance that his impatient expectation had betrayed him to the servitor.

"O, no, sir; pardon me, sir," said the man obsequiously. "I merely noticed that you appeared to be watching the door."

"Well, what if I was?" Rush answered gruffly, burying himself in the paper in an effort to hide his annoyance, but all the while he remained in the dining room, secretly studying the masklike face of the head waiter, trying to read there some evidence of the guilt he felt certain was burdening this man whose surveillance he had found so offensive.

His breakfast finished, he loitered over the papers until it was time to go to Miss Blair's apartment, timing his arrival to the exact minute of 11, but even so he found that Miss Dushane had preceded him.

In the daylight, in street dress, the poor little heiress looked even homelier and more plebeian than she had the evening before in her party gown. Although the dress and hat that she now had on undoubtedly had come from a fashionable shop and had cost a pretty penny, somehow they merely served to emphasize her unattractiveness. Her undeveloped face, always pasty, now was marked with the lines of worry and distress, and her round blue eyes, ordinarily her most attractive feature, looked red and strained, as if she might have spent the night in tears.

"You will help me; you must help me!" she was urging Anne Blair in tones of frantic desperation as Rush entered. "I cannot fight them. I dare not."

"Of course we'll help you," Miss Blair replied soothingly. "Mr. Rush and I both will do whatever we can, but first you must tell us what it is all about. What is troubling you! Whom do you mean by they?"

"It's Caspar," cried the heiress, "Caspar Dietz. He says he will ruin me, will destroy my reputation, will prevent my marriage unless——"

She hesitated and a great sob rose in her throat. It was evident that her coming marriage meant much to her. Apparently all the affection and love of which she was capable had flowered to its utmost at the cavalier attentions of the polished young Italian officer who had laid siege to her heart.

"Unless what?" persisted Miss Blair.

"Unless I pay him before noon next Tuesday a hundred thousand dollars," came the astounding answer.

"Why, it's blackmail," cried Rush indignantly. "It is easy enough to put a stop to that. Send for the police and have him arrested. The law makes short shrift of blackmailers."

"You don't understand," said Miss Dushane plaintively. "I can't. I daren't."

With a pathetic gesture of appeal she drew forth from a little bag she was carrying a [illegible]ment of some sort and held it forth for [illegible] inspection.

"[illegible]," she cried, bursting into sobs, "see, here is the letter he wrote me."

Wonderingly, Rush took the paper she handed, and, with Anne Blair looking over his shoulder, they read it together, an amazing missive, written in an illiterate hand on the cheapest sort of stationery. It read:

> "Miss Ruthina Dushane: Respected Miss—I read in the papers yet that you are to be married soon with Count de Carlo. We write to ask you what you will do about your child we have been keeping for you.
> "CASPAR DIETZ."

"Your child!" gasped Anne Blair, for once shaken out of her self-composure.

"That's what he says," wailed the girl; "and I never had a child."

"It's nothing but an outrageous attempt to blackmail an unprotected girl," began Rush, stirred to wrath by the crude audacity of the letter. "We'll——"

"Wait a moment," said Anne, laying a restraining hand on his arm. "We must get at the bottom of this. We must first learn all the facts. Miss Dushane, calm yourself. Give us your entire confidence and we will see you through. I promise you that. If you have done nothing wrong the man is powerless to hurt you. Now, tell us everything. First, just who is Caspar Dietz?"

"He used to be our gardener. He has known me ever since I was a little girl. I know his wife, too. He married Sophie, one of our maids."

"When did he write you this letter?" questioned Rush.

"I got it two weeks ago, a day or two after my engagement had been announced in the papers."

"What did you do?"

"I couldn't imagine what he meant by it, so I went up to see him about it and ask him what he meant by such a letter."

"Where does he live?"

"After he left my father's employ he bought a little place in Westchester county. He and his wife run a dog kennel, a place where they take dogs to board."

"What did he say when you saw him?"

"I saw them both, Caspar and Sophie. They had a boy baby there, a child about 2 years old. They both insisted that it was mine. They said they would have to tell Guido about it unless I made some arrangement with them."

"What did you do?"

"I was so surprised and horrified I didn't know just what to do. I told them their story was ridiculous and that they could not get any one to believe them. Caspar was very determined and stubborn about it. He showed me some letters that I had written, which he said would prove to any one that the child was mine."

"Letters," repeated Miss Blair in amazement. "Had you written them the letters?"

The girl nodded miserably.

"That's the unfortunate part of it," she went on to explain. "It is all perfectly ridiculous, but just the same it's terrible. The letters were all written about a dog of mine they were keeping for me, my dog Dick. Now, Caspar and Sophie, say the baby's name is Dick and that the letters are about baby. They say unless I pay them they will send the letters to Guido."

"What was in the letters?" asked Rush. "Do you remember how they read?"

The color mounted into Ruthina Dushane's pale cheeks as she answered confusedly:

"That's the worst part of it. They're such silly letters. All of them speak of inclosing money for my Dickie's board and ask how the little darling is getting on and all that sort of thing. They really do sound as if they might have been written about a child, but, of course, they weren't."

"It's absurd," cried Rush indignantly. "They never can get away with a fake case like that. You must defy them. You must have them arrested at once."

"I can't do that," cried the girl, with stubborn determination. "I won't. Mr. Rush," she said, turning to him with something of the spirit of rough old Tom Dushane. "You do not understand. There must be no publicity whatever about this. If I should have them arrested it would get into the papers. Remember who I am. Ever since I can recollect the newspapers have been printing dreadful things about us, about my father, and—" she hesitated, coloring a little—"and about my mother.

"I never have been able to make any friends, any nice friends, or to have any social position. The only thing that has comforted me, that has made it possible for me to endure things, has been my knowledge that there never has been any scandal about me. I have always lived quietly and have done my best to avoid any one's talking about me. Always, all my life, I have been looking forward hopefully, wishing and wishing that some good man might seek me out and ask me to be his wife and take me away from everything, from the horrid scandals of the past, from the terrible memories of my childhood.

"The man has come and I have kept myself worthy of him. But Count Guido is proud, proud of his family and position. Think what it will mean if I have Caspar and Sophie arrested, if a single word or hint of this disgraceful story they tell ever becomes public. No matter if they both are sent to prison, no matter if their story is absurd, impossible, dastardly, and untrue, the newspapers will take it up. They will revive the past. People will talk and will whisper that there must be something behind it. My reputation, the only thing I've got to be really proud of, will be ruined and blackened, and I'll lose Guido; yes, even though I am innocent, absolutely innocent of what they say."

"Yes," said Anne Blair, tears of sympathy welling up in her great dark eyes as she put an arm comfortingly about the distressed little heiress, "what you say is true, cruelly true. The story must never become public. People would be sure to talk and some of them would believe it."

"What would you advise me to do, then—pay them?"

"How much was it they asked for?"

"A hundred thousand dollars. It's a lot, but I can raise it. Some property of mine was sold last week and I have the money in bank. It isn't the money, though. I should have plenty left, but dad used often to warn me against ever paying blackmail. 'There's nothing so hungry as hush money,' he used to say. 'Once you start paying it, you never can stop.' What do you advise? Ought I to pay them and get the letters back? That would keep them quiet until after I was married."

"Certainly not," cried Miss Blair, with flashing eyes. "Don't pay them a single cent. Mr. Rush and I will go up there this very afternoon and get those letters back."

"O, if you only can I'll be so grateful," breathed the girl.

Wondering what inspiration had come to his co-worker when she had promised so rashly that she would get the letters, Rush escorted the heiress to the elevator and returned once more to Miss Blair's apartment, eager to learn what she had in mind.

"How do you expect to get the letters? The girl is telling the truth, isn't she? You don't think it is her child?"

"Of course it isn't her child," Anne Blair answered. "I have no plan yet for getting the letters, but we've got to get them. Intelligence always wins and if you and I together are not more intelligent than an ex-gardener and his servant wife, I'll be greatly astonished. Now, run along and let me think it out alone. You can go up there with me this afternoon, can't you?"

"I would not consent to your going without me," replied Rush with dignity. "Evidently that man is a dangerous sort of person and I would not consent to your seeing him alone."

"O, indeed," said Anne, her eyes sparkling mischievously. "Sir, don't you realize that times have changed, that the modern, up to date young woman is perfectly capable of looking out for herself?"

"I suppose she thinks so," retorted Rush crossly.

"But what if Hardy comes home?" she taunted, "you will not have your afternoon free. You can't go then."

"Hardy or no Hardy," he cried, "you are not going up there alone; but I don't expect Mr. Hardy back until late this afternoon or this evening."

For once, though, Rush was wrong in his calculations. When he returned to his own apartments he found Harrison Hardy there, seated at his desk, looking old, and gray, and tired, as though he might have spent a sleepless night.

"Did a letter come?" he asked, "a letter from Grundy?"

"Yes," said Rush, taking it from his pocket, where he had put it for safe keeping. "Here it is. I have decoded it. It is about the Ordinoff case."

"Give it to me," demanded Hardy, snatching it from his hand and scanning it eagerly, as Rush watched his face to see if his remark about the Ordinoff case had hit the target.

"Bah," cried Hardy, crumpling the letter as he finished reading it. "He's wrong. It must have been Treptikoff's men who got the money. Who else could it have been?"

A sudden daring came to Rush. Like the well trained and diplomatic secretary that he was, he never hitherto had sought for more information than Harrison Hardy had seen fit to volunteer, but now, keyed up by his interest in solving the mystery of the death of the beautiful young Russian, he decided to see if he could not extract some more information about her.

"You mean the two millions that vanished when Miss Ordinoff was murdered, of course," he said.

"Huh! What!" growled his employer, striving to regain his self-control and to assume his most bearish manner. "What are you talking about?"

"You will recall," said Rush, speaking calmly, though inwardly in a panic of trepidation, "that you already told me of the missing funds, and I also heard you discussing the case with the mayor."

"Well, what of it?"

"In spite of Hugh Smith's discovery that a waiter committed the crime," Rush went on bravely, "there are many things about the case that convinced me and a young woman of my acquaintance who became interested that it was something more than a mere murder for robbery."

"A young woman," retorted Harrison Hardy, "What young woman?"

"Miss Blair, Miss Anne Blair, a girl who lives here in the hotel. She has a wonderfully logical mind. She was in the Le Barons' room right after the body was found. She heard Mrs. Le Baron's screams and came in. She said right away that it was a waiter's crime or——"

"Or what?" asked Harrison Hardy curiously, as his secretary hesitated.

"Or that the crime was committed by some one posing as a waiter. It is her opinion that it was the result of some sort of plot. She really has wonderful powers of deduction. Last night she met for the first time Ruthina Dushane. She scented that the girl was in some sort of deep trouble and asked her if she could not be of assistance to her. This morning Miss Dushane came to see her and she has just finished telling us of a most audacious attempt to blackmail her out of $100,000."

"A hundred thousand dollars," repeated Hardy, always interested when money was mentioned. "Who did you say this girl was."

"Ruthina Dushane—old Tom Dushane's daughter?"

"Tell me all about it," demanded Hardy, listening intently as his secretary repeated the amazing tale that the heiress had just related.

"That's queer, damned queer," Hardy muttered, half to himself, as Rush ended his story. "A hundred thousand dollars was paid into Miss Dushane's account in the trust company last week for the sale of the Old Tom mine properties. I wonder how they came to ask for that amount. Look here, Rush, you'd better get Hugh Smith in on this case right away."

Quickly Rush protested that such a proceeding was not to be thought of. His knowledge of and connection with the case, he explained, was quite incidental, having been brought about wholly through his friendship with Miss Blair.

"I really should not have spoken of the matter even to you," he insisted. "Miss Dushane told her troubles to Miss Blair just as one girl to another, and Miss Blair volunteered to get the letters back."

"It's no case for a woman to handle," he growled. "There's brains somewhere behind this plot against the Dushane girl. How would a kennel keeper up in Westchester be posted on the girl's bank account? How would he know the amount of cash she had on hand. Tell me that?"

"Caspar Dietz used to be the Dushane gardener," suggested Rush. "He may have had a spy planted in the Dushane home, one of the servants who kept him posted on Miss Dushane's affairs, possibly her maid."

"That's only guessing," he snorted. "Hugh Smith could get those letters better than any girl could. How's she going to get them?"

"I don't know. She asked me if I would motor up to Caspar Dietz's place with her this afternoon."

"Go, by all means," he said, "and see if you can learn how the man kept tabs on her bank account."

As Rush turned happily away, rejoicing that he had arranged so easily to be free to accompany Miss Blair on her trip, the telephone in the apartment rang and he hastened to answer it. It was Mr. Grundy.

"Is Mr. Hardy there?" he asked, anxiety in his tones.

"Yes, just a minute," the secretary answered, summoning his employer.

Amazedly he listened to the conversation that followed, interpreting it as far as one-half the sentences permitted.

"What's that? Impossible for Treptikoff and his agents to be involved? I tell you it must have been they. No one else knew she was coming to me to get the money. What's that? Department of justice men have been shadowing them all for days. What's that? Louder. I can't hear you. What's that? You've seen reports covering the activities of all five of them for the last week. They have been watched day and night?"

Harrison Hardy, gray faced and trembling,

The NOMINEE

"He Never Made a Friend He Couldn't Use, and Onct He'd Used 'Em He'd Drop 'Em—Even His Kin."

MY sister Margaret has always been calm and not easily ruffled by externals. She feels things very deeply, but she never puts anything into words as the rest of the tribe does, and, therefore, many of the family never know what she thinks about anything, or even whether she is tired. Only in her affection and its expression is Margaret prodigal; but even then she never gushes. She has a righteous anger, but she has never used it enough for most persons to know it is there, so it serves, I suppose, merely to give backbone to a kindly nature and help make her what she is. It is no wonder I like to talk about her, because she has been father and mother as well as sister to me ever since we were left alone, years and years ago.

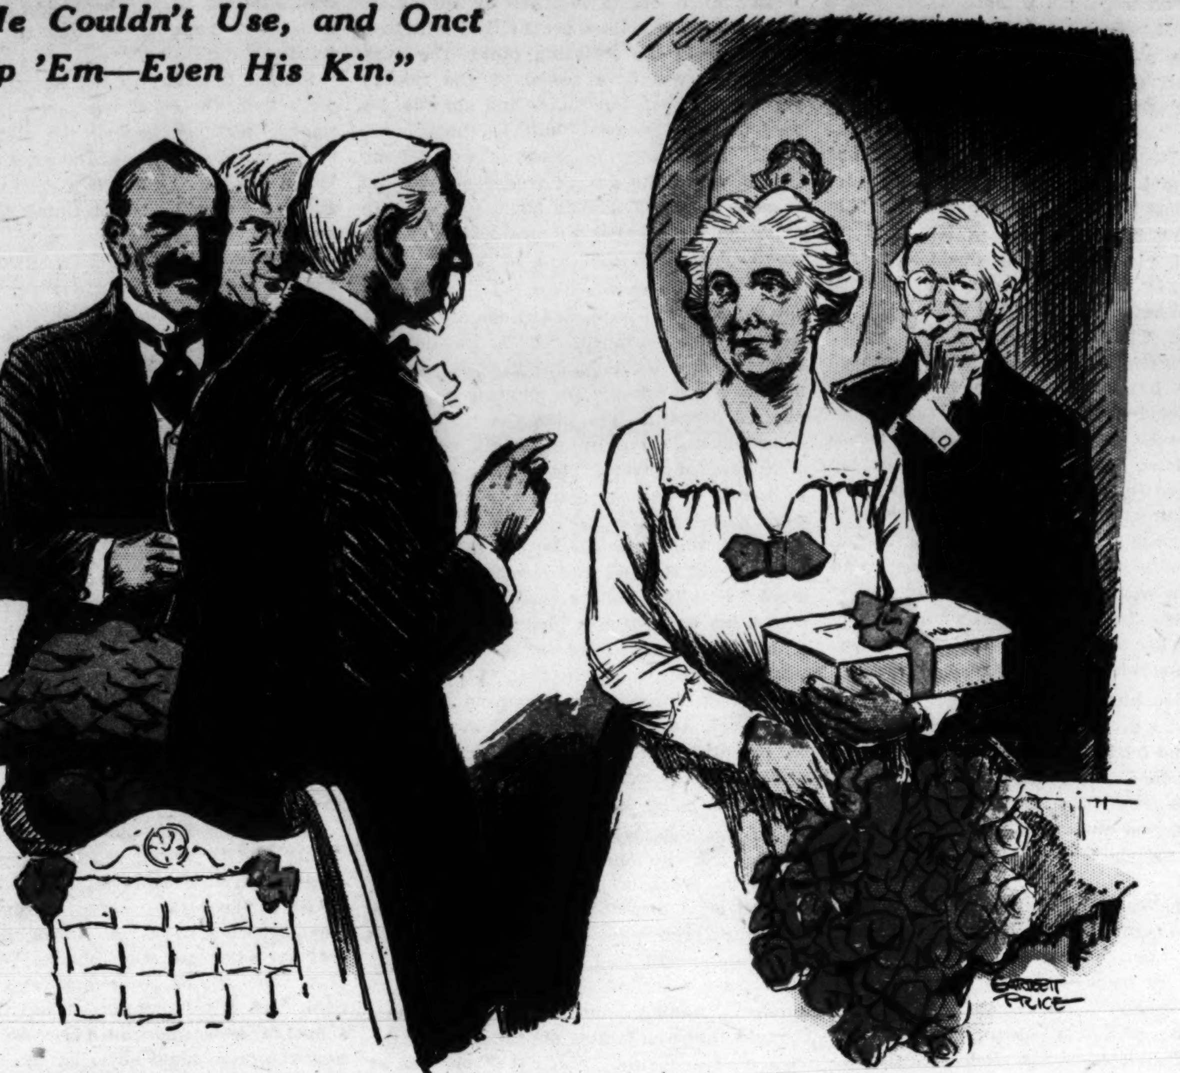
There never were two sisters more unlike, and my heedless impetuosity has probably been one of her trials, though she has never indicated anything of the sort by word or look. There are some things that Margaret has always stood out against, like gambling and drinking, and women's everlasting playing bridge; but the wideness of her uncritical love for folks has always amazed me, who sputters over the way people act and wonder at times whether things are worth while.

I was still an awkward little girl when Margaret married Joe Woodbridge, so, as she was all the family I had, I lived with them in the dear old Woodbridge place, with the trees that whispered to me nights when the wind blew. Mother was a Comstock, and the Comstocks have always loved trees and flowers, while father's Averys care more for things they can make or manage. I puttered around the yard, after the housework was done, while Margaret directed with unfailing tact our small household and such little village affairs as fell to her share. She was always unobtrusive and thoughtful, but she was called on to help everywhere because she knew what to do in case of burns, cut arteries, and other emergencies, and she was as well acquainted with Robert's Rules of Order as she was with the Golden Book of True and Tried Recipes.

Margaret's short married life was very happy, but I, in my heathenish fashion, have always been grateful to Joe for leaving this world when the leaving was good. His boy Avery was only 3 months old when Joe died of the typhoid that raged before they put in the filter plant, and Margaret was left a well to do widow, with considerable property aside from the old Woodbridge place. Feeling as I did, that Joe was not going to wear well, it seemed to me a fortunate thing for Margaret and her memories; but she naturally did not look at it in that light. Her grief nearly killed her, though she never shed a tear, and it was only the necessity of living for her boy that saved her to us.

The Woodbridges all felt, I think, that Margaret in her calm young sorrow did them great credit, for they were a dignified clan that dreaded noise and conspicuous things, and she was like a grief stricken queen whose sorrow was sacred. It was a consolation, too, to them that Margaret refused to marry again (also that she had several attractive opportunities), preferring to remain a Woodbridge on the Woodbridge place, with all the old Woodbridge traditions. I have often grumbled when they spoke of their kinsfolk, because there's nobody better in race than the Averys and the Comstocks; but I must acknowledge they are a gracious crowd that do not boast, but take it for granted that they must be good as a duty because they are great by ancestry.

Avery Woodbridge was in the lower school when I married John Drake for his sunny disposition, and went back to the house we children were born in—the old Avery place that Margaret had quitclaimed to me. Margaret's boy was self-possessed and dignified, but with a courtly manner that made friends for him even among the most critical. If there was anything in him of his father's self-centered complacency he gave no sign of it. At times he needed reproof, but he took it as a stone wall would a thrashing—silent, cold, unresponsive. Margaret declared he felt it all very keenly, but there were those who doubted.



Col. Callihan presented her with an enormous bunch of hothouse roses and a box of candy, and the little ceremony ended very abruptly.

"He has no more heart than a cat," Uncle Peter Comstock told me, grimly. "He makes a noise like affection, but the purring does not mean he feels anything. He has only pride. If your sister would up and marry the president of the United States, he would talk about her all the time, but as things are——"

I was, like every one else except Uncle Peter Comstock, very fond of Avery, and he spent a great deal of time at my house playing with my babes. I found him charming, handsome, an out and out ideal boy, and I condemned Uncle Peter as a cross curmudgeon who had forgotten his youth. When Avery went away to prep school and wrote boyish volumes to his mother I ventured to point out to Uncle Peter how "pleasantly disappointed" he ought to be. Uncle Peter shrugged his shoulders and delivered himself of one remark before he drove away.

"When a man's a boy he favors his mother," he said. "When a boy's a man, he's his father's son."

There never was a boy who had a better time than Avery Woodbridge, for constant company to meals, frequent little parties, and numerous picnics down the river kept the house in a glow of excited joy. Margaret reveled in it all with her boy, but there were days when her feet ached terribly, and one never saw her at any time without the dark circles of fatigue under her large eyes. I had five babies and no help, so I was obliged to forego the cherished pleasure of listening to Margaret's labors, but when I spoke of my regret in the matter, Margaret, to my surprise, did not understand why I should consider it necessary to explain. Old Ann, who had been in the family for a generation, was all she would need, though it was kind, of course, in me to think of it.

Though I knew old Ann was about as much good as the figurehead on the ancient ship in the harbor, there was nothing more for me to say and I swallowed all my remarks and devoted myself to the simple things of my own household, while Margaret made Pershing mousse and chocolate marshmallow cake and chaperoned dances and week-end parties. Of course, it was not my concern that there were not five minutes in the day that Margaret could sit and rock nor an hour at night when she had nothing on her mind.

Avery worked, the summer before he went to college, from sheer restlessness, I fancy. But he never had been lazy, and Margaret was very proud of his energy. She had to get up every morning at 4 because he wanted a swim before he went to the factory office, and he would not have time to eat if he waited for breakfast until he came back from the river. She talked a great deal of Avery, and with good reason. Everything he touched succeeded, not because he was lucky, but because his native ability gave him the power to overcome obstacles with grit and determination.

He won all the prizes in study and athletics, he "made" teams in his freshman year, he took the Phi Beta Kappa key in junior, he was editor of his college paper, they made him president of the senior class—everything was his. The town became so accustomed to his triumphs that we asked each other, "What's Avery done now?" as a matter of course.

I could not go to commencement, so I don't remember what honors escaped Avery, but I do know that his class day oration was really remarkable, because I read it in our town weekly, which published it entire, with a generous disregard for the price of print paper. Margaret went, however, and came back with pink cheeks and shining eyes, proud enough to—to explode.

Of course, Avery could not stay in a village like ours, even his mother knew that, so we gave him a farewell round of gayety and set him on his way rejoicing. His name had secured for him a place with a well known firm of lawyers in the city, and from Margaret we learned of promotions and new and valuable friendships again and again. Such a person drifts naturally into politics, and Avery began as somebody's assistant to shine in public. He was busy and his letters were brief and infrequent, but Margaret quoted from them as though they were the volumes of his school days. She worked in and about the town that winter when the flu was so bad—of course, everybody sent for her—and there wasn't a professional nurse in the state that worked harder or with longer hours.

Margaret liked getting out among people again, and as soon as the epidemic was over she worked just as hard on relief and civic and patriotic committees as she had before. She missed Avery and she must be busy, she said. She was just beginning to be her normal self and have lots of time to rest nights when the politicians came down like wolves on the fold.

I suppose I ought not to put it that way, though, because of all the mild mannered men, they were the most so, those four. You see, our town does not boast a real hotel—just a traveling men's place that is always full—and so Avery sent the four of them to his mother's with a note asking her to take them in. I recollect she had been helping all the morning getting Ladies' Aid lunch, the way we do, and she'd been over at Minnie Lane's reading aloud to Minnie's blind mother for two hours in the afternoon. She stopped in at my house kind of tired, and we made her stay to supper and play lady. We would not let her help even with the dishes, the children and I, and she sat and rocked on the porch and talked to John. She wanted to go home early for fear old Ann would forget to set the bread, and so John took her back the short way across the timber lot and through the field.

They found the four men smoking on the porch, because old Ann would not let them come in, and they read Avery's note by the light of the street lamp. Of course, there was nothing for it but to make them welcome, so Margaret excused herself and she and John and old Ann worked like beavers putting clean sheets on and filling water pitchers, and all the thousand things there always are to do when folks come unexpectedly. It was after 10 when John came back, and he said he bet it would be past midnight before Margaret could get to bed. He hadn't been able to gather much from their talk, but he understood they had come for some sort of political caucus with men from downstate. Ours was a doubtful district, it seemed, and of great importance in the coming election. He rather liked the men, he said, though they were, of course, typical politicians in their way of looking at things.

I sent my oldest daughter, Electa, over to help Margaret in the morning, and as soon as I could I hurried over, too. Margaret made light of her labors and weariness, and waved me aside to make me listen to the news. The four men had gone to see somebody, and as they went out they had told her the candidate they stood for was her own boy, Avery Woodbridge! I did not wonder it excited our calm Margaret. Avery—our own Avery—the governor! Why, the Woodbridges would be so proud that never again would old Miss Rachel Woodbridge say that the line had lost its faculty of creating great men. It was wonderful, wonderful news.

It seemed that opposition had developed in Avery's own county, and the four had come to ferret out the trouble and carry the district back in their pockets. It would not do to have a man's county try to down him; it looked bad. The quartet stayed several days—five, I think—and there were conferences in all the neighboring towns. Electa and I felt it a real honor to have the privilege of making beds and washing dishes for such a noted party. It made us feel that we had our fingers in an important history making pie for once.

The third morning I went over alone and I found Margaret at the window of the living room reading one of Avery's letters. She did not look up as I came in, and I stood watching her glowing face as she finished the first typewritten sheet and took up the second. She always read Avery's letters as though they were inspired messages from another world. As she read her expression became puzzled and then of a sudden the color left her face and she grew deathly white to the lips. She gave a quick gesture and folded the sheet deliberately, painstakingly, as in a dream. I was on the point of blurting out my usual impetuous questions when a neighbor called to her from the back door and she went out leaving the letter on the table.

We have read each other's letters often since we married, Margaret and I, so I did not scruple to follow our usual custom—indeed, I wondered whether she might not mean that I should. The first sheet was Avery's usual letter—chatty, pleasant, somewhat formal—but the second page ran:

"I hope you are comfortable at mother's. She's a great cook, I know full well. She has old fashioned notions, though, and is as narrow as the dickens on a lot of questions like poker and whisky. I meant to warn you not to play in the rooms, but it slipped my mind. I hope you won't mind if she seems critical of persons you may happen to know. In the village setting she is very charming, but in our circles she would be as out of place as Jonathan Edwards. So don't mind if you find things rather backwoodsy and primitive and out of date. . . ."

I folded the letter and laid it down. Of course, the second sheet had been put into her envelope by mistake, being intended to go in some letter to one of Margaret's guests—Margaret probably knew which one had received a letter from Avery in the same mail with hers.

Possessed by a certain boiling fierceness, which I had to bite my tongue to contain, I slipped out to wash the dishes, and I heard Margaret's steady voice answering the neighbor's query gayly.

"Yes, I've heard of it. Isn't it splendid? I'm so proud of my boy! He's so young, too. Governor! Think of it!"

There was nothing said about the letter, of course, and Margaret did not know I had read it. I saw her take it to the room of Col. Callihan and lay it on the floor, where he could easily believe he had dropped it. She came back into the kitchen still pretty white and stood looking out of the window at the towering elm that Deacon Ebenezer Woodbridge planted 160 years ago. The sunlight on the smooth lawn, the breeze bearing the scent of tube roses, the permanent comfort and beauty of the old place, could not lift the shadow from her face.

"Do you know, Pamelia," she said gently, "I haven't been a very good mother to Avery. As a mother, I feel that I am a total failure."

"I feel like that when Junior gets to kicking and screaming," I told her, trying to steady my voice. "But Uncle Peter Comstock says grandfather used to act that way even when he was quite a big boy. It is too late to reform the ancestors."

She did not smile, and the look on her face hurt me so that I had to relieve myself some way, and as soon as she left the room I did it by deliberately throwing a cracked kitchen cup into the corner with a crash. It made me feel better. "Too bad," I said calmly, when I told her. "I'll bring over one of mine."

That afternoon Uncle Peter Comstock drove in and stopped by to leave a message for Margaret's guests, and I went out to the gate with him.

"I have been dodging those fellows," he said grimly. "But I'm willing to see them, I guess, after all. Callihan the Great seems set on seeing me, and there's no use my being stubborn and keeping them here eating up Margaret's victuals all these days for nothing."

It is always startling when your own folks turn out to be somebody, and I was amazed to find quiet little Uncle Peter Comstock what the novels call a power in politics.

"They came almost particular to see me," Uncle Pete said calmly. "On account of me being able to swing the district if I like, but I ain't had any great hankering to lend a hand to Avery Woodbridge."

"I did not know there was any real opposition," I said, leaning on the gate. "Why is it?"

Uncle Peter was half way into his buggy, but he climbed out again and stood looking at me, first over his glasses and then directly through them.

"Why?" he repeated scornfully, "I thought you was a Comstock flesh and bone. Why? Well, then, because he ain't got a real friend in the hull county."

He clambered into the buggy again and sat staring at the horse's back, his mouth set in a straight line.

"I always thought Avery the most popular man in the village," I said, dazed. "Why isn't he?"

"For being loved, if that's what you mean by popularity," Uncle Peter said. "For being just loved it's John Drake that's the man, for all he's about the worst for business sense a body ever laid eyes on," Uncle Peter chuckled and then grew serious again. "But Avery never made a friend he couldn't use, and onct he'd used 'em they was no longer worth while and he'd drop 'em—even his kin. Now I'm going to show him where to draw the line, I am. Folks ain't so dumb they don't see through a ladder without the rungs being took out. Except his mother. She don't sense she's being worked this minute, even though she's laboring like a slave for four men whose fathers came over in the steerage last week. All her folks came over before 1650, but of course she ain't anything compared to Callihan the Great. It's fine to be an American and be bossed by furreigners who come here because they want to get rich out of us. I'll bet it's a circus to see Avery Woodbridge kowtowing to all the Zinskeys and O'Briens in the city. Giddap, Ginger! We got to rustle along."

The four great men had their conference with Uncle Peter Comstock and a lot of other men that very evening down in the town and left on the midnight train. They expressed themselves as extremely grateful to Margaret, but she was naturally not greatly impressed by what they said, her relief that things had gone well being uppermost just then. She responded with her usual sweet dignity that any friend of Avery was welcome at any time, and she trusted they might some day be able to return. Col. Callihan presented her with an enormous bunch of hothouse roses and a five pound box of candy, and the little ceremony ended very abruptly for fear of missing the train.

It was nearly a week later that Uncle Peter Comstock, driving up from the postoffice, stopped in at Margaret's while I was there to give her a letter from the political headquarters in the city She made us listen while she read it aloud, seated at the little wicker table on the wide porch. It consisted of a letter and an inclosure and she read the letter first.

"Dear Mrs. Woodbridge," it ran. "We inclose a copy of a letter which we have sent to our gubernatorial nominee, Mr. Avery Woodbridge, having been directed to do so by the members of the conference which met in your village last week. We are asked to state that this was the unanimous demand of the thirty-six men there present.

"With renewed gratitude for your kindly hospitality, I am, yours very truly,

"PATRICK CALLIHAN."

The inclosure read:

"Dear Mr. Woodbridge: I am directed to write you that you are the chosen candidate of your district, and I take great pleasure in so doing. The thirty-six men in conference with us demand that you be told, however, that this is not a gift from them to you. They state that they have known you and worked for you for many years, and they lack confidence in your unsupported wisdom. Recognizing nevertheless your great ability, they yield you their backing, but they wish you to understand that this is solely because they hope that the son of your mother will see that proper needful legislation is not blocked. Her views upon prohibition and the race track question are their own, and they feel assured that the principles of a woman so beloved by her county must be your own, if not from the highest motives, at least from reasons of expediency. With congratulations——"

The letter fell from Margaret's cold fingers and she hid her face in her arm on the table, sobbing brokenly. In that moment of her unaccustomed weakness it flashed upon me that Margaret did not need to have the rungs taken out, either. I put my arm about her lovingly, and across the little wicker table I looked at Uncle Peter Comstock. Deliberately, and with meaning, he winked his left eye, in spite of the sympathetic moisture that trembled on the lid.

WHICH? by William Johnston

THE STORY THUS FAR—Opening a closet door in her hotel room, Betty Le Baron, a bride of three days, is horrified at discovering the body of a beautiful young woman with a knife through her heart. To make matters worse, Bob Le Baron, Betty's husband, refuses to explain his movements just before the discovery of the crime and is arrested on suspicion. Several people interest themselves in the case, among them John Rush, an old friend of Le Baron's, now employed as secretary to Harrison Hardy, a capitalist, and Anne Blair, a young woman who lives in the hotel. When Rush tells his employer that the murdered girl has been identified as Olga Ordinoff, daughter of a Russian general, Hardy exclaims: "Then they've got th $2,000,000!" He appears greatly disturbed, though he will not explain why, and sends Rush to engage the services of Hugh Smith, a private detective. Smith, after a brief investigation, fixes the crime on a waiter, whereupon the latter confesses and kills himself. This serves to free Le Baron, but does not satisfy Anne Blair, who insists there is more to the affair than appears on the surface. She determines to find out what Hardy knows and to learn the significance of a little black cross she saw on the closet door when she happened into the Le Barons' room just before the police came. This cross, Rush remembers, disappeared mysteriously after he had seen the hotel's head waiter standing near the door and fumbling with a handkerchief. Meanwhile, at a dinner party given by Le Baron, Anne becomes interested in Ruthina Dushane, an heiress about to wed an Italian count, who appears terrified about something and in need of help. On his return to the hotel after the dinner party Rush hears some one moving in the apartment he shares with Hardy and looks through the keyhole.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT.

The Dushane Letters.

RUSH could see nothing except that there was a light in the room. He distinctly recalled that he had extinguished all the lights when he had left the apartment shortly before 7.

Who was in the apartment?

There was no likelihood that Mr. Hardy had returned unexpectedly. Harrison Hardy was a man of exact habits. He had announced that he would not return from Philadelphia until the next afternoon late. He always kept to his schedule. A chambermaid? No, that was out of the question, for it was long after midnight.

Who, then, could it be? He must find out at once. Vainly wishing for a weapon of some sort, he turned the key softly and flung open the door quietly. He was right. There was some one there. Through the lighted foyer he could see into the sitting room beyond. There was a man standing there, at Mr. Hardy's desk.

Without hesitation he advanced quickly. It was his business to find out who the intruder was and what he was doing. With muscles tensed, ready for sudden attack, he advanced into the sitting room. At the sound of his step the man turned quickly, and he saw, with some sense of relief, yet with a flood of suspicions rising within him, that it was Meyer, the head waiter.

"O, it's you, Mr. Rush," said Meyer calmly.

"What are you doing here?" he cried indignantly.

"I was wishing you would come in, sir," said the man, retaining his customary pose of suave servility. "An important letter arrived for Mr. Hardy just after you had gone out. The messenger had orders to deliver it to Mr. Hardy in person or to his secretary. He waited for hours and several times had you both paged in the dining room. When we were about closing the rooms he seemed at a loss what to do, and I took the liberty of suggesting, sir, that I might get the pass key from the office and place the letter on Mr. Hardy's desk."

"Where is the letter?" demanded Rush distrustfully. He was convinced that the man was lying. The recent conversation he had had with Anne Blair about Meyer's actions was fresh in his mind. He was confident that the head waiter had taken advantage of the absence of both Mr. Hardy and himself to gain access to the room for some secret and sinister purpose, yet after all the excuse he had advanced for his presence there was a plausible one.

"You'll find it, sir, on the desk, in the center of the blotter. I put it apart from the others so that it would be quickly seen. Good night, sir."

Dignifiedly Meyer withdrew, closing the door behind him, without having shown that in any way he sensed the air of hostility with which Rush had regarded his unexpected presence there. Left alone, Rush made a hasty survey of the apartments, but so far as he could see nothing had been disturbed. He gave an anxious glance at the little safe that stood in the corner, but it seemed to be locked just as he had left it. After all, he consoled himself, there was little in the place worth stealing, beyond a few scarf pins and trinkets. Even in the safe was little of value. All documents of any importance were habitually kept in the big safe at the office. At the present moment the little safe held nothing but Mr. Hardy's personal check book and petty expense accounts. But yes, there was something else there—the code book, containing the private code Mr. Hardy used in most of his communications with his business associates.

Satisfying himself that the safe had not been tampered with, he turned to the desk. Sure enough, lying there just where Meyer said he had put it was a long, important looking envelope. Curiously he inspected it, turning it over to ascertain whether or not it bore evidence of having been recently opened. The seal seemed intact. Mr. Hardy had authorized him to open all letters, so he felt no hesitation about this. Tearing open the envelope, he quickly scanned the typewritten lines on the folded slip of plain paper it contained. He saw at first glance that it was in code, and getting the code book out of the safe he at once began transcribing it.

Fine weather not smooth Treptikoff sweet apples over O. shelf report details tomorrow defeat.

"Defeat" he recognized without having to look it up. All of his employer's principal associates had code names beginning with "de." Mr. Hardy himself in this code was "demur." Mr. Dean, the president of the trust company, was "decode." The mayor was "detect," while Rush's own code name was "demote." "Defeat" he knew was George Grundy, a mysterious poltical personage, who once had been a newspaper correspondent in Washington. He now bore some sort of a confidential relation to Harrison Hardy and his companies that was little advertised. Though Grundy had an office in the trust company building, he spent little time in it, but was generally in Washington, or Albany, or some other capital, attending to things about which he always made reports in person to Mr. Hardy.

With the code book before him Rush found the message easy to translate. "Fine" he had to look up. It meant "certain." "Weather" was a word he had seen so often he recognized it at once. It always meant "funds." Soon he had the whole message transcribed, but even so was far from comprehending its meaning. It read now:

"Certain funds did not reach Treptikoff. Great excitement over O. case. Report details tomorrow. Grundy."

Perplexedly he studied the message before him. Who was Treptikoff? What were the funds that Grundy referred to? Was it the two millions that had vanished when Olga Ordinoff was murdered? Surely it must mean that. The "O. case," especially when taken in conjunction with the other Russian name earlier in the message, could hardly mean anything else than the murder in the hotel.

With the message lying on the desk before him Rush sat pondering on its significance. The more he thought about it the more peculiar it appeared that Meyer should have been the one to bring the letter to their rooms. He was convinced that the head waiter had deliberately contrived the visit, but for what purpose? The fact that the ostensible murderer of Miss Ordinoff had been a waiter seemed in itself almost enough ground for suspecting him of being involved in some way, even if it had not been he apparently who had erased the black cross from the door where the body was found. Besides that, both he and Miss Blair had observed that Meyer had a habit of hovering about trying to overhear their conversation. Had Meyer, he wondered, managed to read the message, and did he grasp its purport?

As these and a hundred other perplexing questions chased themselves confusedly through his mind the telephone beside him rang sharply. Wondering who could be calling him at this hour, he picked up the receiver.

It was Anne Blair who spoke.

"I told you so," she cried exultantly. "Miss Dushane phoned me just now. She wants me to help her."

"Help her how—in what?" he questioned, excitedly.

"She would not tell me over the phone. She spoke of my having aided in clearing Mr. Le Baron and intimated that I might be of great help to her."

"What did you say?" asked Rush curiously. "Did you promise that you would help her?"

"I promised that we would," said Miss

TO SUIT ALL TASTES by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Mr. Hamlet must have been saved so much trouble! "Make it black," he would say to his tailor, and that was all there was to a suit. Because of this simplified life he had all the time in the world for soliloquies.

As for us poor modern women, most of our soliloquies have to do with suits. "To be tailored or not to be—that is the question. Whether 'tis wiser in the mind to have a suit that glares or a suit that wears," etc. And this spring it is going to be harder than ever to make up one's mind. For there's every kind of suit you ever heard of, and some you only half suspected.

The newest silhouette presented by one of the most famous of New York suit makers, one whose label is known from coast to coast, is, however, a rather old one. It is possessed of a coat unbelted and long and flaring. It nips the waist and doesn't often skip the waistcoat. We always were fond of this flaring coat, with the fitted waist line—there is really nothing more becoming to the athletic, rather tall American girl—and we are deeply grateful for the revival.

However, this flaring coat is only an episode, and by far the greater number of spring suit models show the rather plain, semi-fitted coat, with some kind of narrow belt. Of course, this type of suit permits all sorts of fanciful developments. That is the reason it is likely to be more popular than the more severely tailored one with fitted, flaring coat. You may have it plain as a pipe stem or you may pamper it with all sorts of plaitings, stitchings, and embroideries.

The suit at the left of this page gives you some idea of its susceptibility to ideas. Here is a model of black tricot, with a perfectly plain skirt, and the side sections of the coat developed into the plaiting, which now rages all over the land. As a relief from too much plaiting the coat panels back and front are stitched with copper metallic thread.

This brings us to one of the season's novelties. The finest tailors in New York are making much use of tinsel thread on the early spring suits. Copper thread in particular is highly esteemed. Thus one of the suits I saw at the Fifth avenue establishment of the famous designer who has just launched the flare coat made black tricot look like an absolutely new fabric by copper stitching. This appeared on the skirt only in a few vertical, uneven lines, extending from the hem to the vicinity of the knees, but on the coat the stitching was so thorough that it gave the illusion of a striped fabric. Only the slightly rolling, V shaped collar escaped the web of copper threads. To this suit was added a narrow belt held by two smart buckle slides.

But, to go back to the model under consideration, I wish to speak of two other distinctive touches. One of these comes from a belt of twisted copper threads—and I can't emphasize too strongly the success of this metallic touch upon the black suit—and from flaring three-quarter sleeves with an upper cuff which is both plaited and stitched. The whole suit gives a good example of the distinctive, not too elaborate type of thing which will carry most women through most daytime occasions.

The center model shown here is of navy tricotine, and its three flounced skirt brings us to the various types of suit skirts. Most of these at present, I am glad to say, look narrower than they are. For the benevolent designer, intent upon bringing comfort to a world of enslaved womanhood, is now making use of all sorts of plaits and insets. Some of the new suit skirts, indeed, frankly widen toward the hem. At all events we don't need now to patter across the street like little Madame Butterfly. We can walk instead of jumping or hopscotching to a given point.

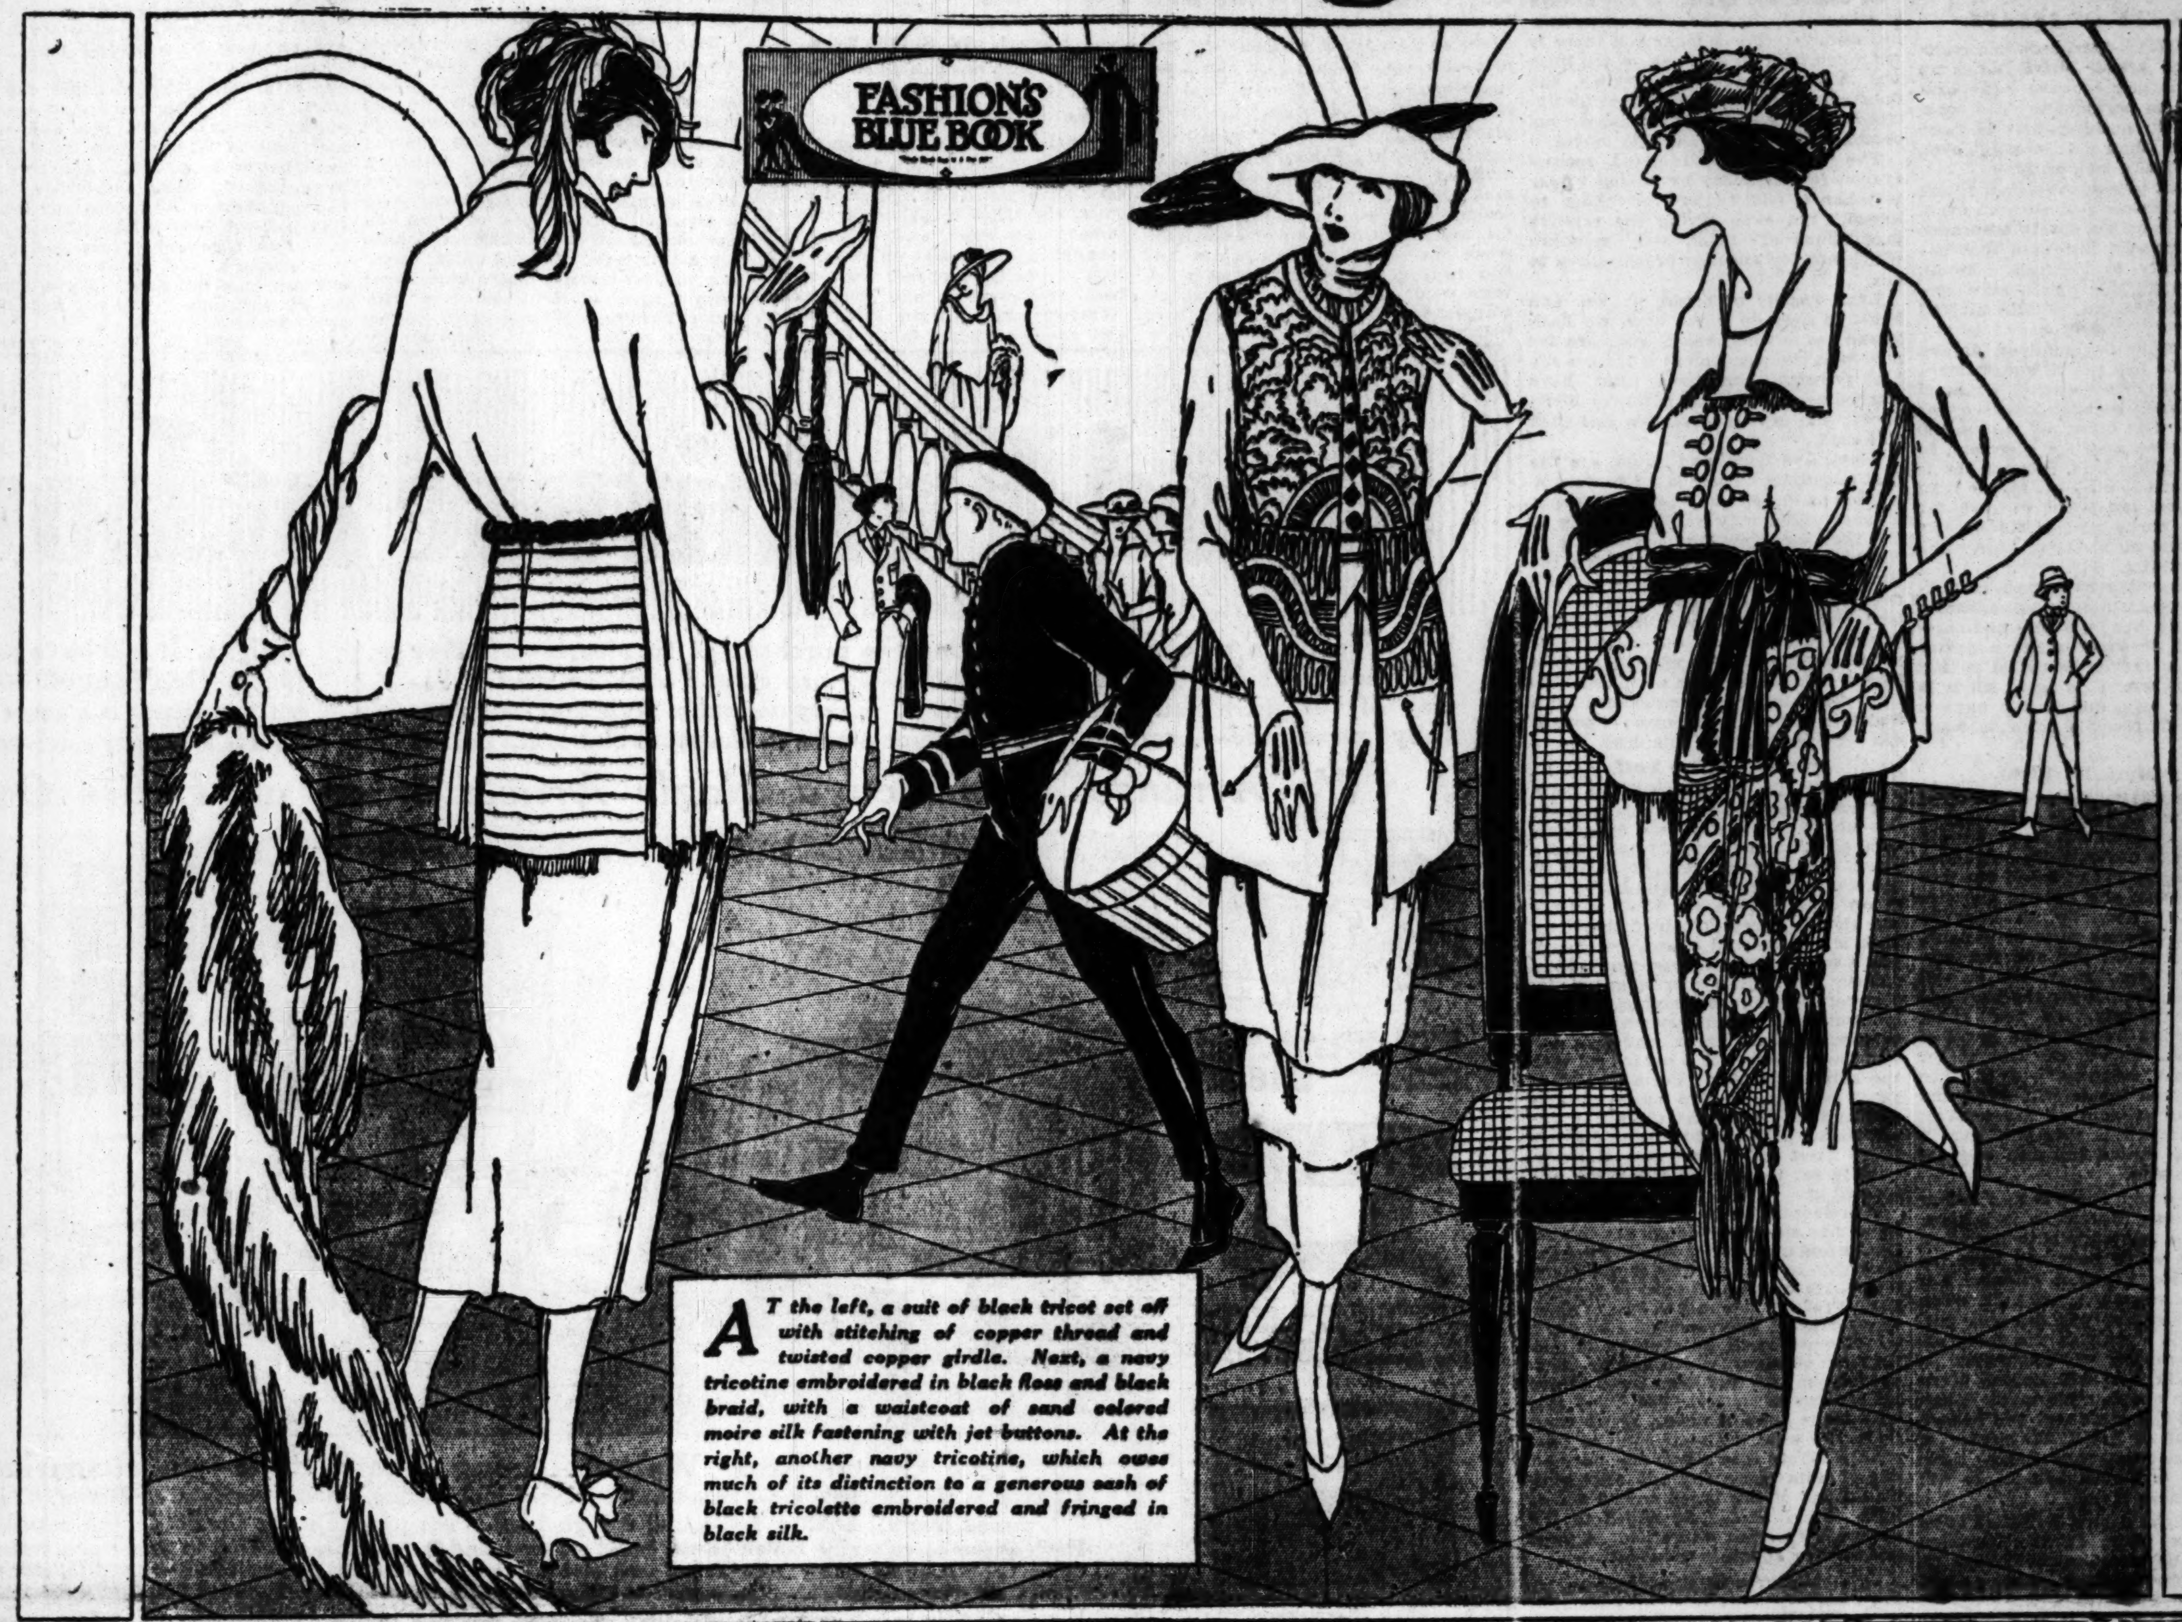
Of course, the plaited model is the most familiar form of present skirt life. Sometimes skirts are plaited all over, a method particularly effective with the Eton jackets which some of the new suits exploit, and sometimes there are merely plaited panels or groups of these necessities at the sides. But, of course, the plait imagination runs riot. You can have them how or when or often as you choose. The main thing that concerns most of us is that these plaits do give and conceal wideness of the hem.

The three flounced skirt is also new and smart. It is not confined to suits, by any means. Indeed, some of the most charming dress models that have come to us from the other side make use of this ingenuous style. Jenny has run much to this mode, and the Riviera is said to be brimming over with black satin frocks from this establishment, made with the three flounced skirt. Sometimes, by the way, the black satin flounces are banded with black velvet.

The central suit, besides having a skirt of this kind, is possessed of other virtues. It has a coat embroidered all over with black silk floss and black soutache, to give much dash to the perfectly plain, straight sleeves; a waistcoat of sand colored moire silk with jet buttons and a new round neck, to disclose the smart high choker and guimpe of ecru net.

The third model is a youthful and charming affair, also of navy tricotine. Here the responsibility of trimming rests with a regular toreador sash made of black tricolette, heavily embroidered in black floss and fringed with silk. The coat has the graceful cape back, and variety is given by the scroll-like pieces of self-material which define the pockets.



AT the left, a suit of black tricot set off with stitching of copper thread and twisted copper girdle. Next, a navy tricotine embroidered in black floss and black braid, with a waistcoat of sand colored moire silk fastening with jet buttons. At the right, another navy tricotine, which owes much of its distinction to a generous sash of black tricolette embroidered and fringed in black silk.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

A VARIETY OF BREADS.

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

A NATURAL born cook can make a good bread, but it takes an experienced cook to bake that bread to perfection. The cooking schools do nothing that is more worth while than in making oven knowledge vitally interesting.

It is a great pleasure to see a young cook of the schools deal with an oven. She handles it with a sporty assurance that is charming. But note that she attends strictly to business. As an oven sportsman she has a sure eye, and hand, and mind, of the hit the bull's-eye every time type.

If she uses a thermometer, as she will when she can get it, she watches it. She tests the oven with her hand just the same, because small ovens are uneven. She often peeps over the edge of an oven door for a second, to see if all is going well, because she is attending right to business rather than leaving a loaf of bread to care for itself. She turns and shifts with a sure hand and no waste of time. She times everything.

We might contrast the rash, or hesitating, or neglectful oven management of others with her swiftness and sureness, but it does not make a pretty picture. The inevitable moral is that if a thing is worth doing at all it is worth doing well, and if you have it to do take all possible pains to learn how.

Oven Must Be Right.

Now bread baking is one of the chief of oven feats. A loaf of bread baked in too slow an oven will be pallid and dried up. It is never really quickened at the heart. A loaf of bread put into too hot an oven, and kept in an oven of this sort, may be so browned through and through as to be unpalatable. Put a bread pan too full into too hot an oven, in which it will quickly crust over, lower the heat and let it finish slowly, the heat being kept back from livening the heart of the loaf until toward the last of the baking, what happens? Just this: that hot dough inside will swell and push the surface out at the weakest spot. The result is that you have a loaf with a canted top and a great seam at one side.

The more dough there is in a loaf or roll the longer it takes to bake them, of course. A roll made with too much dough for a given bulk will have too much and too heavy a crumb. For two rolls of exactly equal bulk when finished, the expert will use only one-half as much dough as the unexpert. Just the right bit of dough may be baked quickly, and will keep a given and uniform shape. Too much dough for a roll of the same sort will behave like the loaf of bread, the center of which did not get fully heated until the outside is almost baked. It will bulge anywhere it can.

Sweet doughs cannot be baked in as hot a fire as plain doughs. Graham flour must be baked more slowly. It is most unfortunate to crust over a graham loaf too soon. The heart of the loaf is likely then to be underbaked, and digestive troubles almost as violent as those from ptomaine may follow from eating it. It is by its constitution a digestion rusher; half raw it causes digestive fermentations.

Other Reasons for Failure.

Of course the baking is not always wholly responsible for what seem baking failures. For instance, if there is too much flour in a batter, or too little wet is what makes the trouble, the flour cannot swell with heat to its finished capacity. This defect usually accounts for crumbly rolls and loaves.

The old fashioned bread recipes evaded responsibility by saying "flour to make a stiff batter" or "flour to knead," not even giving the relative proportions of flour and moisture which are for kneaded breads three to one.

Each variety of bread, if we can bake, is easy to make once we have learned to develop yeast, and care for it so that the yeast plant will have the best growing conditions, and have learned to make a true batter or blend of wet and dry to perfection and then to knead.

Yeast, and flour, and liquid, are the first essentials. These last two we proportion as three to one, but the amount of yeast used may vary according to the time we allow for the making of the bread. The more we shorten the time, the more yeast we may use. We used to think the slow rising breads best, but now what are called five hour doughs, which allow one compressed yeast cake to six cups of flour for two loaves of bread, are the most common. Dry yeast has to be quickened with moisture and so takes longer. Sponges are set over night in this case.

Sponge for One Loaf.

For a sponge we take half the flour. For instance, if we were going to make one loaf of bread, we would take three cups of flour, one cup of liquid, half a yeast cake, a teaspoon of sugar or more, according to use, and half a teaspoon of salt. We put these all into the sponge except one-half the flour. Milk is scalded and cooled, because if hot it would kill the yeast plant. Most women use a little shortening or, for a sweet sponge, considerable. A common measure is a tablespoon of butter to two loaves of bread, and it is put into the milk when it is set to cool with the salt and sugar. Formerly, when yeast used to be of a more variable quality than at present, the sugar was put with a little tepid water to dissolve it, to "test it." The yeast, if lively, quickly set to work on the sugar and foamed up.

A fireless cooker is an excellent place for either sponge or dough set to rise. Drafts and uneven temperature are not favorable to the working of the yeast.

Suppose we wanted buns or a sweet loaf. Probably it would be best to make three cups of flour sponge. To get a truly sweet bread we should add one-half cup of sugar, which is four tablespoons per loaf, and from three to five tablespoons of butter. We finish this with three cups of flour. If we want fruit and nuts we may add to the sponge before it is set to rise one-half cup of nuts and a full cup of raisins. The dough of this bread should not be stiff. Flour should be added to the sponge with great discretion. A light and spongy dough is the ideal.

Mixtures in Sponges.

All sorts of mixtures are put into sponges instead of adding these to a sponge of wheat flour. The latter is convenient when it is desirable to set but one sponge and make several kinds of bread or rolls.

Boiled and mashed potato has been used by many a housewife in her sponge. One cup of mashed potato to two loaves is a good proportion. Flour is then added to make the regulation sponge batter. In war times these sponges were set with part potato, part flour, and part cooked cereal. In reckoning the amount of moisture for the whole, account had to be made of the moisture in a cooked cereal. For instance, only one cup of scalded and cooled milk might suffice for two loaves of bread or even more when one cup of mashed potato and two cups of white corn meal mush were used. For this sponge two tablespoons of sorghum may be used without making the bread seem strong

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Spinach with Stuffed Eggs.

Finely chop one-half peck of spinach boiled in the usual way; drain and season with salt, pepper, and butter or bacon fat; mix thoroughly and arrange in a mound on a hot vegetable dish; have ready four hot hard cooked eggs; cut them in halves lengthwise, remove the yolks, and press them through a sieve; add an equal measure of finely chopped, lean cooked ham, season with one teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce, salt, pepper, and about as much curry powder as pepper, and moisten with tomato catsup. Mix thoroughly, roll in balls the original size of the yolks, and set the balls into the halves of eggs; sprinkle with finely chopped chives or parsley. Dispose these around the spinach and serve for luncheon.

Round Steak Scalloped with Potatoes.

Pare and slice enough potatoes to make three and one-half cups. Cut round steak in pieces about two inches square (it will require about one and three-fourths pounds); slice two medium size onions, thin. Have ready one cup of rolled cracker crumbs. Butter a covered casserole or baking dish that holds about two quarts; in this arrange a layer of potato slices, covering the bottom and sides of the dish; over these lay a thin layer of sliced onion; sprinkle with salt and pepper, then cover with a layer of meat; dot over with bits of butter and sprinkle with cracker crumbs; repeat until the materials are used. Then pour in hot cream or milk until it bubbles through the layers. Cover closely and bake in a slow oven five hours. Turn on a hot platter, sprinkle with finely chopped parsley or paprika, and serve with green string beans or cauliflower and a green salad.

Graham Muffins.

Sift together one cup of white flour, one teaspoon of salt, and four teaspoons of baking powder. Add one cup of graham flour, one-half cup of bran, and one-fourth cup of brown sugar. Gradually add one and one-half cups of milk, stirring constantly until batter is smooth. Add two tablespoons of melted shortening, and two eggs beaten until thick and lemon tinted. Beat batter one minute, and turn into hissing hot iron gem cups well greased, and bake twenty-five minutes in a hot oven. Serve immediately with butter and old fashioned apple butter.

Dividing the Family Pie

By Alice Manning Dickey.

Mrs. Dickey will furnish sample budgets upon request and assist in planning individual budgets with the coöperation of the woman's department, fair price commission of Illinois, and the budget experts on its staff. Address Mrs. Alice Dickey, The Chicago Tribune.

ANYBODY who has ever watched a family pie being cut "to go around" knows that there are no two pieces of pie the same size. If father likes pie, ten to one mother's knife marks out an extra generous piece for him—or, mayhap, it is William Henry home from school on his vacation who fares most sumptuously from the activities of the pie knife. Mother almost invariably takes "what is left."

Of course, all mothers aren't like that, but most of them are. And it behooves a family to take extra care, in planning a family budget, that its apportionment is made with perfect justice to every member of the family, especially mother.

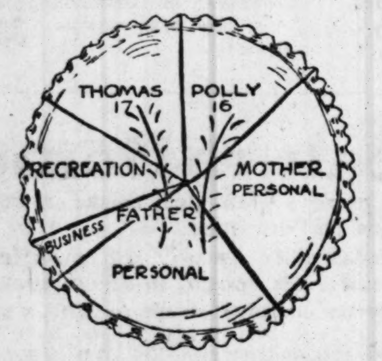
The first thing to be remembered is that the allowance for food and for operating expenses (gas, maid, laundry bills, telephone, etc.), though handed over to mother for disbursement, is not in any sense her personal allowance. It is no privilege that is being extended to her—quite the contrary. It is work. For, given the certain sum which is to cover food or other household expenses, it is her task to see that it does so.

Allowance System Uncertain.

In the households where no budget system has been adopted and the wife is given an allowance which must cover food, operating expenses, sundries, church, charity, books, magazines, lectures, amusements, as well as her own personal expenses, the husband of the household may be perfectly sure that his wife's personal share of this allowance is not only a small but a fitful one. Some months she may have quite a little margin for her personal expenses, but next month, when Aunt Martha and her two sub-deb daughters spend a week when passing through the city, you may be sure that the family breakfasts on the wife's gloves, dines on the hat she expected to buy, and is gay and festive at the cost of many small pleasures which might have been hers.

The allowance system is a great step in advance of the pre-historic method of asking father for money for the day's groceries or submitting each monthly bill for his carefully penned check. But it has in it large elements of unfairness.

An intelligent budget—one that has been adjusted fairly each month for the first few months of experiment—is the best cure for extravagance and excessive bills.



For a happy, harmonious financial basis, the budget should first provide its allowance for food, for shelter, for operating expenses, for the necessary sundries, for savings. These are the bread and butter of the family life. What is left from these items is the "pie," the dessert, which can be made meager or generous as circumstances permit.

An estimate of the clothing necessary for each member of the family should be arrived at, and each individual allotted a perfectly just share of the available funds. Men's wardrobes cost less than women's, though dresses included may be less expensive than the men's suits.

Incidentals Not Luxuries.

In addition to this personal allowance the husband should have a business allowance sufficient to cover car fare, lunches, and any business incidentals. But business incidentals should not mean his own cigars any more than the food allowance should mean parfaits or sodas for his wife. Personal indulgences should come out of personal allowances.

Quite a tempting piece of the family pie is the slice for recreation. This may be small or large, as the income permits, but a big struggle should be made not to allow the prosaic needs of the family to encroach upon it, once the slice is cut. Joint pleasures should come out of this, entertainment of friends, vacation trips. But individual entertaining—except it be on behalf of the family as a whole—should come out of the personal allowances.

Portion out the bread and butter of your budget first intelligently; then cut the pie on the basis of absolute equality, and every member of the family will rise up and call the budget blessed!

Boarding House Tales

The boarding house is teeming with human interest stories. Tell us a tale about the funny characters you have met in your experience as "paying guest." The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published. Manuscripts cannot be returned. Please write on one side of the paper. Address Boarding House Tales, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Scotch for Tough.

Stopping at the same boarding house myself was a young Scotchman, who was annoyed at every meal by the landlady inquiring as to the name in Scotch of the various articles on the table. On this particular day she passed the meat to him saying, "What would you call that in Scotland?" He tried it gingerly with his fork then looked up seriously and replied, "Leather." R. M. S.

It Worked Fine.

One time when I was eating at a boarding house our first glass of water the landlady gave us was always warm. Our second glass was usually better, so we began to think of a scheme to get rid of this first glass so as to get another.

A young man and myself were sitting at the end of the table near a window, which he said if I would open he would pour the water from the glasses into a pitcher and empty it out doors.

The first day it worked fine and we got our fresh water. The next day, however, just as the young man was in the act of throwing the water out, the landlady walked in. He was terribly embarrassed and the rest of us roared with laughter, but it had the desired effect. G. L. B.

Fast Follows Feast.

At one time I was unfortunate in being asked to serve for a Saturday night dinner at our boarding house table. As I am quite a bountiful server, there was little remaining of the meager roast when we had finished. Our landlady noticed this and exclaimed, "Well, there is your Sunday dinner!"

It is needless to say that I was never asked again to serve. J. C.

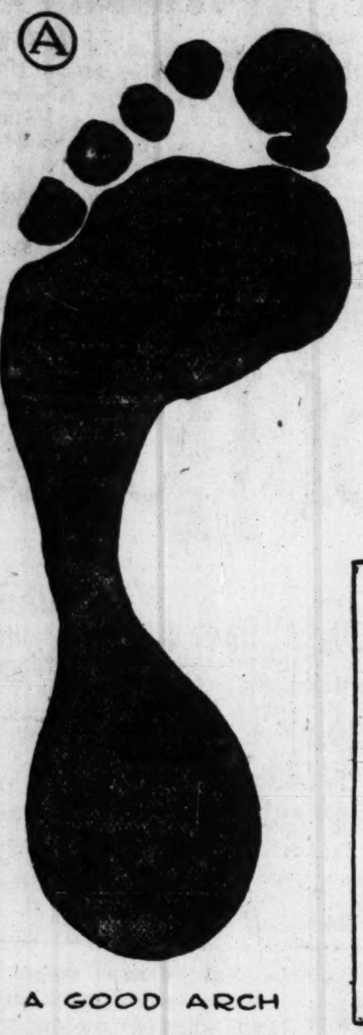
HAVE YOUR FEET GOOD ARCHES ?

asks Antoinette Donnelly



A GOOD ARCH

A FLAT FOOT

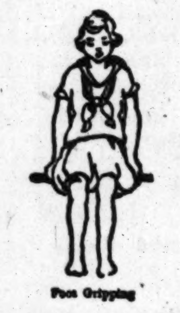
WET both feet and stand on a sheet of paper. Trace the outline of the damp imprints, and compare them with the figures on right and left. If the inner line of the foot curves in as in A, you have good longitudinal arches; if the imprint of the middle of the foot is broader than in A, your arches are low; and if your feet are flat the imprints will be like B. Now hold up your foot and look at the sole. If your transverse arch is good there will be a groove in middle of ball of foot, lengthwise. If ball of foot is puffy or calloused then your anterior (or transverse) arch is broken.

You can do special foot exercises which will strengthen and improve both arches of the feet. Note: All foot exercises should be done in stocking feet or barefooted.

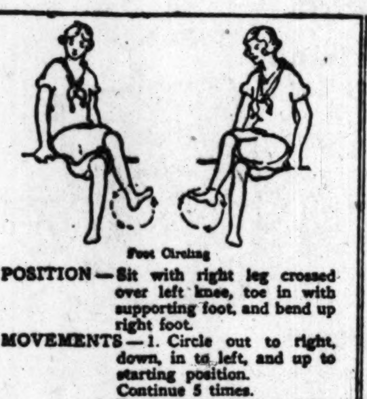


Foot Gripping

POSITION—1. Sit with feet parallel, and pull toes under forcibly

2. Replace

Repeat from 10 to 30 times, resting after each time



Foot Circling

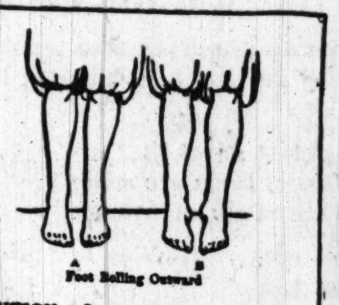
MOVEMENTS—1. Circle out to right, down, in to left, and up to starting position. Continue 5 times.

2. Reverse starting position, with left foot circling out to left, down, in to right, and up to starting position. Continue 5 times.

Repeat each exercise from 40 to 50 times.



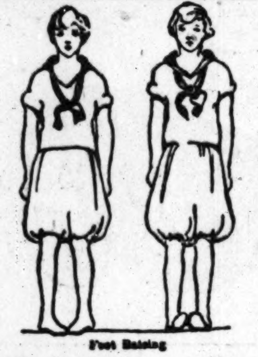
Foot Rolling Outward

POSITION—Stand with feet parallel. A

MOVEMENT—1. Raise inner border up and out, knees straight, toes and heels on floor B

2. Replace. A

Repeat 10 to 30 times, resting after each five.



Foot Raising

POSITION—Stand with toes together, heels three or four inches apart

MOVEMENTS—1. Raise feet with toes together, keeping heels on floor

2. Replace

Repeat from 10 to 30 times, resting after each five

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake care the Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

All in a Minute.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 18 years old and am in love with a boy three years my senior whom I have known a short time. The minute we saw each other we were friends. The last time I saw him he promised to ring up in two or three days to make a date and I haven't heard from him since. It is six weeks from that time and I am greatly disappointed. I really and truly love him and am very lonesome. I shall be very grateful to you for any advice or consolation, as I have lost all interest in other boys and can only think of him. I no doubt am foolish, but I cannot forget. "R. J. F."

Yes, you are foolish, but not any more foolish than the rest of womankind. However, you're not going to be so foolish that you are going to pass up other occasions of fun to mourn over one who would not be affected by your grief a single bit.

She'd Like to Go with Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: A friend of my brother has made a very good impression on me. According to his actions I can see that he likes me (but how much, I cannot say). He asked me a few times if I'd like to accompany him, but I refused, thinking that my mother would be against it, but only lately I heard my mother make a remark in my presence that if I would go with a fellow like him she'd be satisfied. Now, I would like to know how to make him ask me to go to see a show with him. E."

You might be especially nice on his early future calls on your brother, and even might drop the hint subtly that you would like to go to the movies or take a walk, or something like that. However, it may not be necessary for you to make such an advance if you show the man that his company is agreeable to you.

Eighty-two Asked for Skates.

"I am returning the 'excess' letters which I received regarding the skates which I had to give away. Really, I think if the people in Chicago knew of all the little kiddies whose hearts ache for skates in the winter they would go down into their old trunks and unearth some that will never be used. I have two more pairs of larger sizes—11½—which some one else can have for the asking. Only wish I had a pair for every one of the eighty-two children who want them. E. W."

Many thanks! There is great fun in store for some one or two.

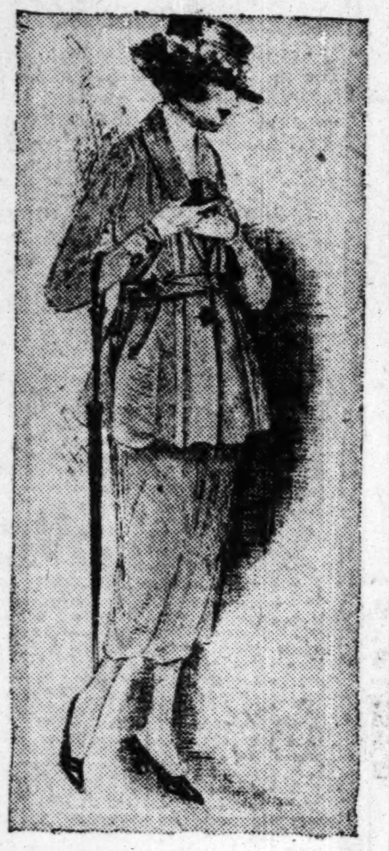
The New Spring Coats and Suits



The Suits of Tricotine

Make You Feel Well Dressed

Today tricotine holds sway in the suit realm. To this soft woolen fabric has been awarded a general approval which only an extremely durable yet beautiful weave could win.

We have ready for your choice an interesting array of severely tailored models and other more "dressy" styles.

You will be impressed with the fineness of the tailoring in these suits—the lining, the seams, the buttonholes. A wide choice of fine silk-lined suits at $65 to $145

The New Spring Coats

Are Fashioned Along Smart Lines

One has only to see our new coats to be convinced that among that number is the desired wrap. The favorites are the three-quarter length coats of Polo cloth, hop-sacking, checked and plain velours, corduline, Irenello, Bolivia and Bokhara; and the stunning wraps of peachbloom and tricotine.

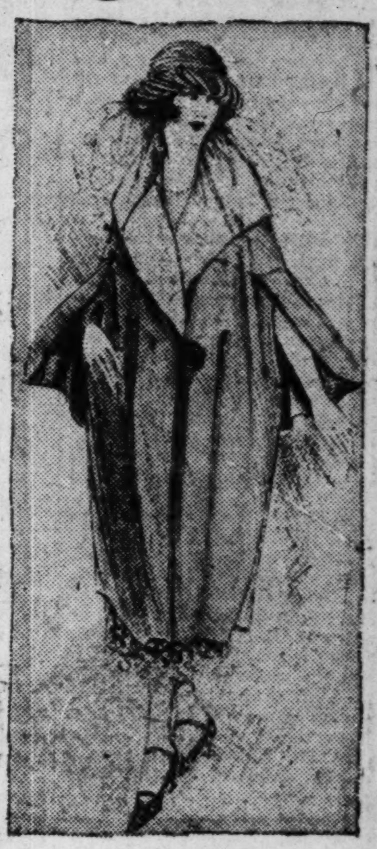
Prices for everybody, 29.75 to $275



Striking Blouses of Tricolette—

A spring fad with the merit of being practical as well as beautiful. You know how well tricolette wears—and in soft shades of rose, gold, moth and flesh, as well as staple colors, it makes a blouse which can scarcely be equaled by other materials for beauty and durability. Our assortment is priced—from 16.50 to 22.50

How to Use the Patterns

If you have any question relating to sewing that you would like to have answered write to Clotilde, Chicago Tribune, inclosing a stamped addressed envelope.

THE one piece house dress, No. 9571, shows an attractive way of adjusting a sash, and is not at all difficult to make. The waist and skirt are cut in one, and before doing any cutting be sure and see that length and width measures conform to your own. Never do any cutting until the entire pattern has been laid on the cloth, each piece being accurately laid on as regards the right grain. All patterns show where each piece is to be on the straight or bias.

Then, after the entire pattern has been cut out, make the sash first. If the cloth is not heavy, two pieces can be cut for each sash length, and they can be seamed together on the wrong side down each length and across the bottom, then turned right side out, basted, and pressed smooth.

Then the upper and front edges of the side fronts are turned in, according to directions given with the pattern, and basted in position on each side of the front, and the sash ends are inserted in place before the basting is done. The side fronts are stitched to the front, the stitching perfectly pressed, first removing the bastings, and then the balance of the dress is put together as usual.

No. 9570 will be a pretty style for a thin dress for a small girl. And it can be made to either wear with a guimpe or be cut with a high or rounding neck.

For a dressy little frock voile in a plain color such as delicate blue, tan, yellow, etc., will make up well and will need no other trimming than narrow black satin or velvet ribbon used as a sash ribbon, not over one inch wide, tied in rather short loops and moderately long end. Then have plaited ruffles at neck and short sleeve ends of organdie or plain net.

The best placket for the back of the skirt will be what is called the "wash" placket. It is cut in one continuous length, and double the finished width, of course allowing for the turning in on each edge. It is basted in a seam on the wrong side, starting at the top on one side of the skirt, basting down to the end of the opening, and after clipping the skirt seam at this point continue basting on up the opposite skirt edge. The placket strip must be kept smooth at the turning, not even a slight pucker or bit of fullness being allowed.

After the seam has been stitched and the bastings removed, it should be pressed with the seam laid towards the placket strip, then the opposite edge of the strip is turned in and hemmed down by hand over the seam. Before doing this look at the end of the opening and see if the stitching covers the clip made in the skirt, and if there is any imperfection there take several small backstitches around the turning so that the seam will be strong and flat.

After the hemming down is finished turn the right side of the placket strip underneath for the faced side and let the strip on the left side of the opening extend out, making the extension side. The strip should be backstitched or stitched on the machine across the turned under side, exactly at the place where the turning is made, to hold it in place.

The surplice closing of the waist in No. 9393 is becoming to full or slight figures and is suitable for almost any material.

The fronts beyond the middle front line and the sash pieces should be lined either with the dress or other material.

For cool spring and summer days one of the small checked woolens would make a most attractive dress, made exactly like the pattern and with no trimming other than crisp organdie collar and cuffs will give. If buttons are used on the front of the waist, the sleeves can be buttoned on the inside seam for a short distance up.

If a plain silk, satin, voile, or other material is chosen, the sash ends, tops of pockets, and front crossing can be trimmed by embroidering in the eyelet, laid or cross-stitch. Or faggoting hems on the pockets, sleeve ends, and collar will be pretty.

Many women object to having the hem or facing in the skirt of a silk or woolen skirt hemmed by machine, and in that case the hemming should be done by hand as invisibly as possible. The work is called "blind" hemming and is done by catching up one or two of the under threads in the material (not letting the needle go through to the right side), and then slipping the needle for a short distance, say a quarter of an inch, along the folded edge of the hem or facing.

This brings the thread for that distance on the inside of the folded edge, and the needle is then brought up through the crease to the right side and inserted again in the skirt, this inserting being done exactly above where the needle is brought out of the folded hem edge. The thread must not be pulled too tight, but just enough to be smooth. The result will be an invisibly sewed hem. Careful pressing on the wrong side will improve it.

No Chance for a Light.

We had stopped to get gasoline at a station which was on a busy street. My husband jumped out and I after him just for the exercise after a long ride.

Before examining the tank my husband handed me his lighted cigar so that there would be no danger of it getting near the gasoline. I held it unconsciously, a little blue cloud of smoke curling upward from the tip.

To my consternation a trampy looking man with a pipe in his mouth came up to me and said, "How are the chances for a light, lady?" A little titter of amusement ran through the bystanders as I witheringly explained that the cigar most certainly did not belong to me. E. H. S.

She Comes No More.

My little friend in the apartment across the hall was a studious pupil who had come to my apartment for a few hints in the execution of her studies when a mutual friend of ours who was known as a chatterbox was seen coming down the street headed for my apartment.

My friend, being more anxious to spend an hour studying than talking, said, "Tell her that I am not here," and hid in fair sized clothes hamper, expecting the talkative party to leave in a moment or two.

Forty-five minutes passed and to my horror the hidden one sneezed, while in the clothes hamper. I could barely keep from laughing; in fact a little smile from me seemed to give away the entire proceeding. The talkative friend evidently had discovered the intrigue, for she left immediately, and although this happened some time ago, we have never seen her since.

This certainly was my most embarrassing moment. A. W.

Not Disappointed.

My friend's mother was reported to have died, so I immediately called at the house. My friend opened the door and I said, "So your dear mother is dead." She looked surprised and answered, "Why, no." I said, "Well isn't that too bad." I meant, of course, that it was too bad such a report had got started. C. C.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By Mary Brush Williams.

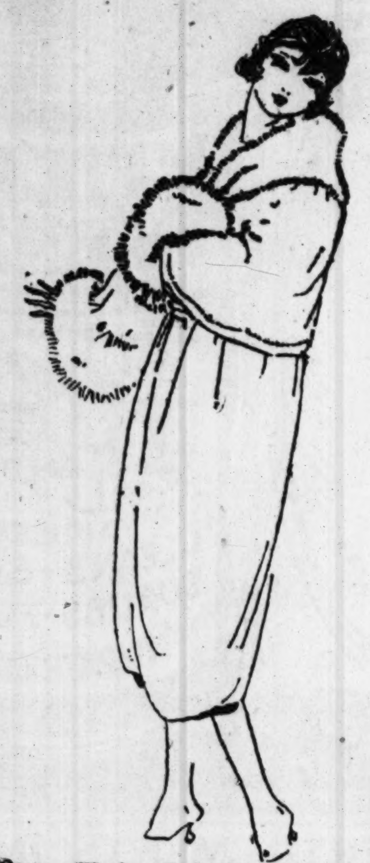
A COAT AND TWO GOWNS.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—When I arrived at Victoria station on a little visit to London a few weeks ago, an English woman hastened up to me and set forth in bad French that she and her party were there to meet strangers coming in and to offer them help, not to say protection.

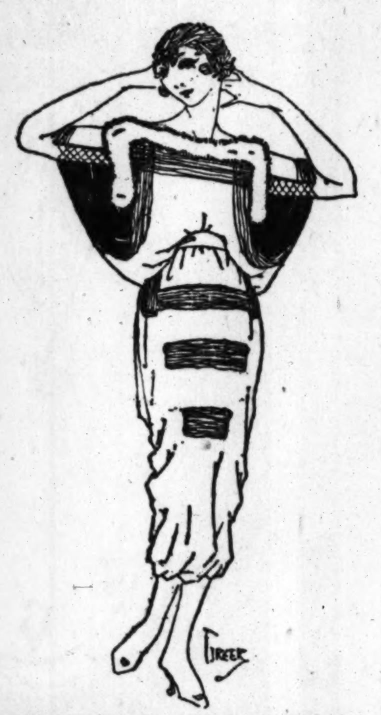
Now that incident represents what I call a triumph of art over heredity, and too much credit cannot be given to Mr. Worth, Lucie Hamar, and other artists of the French capital responsible for my complete disguise. For as I replied in English to my would-be rescuer, I fancied I came from a longer line of Anglo-Saxon ancestors than ever she did.

No French model was ever big enough to fit me until it had undergone several major operations. No vendeuse but complained that I have not the French outline. Still, as I live in France, I buy my clothes there, and judging from the first incident to befall me on leaving the country, French clothes must bear a certain national look of their own. For all those who wish to get themselves up so as not to look like an American, therefore, I will mention that my coat was not unlike the one of the first sketch.

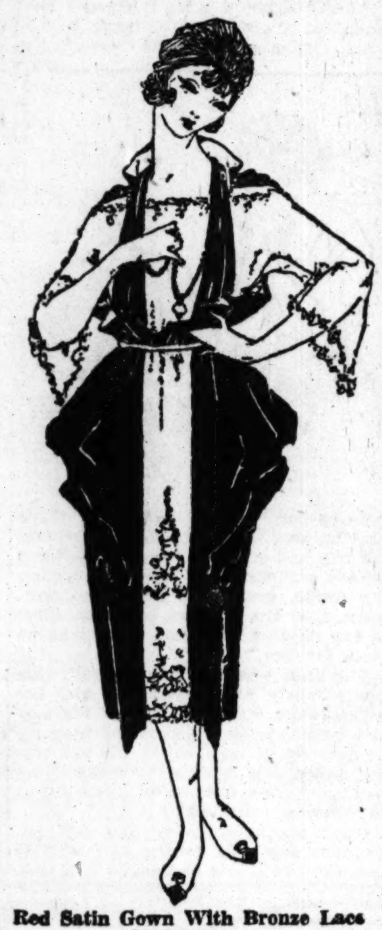
As the model displays itself every day in Mr. Worth's salon it is of mocha colored (or tan) rather rough woolen material, lined with golden brown satin and finished with a collar of unplucked beaver which on its surface is of the shade known as tête de nègre or nigger. The fur shades down in its depths as it opens to the light into golden brown and even the coffee color of the cloth. The sleeves are edged with the fur. The important thing about the model to all copyists, I suppose, is the outline of the back.



Brown Woolen Coat With Bloused Back.



Blue Nattier Wool Model by Poiret.



Red Satin Gown With Bronze Lace Underdress.

Soon after arriving in London I went up to see my old dressmakers in Hanover square. They are French and crazy about everything concerned with French fashions. They greeted not me but my coat. "It's the new line for spring. Do you mind if we copy it? The eldest sister of the firm runs over every six months, and plans a trip this week. I advised them to go easy; they would see something newer; but they replied, "It's the line for spring." And they are considered to know their business.

This is a reportorial and not an editorial column. You know the facts; do with the suggestion what you like. I will only add it may be the line for spring, and I think it is—think it is to the extent of investing in it. But it is not so new.

As long ago as the armistice that bloused back began appearing—first in a dinner dress at Premet's when Renée was still there. Then Mme. Paquin and Cherult launched coats with it this winter, and it grew steadily in popularity until every house has something on that order. This is almost a securer recommendation for an investor than to brand it as new and untried. It is established and would appear to be just coming into its vogue.

The second model is by Poiret, and this ex-tailor of the French army everybody acknowledges to be an artist. It is of wool of nattier blue and the peculiar shaped collar is of white fur. It reaches from shoulder to shoulder in the back as well as the front and comes together in an easy armhole effect under the arms. The long opening of the material at the armholes is lined with black satin. White silk braid is inlaid, so to speak, along the opening of the sleeves and following the white fur at the throat. Straps of it band the under arm and make, as it were, the lower part of the short sleeve, the upper part of which is a mere widening of the piece of material which constitutes the back. The white silk braid is laid in close rows of three tiers down the front of the skirt, the one below the waist line twice as wide as the third.

The skirt is baggy and inexplicably draped—at least I give up the job of description. It is gathered in around the ankles. I regard it as one of the most beautiful creations I ever saw.

The third sketch, from a model of Jenny's, is of red satin, puffed and draped over an underdress of coarse webbed bronze lace. The effect around the girdle is unusual owing to the flare of the line above it, like a single tier of an Elizabethan ruff, high in the back and gently sloping toward the waist line in front. The satin is lined with other satin of the color of the coarse lace and the contrast in the two colors is far from bad. The sleeves and the front part of the bodice are of the lace. There are two panniers on either side, one front and one back.

In Sunday school one day a little boy ran into my son, pushing him flat on the floor. He was most indignant and when he arrived home he told his grandfather about it. Having tried in vain to have the little fellow drink as much milk as we thought necessary, his grandfather told him the best thing to do would be to drink lots of milk and pretty soon he would grow big and strong so he could push the other boy over. This plan seemed a good one to my son and he was full of excitement for a few moments. But all of a sudden he apparently saw an obstacle to this plan for he said, "But what if the other boy drinks milk too?" M. C. S.

Rosemary had diphtheria, and the long period of isolation was at last drawing its weary length to a close. It was particularly hard this night for Dickie to wave good night to his mother over the antiseptic sheet separating Rosemary and her mother from Dickie and his Aunt Mig, whose headquarters were the kitchen and bedroom. It was pouring outdoors and there were unmistakable signs of showers within. Finally, with his small, button-like nose pressed against the window pane and the fount of tears unloosed, he wailed: "I'm so tired of living in the behind of the house!" MIG.

Guy was with his mother and her friends on a sightseeing tour through lumber camps of the northwest. The conversation turned to the life of the loggers, who worked in the woods all day and returned home to their camps in the evening to do their own cooking, washing, and housekeeping. "Well, if they have such a hard time keeping house as all that, why don't they get some of them there stepwimmin?" Guy asked thoughtfully. V. V. C.

Robert is anxious for a baby sister. He has been told that the doctor brings the babies, and as it happened father was quite ill so the occasion presented itself for the doctor to be called. As the doctor was leaving, Robert asked him why he didn't leave a baby sister. The doctor, somewhat surprised and almost stumped for an answer, finally said he was all out of babies. Robert thought a minute and suddenly exclaimed: "Well, can't you call up God?" F. F. H.

My small brother seemed greatly impressed when I first taught him that women should always precede men. The following day I found it necessary to give both David and my sister doses of castor oil. While he made the usual grimaces I held the disagreeable spoonful close to his mouth. Suddenly, with a triumphant expression, he pushed the spoon toward my sister and cried: "Ladies first!" M. D.

At Christmas time Elinor got several little candy animals, which she has been saving because they were so cute she liked to look at them. But the other day her Aunt May was over and missed the toy rabbit from the desk.

"Why, what did you do with Bunny?" she asked.

"O, he got too dirty to play with, so I ate him," replied Elinor. J. R.

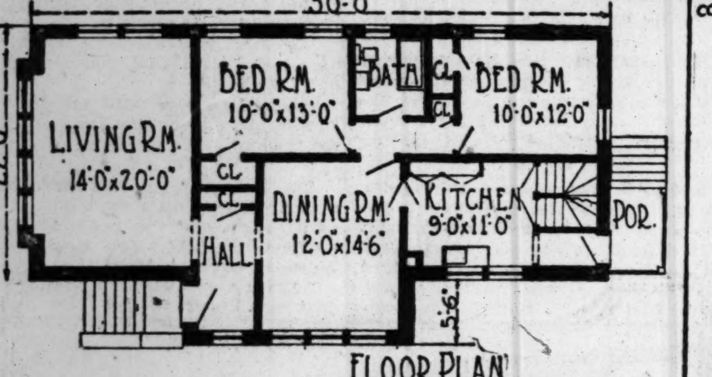
CITY BUNGALOW OF BRICK
COURTESY AMERICAN BUILDER MAGAZINE



FLOOR PLAN

Anita De Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita De Campi, Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for a personal reply.

NOVEL DESIGN IN BUNGALOW.

MANY are the variations in the exterior appearance of the brick bungalows that are the most popular type of homes with the city builders. Inside these houses are much alike, but outwardly they give the appearance of being extremely dissimilar.

As I have explained before, brick bungalows are in greatest demand because they are the most economical homes that can be erected in cities where there are building restrictions, as, for instance, within certain limits frame structures are not permitted because of the fire hazard. Thus does the home builder turn to brick for the exterior walls. However, the brick may be over frame or hollow building tile, or the walls may be of solid brick.

But speaking of the variations in brick bungalows, a novel design is shown in the accompanying illustration. The foundation walls are run up well above grade, bringing the first floor four feet eight inches above the ground. Only about three feet of excavation is required. Also this method permits of much larger basement windows, providing a greater amount of light. The side walls also are run up so that there is a large amount of attic space, enough to provide space for a small sleeping room or two, or a playroom for the children.

Attractive features of the exterior of this bungalow are the panel effect made with the face brick in the wall under the living room, and the stucco above the first floor ceiling in the gables. A tile roof, of a deeper red than the face brick, makes a harmonious color contrast.

The bungalow contains five rooms, all of good size. The living room, fourteen by twenty feet, is a cheerful room. At the front are four continuous windows, while at the side a.. two others. Besides, all the other rooms are well lighted and ventilated.

How the rooms are arranged and their sizes are shown by the floor plan. The entrance door leads into a hall. The living room is connected with the hall by cased opening, while opposite is the dining room, twelve by fourteen feet six inches. At the rear is the kitchen, nine by eleven feet.

A door in the interior wall of the dining room leads to a short hall, at either end of which is a bedroom. The one toward the front of the house is ten by thirteen feet and the rear room is ten by twelve feet. Between the bedrooms and opposite the dining room door is the bathroom. Four closets, one in the entrance hall, one in the interior hall, and one off each of the bedrooms, provide storage space for clothing.

The dimensions of the house are twenty-two by fifty feet. the narrow width making this an ideal design for cities where lots are expensive.

There is no better investment the home builder can make than to put his money into a brick bungalow. They are not expensive to build when compared with some other types of homes; they have sufficient room for the average family, and the fact that all of the rooms are on one floor and arranged so that the work of caring for them can be done with a minimum amount of effort makes them ideal homes.

Some thousands of this type of home are built every year and their number is increasing. But there is no sense in building rows of them from the same design when it is such an easy matter to change their exterior appearance.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

WOMEN WHO WEEP.

THE pet abomination of most business men is the girl who weeps at the least provocation. Few men will tolerate her for long and they usually get rid of her at the first opportunity.

A business man was telling me not long ago about a woman who had been in his office for a year and during that time had nearly driven him and every one else in the office to distraction by her constant recourse to tears when anything in reference to her work or her plans went awry.

As he put it, she had been "wished" on his office by her father, who was a man of power in local business affairs.

She was established in the office only a week when her employer had the first uncomfortable experience with her. She objected to the way one of the members of the office force spoke to her and went crying to the manager with her complaint. Two days later she burst into his office with another teary tale, and from then on he was subjected to two or three crying spells a week. He made up his mind to let her go, but each time when he was about to tell her, some friendly act on the father's part postponed the dismissal. If it hadn't been for her father's influence she never would have had her second crying spell in that office.

On the days that her employer wasn't being made miserable by her performance, she kept the rest of the people in the office on tenter hooks, by declaring with tears in her eyes and voice that they were all interfering with her work, and threatened that if they didn't change their attitudes toward her she would see that her father had them all discharged. Her threats didn't worry them a great deal, but did make them angry. However, they tried to make the best of her crying and complaining.

Finally after a year's service she asked for a two months' leave of absence. The leave was cheerfully granted her. She stayed away three months, and when she returned from her trip and called at the office to have herself reinstated in the old position she found, greatly to her disappointment, that the position had been filled in her absence and that there was no place for her.

The man who had put up with this unpleasantly temperamental girl for a year says whenever one of his new girl employes shows signs of weeping he gets rid of her. After his one trying experience with a "cry-baby" he will not take a chance on having that experience repeated.

Good manners, poise, and self-control are essential to the girl who is looking forward to success in business.

ARE YOU
EXPECTING MR. STORK

WHEN Baby comes, he is going to ride in a carriage of the finest weave which you will be able to buy at the price of the coarsest reed.

The man has been born who was destined to revolutionize the "art of weaving" of the past six thousand years.

Ever since the days of Moses and before; and from Palestine to China, the work of weaving wicker has been done by hand.

Today the wonderful thinking machine of this wizard of invention has patented an entirely new method of weaving wickers and has produced an almost human machine that does it all.

A machine that weaves in a matter of minutes what used to take the fastest fingers many weary hours.

A machine that weaves in shapes and patterns and even in colors, baby carriages and tables and chairs and every article of the wicker weaver's art. So that all these things that used to be so laboriously woven by hand through long and weary days now simply grow and take shape as if by magic before your very eyes.

300,000 READY AT 10,000 STORES

THIS promise of the Lloyd Looms is not something that is going to happen. It's something that is here now. A short while ago these Looms started working. They have never rested.

Today there are three hundred thousand of these Baby Carriages in the hands of the dealers of America. Carriages of all styles and at all prices. Better carriages, more finely woven and already at a lower price than you could ever have expected to pay.

But if you want one of these carriages for your baby who is soon to arrive, you must act now. Fast as these Lloyd Looms work, they have not been able to come anywhere near the demand. The stores everywhere are begging for more than we can give them.

LOOK through this paper today and from day to day for the stores that advertise these Lloyd baby carriages. Also watch the window displays and window announcements of your neighborhood stores.

Or, better still, fill in this coupon and send it to us and, no matter what city or town or village you may live in, we shall send you the names of the stores nearest to you who are ready to show you these better, finer baby carriages at a lower price, these wonderful products of this magic loom.

LLOYD
BABY CARRIAGES

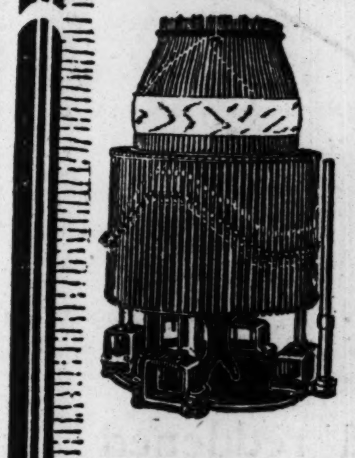
Marshall B. Lloyd.

The Inventor

This is the man whose name is destined to live through the centuries. What Howe and his sewing machine have meant to the weary fingers of women, Lloyd and his method of weaving will mean to the pallid cheeks of babies. There are one million three hundred thousand babies born in America alone every year. But before these magic looms can ever rest, there must be a Lloyd Carriage in which every baby can take his health ride in the sun—rich or poor. One within the money reach of every one.



The Loom

This is one of the human-like machines that is working night and day to supply your stores with Lloyd Baby Carriages for you. As you see it thrusting and pulling, picking and choosing, under the Lloyd method of weaving, you sometimes wonder if there isn't a human brain somewhere inside. No magic of the Orient is more wonderful. You simply watch a baby buggy grow before your eyes. And the machine does it all with a fineness that fingers never knew.

Leap Year

By Doris Blake

TODAY being the day upon which rests the amendment to the conventional proposal code, you may be interested to learn the origin of said amendment, or, in other words, why leap year gives the lady the much advertised leap year advantage, and something about the extra day itself.

Leap year, more properly known as bissextile, is the name given to the year containing 366 days. The astronomers of Julius Caesar, 46 B. C., settled the solar year at 365 days six hours. These hours were set aside and at the end of four years made a day which was added to the fourth year. The English name for the bissextile year is an allusion to the result of the interposition of the extra day: for after the 28th of February a date "leaps over" the day of the week on which it would fall in ordinary years. Thus a birthday on the 10th of June, a Monday, will in the next years, if a leap year, be on the 10th of June, a Wednesday.

Of the origin of the custom for women to woo, not to be wooed, during leap year, no satisfactory explanation has ever been offered.

In 1288 a law was enacted in Scotland that "it is statut and ordaint that during the reign of hir maist blissit megeste, for ilk years knowne as lepe yeare, ilk mayden ladye of bothe high and lowe estait shall hae libertee to bespeke ye man she likes, albeit he refuses to taik hir to be his lawful wyfe, he shall be mulcted in ye sum ane pundis or less, as his estait may be; except and awis gife he can make it appeare that he is betrothit ane ither woman he then shall be free."

A few years later a like law was passed in France, and in the fifteenth century the custom was legalized in Genoa and Florence.

Now, having settled all that as well as it seems possible to settle it, I will try to answer the request of countless numbers of inquirers for the letters of proposal and the other nonsense bits adaptable to the amusement features of the year. The following is one form of proposal letter:

Love Cottage, Spoonville.

My dear and most respectful sir:
I send you this your love to stir,
'Tis you I've chosen first of all
On whom to make this leap year call,
Your heart I ask and it's not in jest,
For I hope you'll grant this fond request.
Now send me back without delay
Your answer saying yea or nay.
I will be waiting for your reply,
Let me be yours until I die.
If you think I am a dandy,
Send me back a box of candy.
If the writer's name you guess
Send this letter back to my address.
But if for me there is no hope,
Just send me back ten yards of rope.
With the best of love and kisses
From the one who wishes
To be Mrs. —— ——.

Or maybe this will please you more:

If you want to be my fellow,
Send me back this bow of yellow.
If for me your heart is true,
Send me back this bow of blue.
If of me you sometimes think,
Send me back this bow of pink.
If of me you sometimes dream,
Send me back this bow of green.
If for me your love is dead,
Send me back this bow of red.
If you'd want me for your wife,
Send me back this bow of white.
If you think I am too old,
Send me back this bow of gold.
If you want me for a friend,
We'll put this letter to an end.

Leap Year Cottage,
No. 1 Proposal avenue, Loveburg.

A tiny bow of ribbon to match the verse goes under it.

With its brevity to recommend it, the following may do:

"If you'll be my king I'll be your queen,
Say 'Yes' by returning this bow of green.
If instead of a wedding you'd like to elope,
Send me a hint with a bow of heliotrope."

Another—silly, but then a little nonsense is relished by the wisest men.

"Dear Sir: As the year approaches, and it is the lady's duty to propose, I now ask you to be my dearest for life. I am working hard, earning a salary that two could spend much faster than one; have furnished a home, consisting of a table with three legs, a chair without a seat, a mirror without a glass, a bed without a mattress, and a stove without an oven. You might think this over carefully before making your decision in my favor. Yours hoping!"

You know, of course, that if a man refuses the proposal proffered he must either accept or buy a silk dress for the fair lady. So a refusal may be couched in words like this:

"No merry wedding bells for me;
So, please to let this old bach be.
I'll send the dress by an early mail,
But me for the good old bachelor trail!"
"I thank you for the compliment,
But I'm not on matrimony bent.
A bach I am and intend to be,
I won't be lured into the matrimonial sea."

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

AUNT LOUISE'S PLAN.

THIS time last year I was an unhappy girl, about to miss the best of life because of some erroneous ideas I had acquired. Tonight, owing to the timely arrival and advice of an old maid aunt I am sitting by the fireside with the man I love—my husband.

As I look back I wonder that I could have been so foolish and selfish, but I was and I know cities are full of girls making the same mistake, so I am going to tell you my own love story.

I was born and reared in a city where big things were being done all about me. My family was unpretentious; a small income was all we could boast of. Somehow I absorbed the big, expensive things; things constantly before my eyes but out of my reach. When I was young I rode, drove, danced, and dined, in my imagination, and was contented.

Then I outgrew my imagination and the next step was beaux. As a result of my imagination I was already a blase society woman and I had my standard set. My first beaux turned out to be callow youths with dimes they had coaxed from mothers or fathers. At that tender age they bored me and I turned them down, knowing there were larger fish in the sea, and I found one—a whale.

I had a chum who had the same ideas and it was her sister, Grace, who added fuel to the flames. Grace was a public stenographer in a downtown hotel and she was living the life we craved, dances, shows, cabarets, and taxis (I have learned since that the latter was generally necessary).

I grew older, and one day I met what I had been looking for. He was old, of course, and he had the air. On his hand flashed a diamond that dazzled and his clothes were as flashy as the diamond. I distinctly remember a red necktie tucked under a sagging double chin. I blush to admit that he called me "Baby Doll," and I was pleased.

My better judgment wouldn't let me bring him to the house, so on the eventful evening when I was to make the splurge of my life I met him at the corner drug store and in the long dreamed of taxi we made our way to the bright lights.

It was the best hotel and the best on the menu for his baby doll; but before that meal was over this baby doll had her eyes open, and making an excuse I left the table, saying I would return. I reached the street, and mixing with the crowd I kept going as fast as I could.

By this time I was in tears and must have been attracting some attention, because presently a kind voice asked me what was the matter. I looked up into a pair of honest blue eyes and without any mistrust I told him what I could of my story, and he escorted me home.

He roomed near our flat in the Y. M. C. A. and in a short time he invited me over to a Halloween party. I spent a most enjoyable evening and forgot about "high life." About a week later he asked me to go to the theater and I was my old self again.

I was blissfully happy as I walked into the foyer, and then like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky I heard, "Balcony left," and I found myself climbing the marble stairs. Somehow I had expected them to be the fifth row center (this was where Grace always sat), and here I was trudging up to the balcony. I was enraged at him for being short and was rude all during the show. He was kind and considerate to such a degree that I was ashamed of my actions.

After the show he suggested something to eat, and my spirits rose, only to fail when we entered a cafeteria and ordered a lunch, wholesome but unattractive.

When we reached home I dismissed him rudely and went to bed in despair. I had really cared for him—and to think he was short. Little did I dream that he was in love with me and wanted to give me the very best, but couldn't afford it then.

Aunt Louise came the next day. I told her everything and she told me a few things, although I didn't agree with her. We made a bargain. I was to follow her plan for a year, and if I was still unhappy I was to get a diamond ring.

This is what happened. I invited Robert and another couple over for Sunday night supper. A series of chafing dish parties followed. When Robert suggested a show I made other plans for us. I began to enjoy life. I became interested in Robert's work. He told me he was saving money and having the best time he ever had. I encouraged him to do some extra studying, and as a result he got a promotion.

Well, the year is up and I have a diamond, but Aunt Louise didn't give it to me.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond

THE Minneapolis Tribune, in an editorial leader, begs Chicago to become a theatrical producing center. Speaking in behalf of Minneapolis, St. Paul, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Detroit, Indianapolis, Omaha, and St. Louis, it pooh-poohs the sorry stuff sent westward by the New York manufacturers, and pleads for the superior product that would emanate from this central market. Employing, for a moment, the nobler rhetoric of the Minneapolis Tribune, "an empire of roughly 20,000,000 people," is ready for revolt against Broadway's slothful and negligent tyranny, and it wishes Chicago to be the capital of its secession.

"The only salvation of this region," the Tribune continues, "appears now to be in Chicago's seizure of its rightful crown. The reign of New York has broken down. New York for many years had maintained the theatrical monarchy of the country and for a long period had served its remote subjects with at least a reasonable degree of satisfaction. But that day has long since passed. . . . There is no valid reason why Chicago, which if it is not now, soon will be, the third largest city in the world and which is certainly now the third richest city in the world, should occupy the contemptible theatrical position that it does at present in relation to New York. We believe we voice the sentiments of the entire eight cities when we say: 'Let Chicago assert itself!'"

It would be amusing for us as well as salubrious for our tributary cities were we to assert ourselves and become a headquarters of theatrical production.

So imposing a promotion would involve a Lambs' club, perhaps, and the residence here of players, managers, scenic painters, perruquiers, costumers, song-mongers, hosiers, and the other picturesque populace characteristic of the theater. Our own dramatists would study life's strange, irregular rhythms at Clark and Randolph, as those of New York do at Broadway and Forty-third, composing for us and the public of the middle west their Pollyannas and Passing Shows. We might have our own Billie Burkes and Barrymores refusing to leave Chicago for New York, and a Ziegfeld pleading with ladies of the chorus to desert their flats in Wilson avenue for just a fortnight or so on Broadway.

Mr. Woollcott, the critic of the New York Times, might murmur umbrageously when he did not get the "original Chicago cast," and berate, politely, the Chicago equivalent of the Shuberts, for sending Oomplatz to Broadway instead of Jazbeau, who created the part on Clark street. Mr. McElliott of the New York News would undertake an annual pilgrimage to Chicago to see the new plays. Journalists from Wilkesbarre and Altoona, doubling in real estate and the drama, would be the guests of our magnanimous press agents, who at supper time in the College Inn would patiently point out to them our Louis Manns and David Warfields. Chicago's William Courtenay after a month in New York with a Chicago success, might, while at luncheon in the Knickerbocker, lift his voice in sheer dejection and cry: "God! Shall I never get back to Town?" A Great White Way might be ours with tourists and electric lights upon it. We might have an Alan Dale and a Greenwich Village and if we asked our Carl Van Vechten to identify the strange person at the center table in the Illinois Athletic Club he might answer that it is a visiting New Yorker, because its neck is shaved and it is reading "Vanity Fair."

The Minneapolis Tribune in its frontier fretfulness perhaps forgets that a long and laborious procedure is essential to the establishment of a center of theatrical art. Shuberts, Bradies, "Broncho Billy" Andersons, Klaws, Erlangers, Harry Frazees, et cetera, are of no overnight, mushroom growth. They are born in the deep purple of the didoes. The hand that rounded Peter's dome wrought in a sincerity no more solemn than that in which they perform. It might require a generation to breed in Chicago a producer who could produce "Jack o' Lantern," which, the Minneapolis Tribune boasts, drew $36,000 in a week in that hungering metropolis.

Does the Minneapolis Tribune suspect that a Morris Gest could spring in a moment out of the arid Union Loop with an "Aphrodite" in his two hands, or a George C. Tyler with a "Clarence"? Velocity is a Chicago attribute, but Wrigley did not make Spearmint in a day. Armour's ham what am is the result of years of profound study and of genius applied to execution. Sears-Roebuck's transposition from a 2 cent stamp to a cosmic habit was deliberate, and the Chicago subway was not built by the wave of a wand. Our pleasant friend in the northwest must be patient. We shall be sending him nicely tinned shows in the course of time. Meanwhile he should console himself with the fact that there is usually as much art and considerably more nourishment in a carload of Swift's side meat than there is in a carload of drama, whether it be packed in New York or in Chicago.

CONCERNING this week's new plays:

Miss George's aids in "The Ruined Lady" will include the author, Frances Nordstrom, and John Miltern. The play is about a lady and a love affair. . . . Mrs. Fiske's rôle in "Mis' Nelly of N'Orleans" is that of an "irresistible belle" who interrupts the engagement of her niece to a "proud Creole" and marries him herself. She dances a Valse Caprice in the Mardi Gras scene. Hamilton Revelle, who used to act with Miss Nethersole and Mrs. Carter, impersonates the haughty Louisianan. . . . "The Rose of China" has the advantage of a libretto by P. G. Wodehouse and Guy Bolton and music by the leader of a band in a New York hotel. Frank McIntyre, Oscar Shaw, Jane Richardson, Jean Barnett, and Cecil Cunningham are in it. . . . "Monte Cristo Jr." boasts the longest run in the New York Winter Garden; also the presence in its cast of Lew Hearn and the Watson sisters. It is a burlesque, the press agent says, of the adventures of Edward Dantes. . . . Among the songs by Rudolf Friml rendered in "Some Time" are "Baby Doll," "Picking Peaches," "Oh, Argentine," and "Any Kind of Man." Frank Tinney, the funny blackface fellow, is a prominent participant.

Raymond Hitchcock and "Hitchy-Koo" will leave the Illinois in a fortnight to be followed, probably, by Ed Wynn and his Carnival, a similar play. . . . "The Royal Vagabond," a prominent success of a season or two ago in New York, will succeed "See Saw" at the Colonial. "See Saw" will follow the Follies next week. . . . When and if McIntyre and Heath finish their long run at the Garrick, another Shubert revue, "The Gaieties of 1919," will become the tenant of that theater.

They charged $5 a seat for John Barrymore's performance of "Richard III." last night in New York. . . . Robert Hichens' "The Voice from the Minaret," acted by Marie Lohr in London, has been acquired by the Selwyns, presumably for the purposes of Jane Cowl. . . . Brieux's comedy of the recent American occupation of France, "The Americans in Our Midst," will be produced here by Leo Ditrichstein, but without himself in the cast. . . . The Shuberts will revive "Florodora" next month with Eleanor Painter, Christie Macdonald, and George Hassell among the players. . . . D. Belasco announces an exhumation for next season of "The Return of Peter Grimm" with David Warfield as the ghost under whose auspices the romance of the play is conducted.

John Drew in "The Catbird"

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—John Drew is still true to the snappy dinner coat, and even at 66 he can teach the youngsters of the stage much they do not know sartorially, but in "The Catbird" he slips gracefully into the character rôle he is now best fitted to play and makes no secret of his willingness to give up trying to cheat the years.

He still lingers by "the shores of old romance," but it is now the belated romance of the bachelor who finds his last love willing, at the end of the play, to go the rest of the way with him because—well, because he is John Drew. The curtain descends as he, perched on the arm of her chair, looks unutterable things into her shining brown eyes, but makes no attempt to crush her to his immaculate shirt front. The fires of love are banked, but the coals are warming.

"The Catbird" is a brightly written little comedy by Rupert Hughes. Mr. Drew's rôle is that of a middle aged scientist who, as a youth, had been disappointed in Janet Beecher when she would not put off their marriage while he dashed off around the world searching for a parasite needed to save the wheat crop. When he came back he found her married to another man and promptly shut himself up with his plants and bugs, determined to spend the rest of his life studying their love affairs and forgetting his own.

Later, when Janet floated again within the orbit of his secluded life, he was able to help her straighten out the affairs of a flirtatious niece and in the process to again endear himself to the widow. A bright comedy, as said, but slow paced and placid to a degree. The reviewers, kindly souls at heart, were gentle and considerate, laying much stress upon the art of Mr. Drew and the position he would always hold in the history of the native theater, and saying little of the entertainment. Miss Beecher was charmingly natural as the heroine from whom the play takes its title. The scientist had called her a catbird, which she thought he intended as a reference to her disposition when he meant it as a tribute to her womanly virtues. Ruth Findlay played the ingenue prettily and William Raymond her pursuing sweetheart.

There is still good dramatic material in the simple but wholesome lives of

By Mae Tinée.

DEAR me, how sorry you're going to be for Charlie Ray this time! He's so terrribly up against it!

Not only is he a poor, downtrodden bookkeeper shamefully put upon by the efficiency boss, but in the boarding house he calls home he's the peckee of all the old henpecks.

The landlady, be he ever so late to work, thrusts upon him little Izzie to be "dropped" at the kindergarten. And the awful Miss Smithers—I think it's Smithers, she's awful, anyway—seamstress, sews in his room while he's gone and leaves it no place for a tired young man to come home to. Moreover, the awful Miss Smithers does her laundry in the bathroom when poor Andy wants to wash and shave of a morning.

Besides all this—Andy stutters. And because he stutters he's self-conscious, and because he's self-conscious he's awkward, and because he just doesn't act like anything at all he doesn't get anywhere at all. Poor Andy!

But—cheerup girruls! With all his drawbacks, Andy wasn't a fool, you know. And Andy had something the fresh efficiency boss hadn't. It was a something that had probably been sifted into his blood from an aristocratic forbear—a something that made nice people like the awkward, tongue-tied boy. A something that made Andy strong to take his chance when it came. A something of charm and sweetness and humanness that no efficiency expert, however efficient, could ever have cultivated.

So something even intrigued Fate, who in a lenient and whimsical moment opened the gates of paradise a crack and gave Andy nerve and ingenuity and common sense enough to accomplish the apparently impossible and push his way through.

And behold, to Andy comes the girl of his dreams and the job of his dreams. So, you see, when the picture ends you're not feeling sorry, after all.

Personally I think this is the best picture and the best cast Mr. Ray has had in some time. Bet you'll think so, too.

MISS GRACE GEORGE in "THE RUINED LADY" PRINCESS. PHOTO—JOHNSTON.

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

DEARIE: It doesn't like itself, does it, Dearie? O, it's all right with me. Of course your letter went into the waste basket after I had read and answered it. What did you think I'd do with it? Frame it?

MISS P: It was lovely of you to remember me!

MARY ELIZABETH K.: Indeed, an' I'll be so kind! Address Katherine MacDonald at Georgia and Gerard streets, Los Angeles; Elaine Hammerstein, care of Selznick, 729 Seventh avenue, New York, and Constance Binney, 112 West Forty-second street, New York. Glad to help you out.

GAYLORD D.: As I remember it, the picture you mention was rather a good one, though it was nothing at all like your big idea. Yes, no doubt about it, the little shop girl was splendid. Her real name is Effie Shannon. It's awfully nice of you to take the time to write me your clever letters. I love to get them.

those down easterners about whom James A. Herne once wrote so entertainingly. And good comedy value as well. In making a play from one of Joseph Lincoln's Cape Cod stories, "Shavings," Pauline Phelps, and Marion Short have fallen a little short of the possibilities of their subject, but they have not robbed it of its value as entertainment.

There is a rumor that George Cohan, who is doing a bit of free lancing, now that he has cut himself adrift from the firm of Cohan & Harris as an outcome of the actors' strike last fall, had a hand in refashioning the original script, but the good he did is rather artfully concealed. The second act is still wabbly and much in need of strengthening, and George is usually good at rewriting second acts.

"Shavings" is the nickname of a village character who has whittled himself into prosperity making toy windmills for children. The fame of his product spreads to Boston and he can sell all the toys he can make. He is cold to the lure of money until an attractive widow moves next door to him. Then he buys himself a suit of store clothes and perks up a bit.

When the widow's younger brother is accused of theft from the bank in which he is employed "Shavings" hustles around and borrows the money alleged to be missing, swearing he found it where the young man had dropped it, in a corner of his dusty windmill shop. But his sacrifice goes for nothing. There really had been no theft and there was no money missing.

The widow is duly impressed by the noble act of her good friend, but not sufficiently impressed to want to marry him. She prefers a husky major in the aviation service, and "Shavings" is left with the philosophical observation that any old dog who wastes his time baying at the moon because he is lonesome is a fool dog and no mistake.

Alexandra Carlisle's special matinée performances of Masefield's "The Tragedy of Nan" did not please the intelligencia as much as she had hoped they might.

A performance that was in many ways impressively fine was given by a selected cast—Philip Merrivale playing the lover, Annie Hughes and Harry Ashford the devilish relatives, Beatrice Noyes the vixinish daughter, and John Harwood the crazed gaffer—but, actorlike, they were so eager to stress the horror and the gloom of the story that they exposed the artifice of the theater and left their audiences so deucedly uncomfortable the reaction was unfavorable.

German Opera to Be Given with Text in English

By W. L. Hubbard.

WAGNER has returned to the Metropolitan opera house in New York and it is safe to conclude that our own organization will restore some of his works to its repertory next season. In fact, it is already rumored around the Gotham headquarters of the Chicago company that "Lohengrin" will be in the list of novelties next winter and that Rosa Raisa will sing Elsa. If this does come to pass, it is likely that the same course will be followed here that finally has obtained in New York, namely that the text shall be in English translation.

"Parsifal" was the work selected for the restoration of Mighty Richard at the Metropolitan and yesterday witnessed the second presentation of the Consecration Drama there. Concerning the performance itself critical opinions vary. Clarence Whitehill as Amfortas, a rôle in which he long has stood eminent, is commended by all the reviewers. The Klingsor of Mr. Didur is generally approved, and the Kundry of Mme. Matzenauer is praised although it is stated that the part cannot be considered among her ablest achievements. She is said to have fallen below the standard set by predecessors in the part, especially in the second act—the scene of the enchantment of Parsifal in the Magic Garden.

As for Orville Harrold, who sang the title rôle for the first time and is said to have learned it in fifteen days, opinions differ. Mr. Vernon, who writes in place of his colleague, Mr. Krehbiel, for the Tribune, praises everything connected with the performance and waxes enthusiastic over Mr. Harrold's voice, acting, and dramatic power. Mr. Aldrich in the Times says: "Mr. Harrold, if not the most impressive of Parsifals, acted with great skill and understanding and sang well, though perhaps he is not so much at home in this music as in that of another kind." Mr. Finck in the Evening Post declares he "did not rise to the opportunity; his voice is singularly deficient in euphony," but commends his acting. And Mr. Huneker in the World says that as a "singer he lacks distinction He is more at ease in lighter opera."

New scenery had been provided, being painted by Josef Urban, but it is not generally approved. The Temple Scene is declared of great beauty and effectiveness, but the using of a stationary, symbolically painted curtain instead of the moving scenery connecting the two divisions of the first act is not generally regarded as an improvement.

The chief point of interest in the presentation, however, was the fact that the opera was sung in English. It is not, of course, the first time that "Parsifal" has been thus presented, for over 400 performances in the vernacular were given under Mr. Savage's excellent management the year the music drama was first done in the United States. But it is the first time that the Metropolitan has opened its door to "translated" opera. That is, to opera translated into English. There have been numerous occasions when operas composed to foreign tongue have been translated into Italian or French and presented there, but the mighty powers that be, who in their "cosmopolitanism" have always held their hand high in holy horror at the suggestion of "translated" opera, have never recognized such foreign transmogrifications as translations and so English, which they could recognize, has never been used. But the war brought a mighty glow of "patriotism" into the breasts of these "cosmopolitans" and the result is that "Parsifal" now comes forward in new English dress.

The translation has been made by H. E. Krehbiel, the veteran critic of the Tribune, who through some forty years of activity has been pronouncedly antagonistic to all that stood for American music and the bringing of it to the American public along logical lines. He, too, heard the call of "patriotism" and therefore valiantly responded when a commission from the Metropolitan came to make a new translation of "Parsifal." He now is an ardent advocate of opera in English and his colleagues in New York are following gratifyingly along after him.

It all would be amusing were it not a sign of so much good. And perhaps the fact that it is so good, but adds to the smiles it should provoke. Suffice it, that all who have the interest of opera progress in this country at heart can but rejoice that the New York critics, who have long been an insuperable barrier to the introduction of opera in English, have finally been won over by "patriotism" or any other means, and that through them the Metropolitan patrons and thus the opera goers all over the United States—for New York and the Metropolitan set the "style' in matters operatic—will now be brought to realize that opera in English is "good form" and is even allowable, to be listened to by ears of wealth and "culture."

The Krehbiel translation is universally commended by the New York Press and clearly has been made with all the literary skill, the fine linguistic taste, and the unquestioned musical intelligence which distinguish the famed critic. The words fit the music and are singable throughout, and all the critics admit that in the performance the words could be heard save when the orchestral flood became too heavy and submerged everything save tone. Mr. Aldrich, answering the question "How much was understood by 'the listeners," declares that when Mr. Harrold was singing his diction was excellent and "when he was supported by a lightly scored orchestra line after line of his speeches could be understood." And Mr. Whitehill was "also easily intelligible." Mme. Matzenauer, too, is credited with singing her English so that it could be understood, and Mr. Rothier, despite a slight French accent, made his text clear.

Unwillingly, but still unmistakably, the New York press admits that opera, properly translated into English and carefully sung by singers who take the trouble to master the singing of English, is intelligible and not the worthless thing they have delighted to picture it this many a year. The world surely "do move."

Last Thursday night brought to Chicago the first hearing of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, an organization which in a certain form has existed for many years, but which only some thirteen ago came into symphonic shape, and conditions, and only the last six has been on a permanent basis as a symphonic orchestral organization. Viewed last Thursday it was clear from the youthfulness of the majority of the players that the material of which the orchestra is composed is largely new, and that the results disclosed in the performance are those which Max Zach the conductor has planned and achieved. He has molded this material into an excellent working body, precise and accurate in attack and in presentment of the phrase, unanimous in shading and in melodic utterance, tonally disclosing no inconsiderable euphony and beauty and in general admirably responsive to all demands he as conductor makes. The strings are excellent but the wood wind is only fairly good and the brass section the weak portion of the band. It is wanting in mellowness and roundness of tonal body and in certain sections of the Chausson B flat major Symphony and especially in the Tschaikowsky "Romeo and Juliet" left a good deal to be desired so far as beauty and nobility are concerned.

The program consisted of the two numbers mentioned, the Goldmark "Spring" Overture and the Bruch G minor Concerto for violin, played by the concertmaster Michel Gusikoff and admirably accompanied by the orchestra. The playing of the various selections merited commendation for the technical smoothness and finish that characterized them, and for the general good taste and musicianship that marked their interpretation. Mr. Zach is a well routined, careful director rather than a fiery, inspirational one, and the readings therefore, while they compelled approval, did not rouse or deeply stir. Mr. Gusikoff is master of his violin, winning a fine, pure tone which not only pleases but charms, and his interpretative powers include excellent taste, and good musicianship.

Announcements of concerts and recitals for the week will be found on page 17 of this section.

Down in Jamaica, Where Rum Comes From—or Did Once

By Mme. X.

KINGSTON, Jamaica. — [Special Correspondence.]—Just a minute more at the Panama canal before joining the devotees of "planters' punch" at Jamaica.

Perhaps you already know that the canal runs nearly north and south and that its Pacific ocean terminus lies east of its Atlantic ocean or Caribbean sea, entrance. I had to travel 2,000 miles to learn this.

Its northern part is divided into two parts—Colon, which is Panamanian and wet, and Cristobal, which is American and dry. Both are clean as new pipestems owing to our superlative sanitary corps, which exercises despotic control over that whole region.

By the way, we continue to perform the same service for Cuba, a work begun under Gen. Leonard Wood in 1901. Our doctors and engineers are protecting the Cubans from themselves and their habits, for the preservation of the health of that part of the world.

The southern entrance to the canal is also divided between two controls. The town of Panama, most picturesque, fascinating, and moist (the term is used to express the opposite of Bryanism), is the capital of the republic of Panama, while Ancon and Balboa, its two beautiful, immaculate, and charming suburbs—dry as dry can be—are in the Canal Zone and therefore American.

Disliked by Panamanians.

The Cubans like us and are grateful for our continuing care of their public health. Not so the Panamanians, if report speaks true. They wish we'd leave their drains, sewage, garbage, and other perfumed perquisites alone, and see nothing admirable in the canal, its operation, and accompanying features.

The big barracks at both northern and southern ends of the canal, which are being built now, will help house the 25,000 troops it is planned to place on the isthmus for the protection of our most important national asset.

Geography can best be studied by traveling. For instance, you might have learned everything that was ever written in any geography, and yet not know that right at the Pacific ocean mouth of our big canal England owns a little island, a scraggy, ill manicured thumb of rock, earth, grass, and scrub bushes, in the Bay of Panama, ten miles or so out from the mainland, and far removed from any other British possession. There it lies a stone's throw from the little island of Taboga, where the United States has built and runs a most attractive hotel for the use of those who desire a breath of salt sea air and good deep sea fishing.

Birds at Taboga.

Liquid jade with streaks of turquoise lay the sea the day we went to Taboga. On this floated the island, its cocoanut palms and banana trees asleep under the noon sun. The only signs of life were a half a dozen pelicans, absurdest birds ever created, who either swooped from above with such force, diving for fish, that it seemed as if they must snub their noses on the glassy surface of the sea, or skimmed swiftly across it, the ends of their wings just feathering the top of the water. You remember the poet's description of the pelican whose beak holds more than his belly can, "I don't see how the belly can."

Two other birds will be forever associated with the isthmus. Far out at sea a lone frigate bird met us, its unforgettable silhouette harbinger of land. Like the wings of the fallen archangel, Lucifer, his were shaped with sinister batlike angles and lines. His sharp beak glistened like burnished steel, while his long, thin, black tail surprised the watcher sometimes by dividing into two prongs when he needed aid to fly into the mouth of the northeast trade wind.

Dozens of his kind hovered over the bay at Colon, while the upper regions of the deep blue sky that bent over the nearly green land were never without half a dozen buzzards slowly floating in great circles. Near at hand they're unkempt, bolshevistic looking critters, the term scavenger and carrion lover being writ all over them, but seen high up in the vasty depths of the sky they carry the eye and imagination away from earth and its fretful cares.

"Planter's Punch" Has It.

To the average mind Jamaica spells rum and little else. So the first thing the traveling public does on landing at Kingston and finding itself sitting under the rustling palms of the hotel garden is to order a "planter's punch." It is a pale amber in hue and comes to you in a tall glass. It clinks and smiles at you with a child's happy glee. You taste it and say to yourself, "Why, theres nothing to this."

Don't be taken in. From observation the writer has deduced the following: One glass may do little beyond loosening the tongue a good deal. Two glasses unset the eyes, generally turning both in towards the nose; three unhinge the knees, causing them to act independently of each other—and independence in the knees is not easy to handle, even for the soberest. Four glasses—well, few ever get as far as four glasses, and none stay to watch them if they do. That's planter's punch!

To an American it is edifying to come from an American possession—it's not a colony—like the Canal Zone to an English possession like Jamaica, which also is not a colony. We do it better, friends. It's probably because it's our military which is handling the zone that it's so perfectly done. Whatever it is, one is struck with the contrast.

Only Man Is Vile.

Jamaica, one of the most beautiful spots on the face of the globe, where nature, except for an occasional quake, has done all she could for man, is, as far as man can make it, a dreary, untidy, squalid, dusty, ugly place. This, of course, only applies to the towns. The mountains, valleys, and seaboard are of a transcendent loveliness which makes every waking hour a feast of delight.

But the English have done little or nothing to develop the island or to lift up the natives from what seems to a mere onlooker a pretty low level. Out of a population of 800,000 only 15,000 are white. The rest are of every shade from pale ivory to black as ebony. We stopped this morning to coquette with a mite of humanity 2 years old, whose eyes were blue, hair a fuzzy gold, and skin a deep, unmistakable gray brown. But all shades go in Jamaica.

All—men, women, and children—have wonderfully soft, sweet, rich voices, and many of them speak the most exquisite ultra-English English that can be heard this side of Oxford, with a curious slow precision and choice of long words that makes roadside conversations most entertaining adventure.

Sir Alex Still There.

The chief sight in Kingston, from the American traveler's point of view, is Sir J. Alexander Swettenham. Sir Alexander was that tactful governor who, at the time of the disastrous earthquake which devastated Kingston in 1907, drove away the American warships, which, responding to an urgent call for help, hurried to Jamaica. The city lay in blazing ruins. Hundreds were killed by falling buildings or the flames. Other thousands were injured or homeless and without food. Marauders were sacking the town. Our ships brought doctors, medicines, bandages.

Our marines were landed and set to work at putting out the fires and protecting the place from looting bands. Our physicians were hurrying supplies to the hastily arranged hospitals when the governor wrote to the American officer in charge and asked who had asked him to come or authorized the landing of troops, or in any way requested his aid. We can take a hint as quickly as any people, so back our ships sailed, and the Jamaicans were left to their own devices, much to their bitter distress.

The British government, after an inquiry, ousted the amiable Sir Alexander, who never cared to go back to England to face the earnest disapproval that awaited him there. He stayed on the island and is the first object of interest pointed out to newly arrived Americans.

As He Is Today.

He's today an elderly party with the prominent nose, retreating forehead and chin, and a walrus cut to his mustache which makes him look the part he played. He wears a most remarkable headgear in the dusty, sun bleached streets of Kingston. It's a broad brimmed, gray felt hat with a high peaked crown, the size and shape of a nice beehive. The brim is turned up on one side. Under his left arm he usually carries a hunting crop at such an angle as to caress the visage of many with whom he comes in contact.

Quite cordially disliked by most of his color in Jamaica, he is said to be popular with the natives.

The name Swettenham will have quite a high aroma to Americans of the present generation (and an aroma seems a natural condition to Swettenham). A brother of Sir Alexander was at one time at the head of the British censorship bureau, or in a place of power in it during the later war. He made himself, so it is said, so particularly obnoxious in censoring cables to and from the United States that finally he had to be removed to a place less well adapted to annoying us. I'm afraid we're not popular with the Swettenhams.

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Club Hits High Costs in Drive on Extravagance

Believing concerted effort is the one effective method of bringing down soaring prices, the members of the Rogers Park Woman's club are making plans for a drive against the forces of extravagance and hysterical buying, which are the strongest allies of the unfair dealer.

A campaign of publicity is soon to be launched with the aid of the neighborhood newspapers and motion picture houses, with the hope that each individual will be aroused to his own responsibility in the serious business of restoring conditions to normal.

As a part of this campaign the club will open its doors on the afternoon and evening of March 19 for a "community home economics day," under the direction of Mrs. A. J. Schwartz, chairman of home economics; Mrs. J. L. Carroll, thrift chairman; Mrs. Sarkis Nahigian, program chairman, and Mrs. H. E. Smoot, financial secretary of the club's monthly magazine, the Message.

The best speakers available on the subject of thrift and kindred topics will be secured for the event. There will be exhibits of household utilities and clothing and demonstrations of food products, the exhibitors giving the audience their view of the problem of excessive costs and endeavoring to show how buyer and seller may best coöperate in the war to be waged against existing conditions.

It is hoped that this meeting of producer, retailer, and ultimate consumer will have immediate and beneficial results.

The club is interested not only in present economic concerns, but has expended a great deal of energy the last few months upon a question of great future interest to all residents of Chicago, the saving of some of the lake front for public use. The committee on conservation—Mrs. George J. Heicher chairman—has devoted much time and thought to furthering this project, concentrating its efforts upon the tract of land lying between Sheridan road and the lake, bounded by Estes and Lunt avenues.

Through its civics committee, of which Mrs. John H. White is chairman, the club is putting especial effort into protective work for girls. A member of the committee is an active member of the Travelers' Aid, and girls who are wards of the Juvenile court are given clothing and other assistance as it is needed.

Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Reginald Ford the magazine mentioned above is published every month. Thus the 800 members of the club are kept in close touch with the activities of every department.

The junior membership, of which Miss Sylvia Campbell is president, is a live branch of the club. At present they are planning a dance to be given early in April, the proceeds to go toward further equipment of the psychopathic ward at the Fort Sheridan base hospital.

In order to induce our customers to purchase in March instead of during the April rush we are making this remarkable money saving offer.

An early visit to Exhibition Hall, Peoples Gas Building, or to any of our neighborhood stores will convince you it is to your advantage in many ways to buy your new Range Now, and get this valuable premium. Guarantees, Prices and Terms of Payment are the same as usual.

ECONOMY

By using the Duplex stropping attachment, at least 100 hair cuts can be obtained from the four cutting edges, making the cost per hair cut only one cent. Quite a difference from the barber's heavy charges, isn't it? It makes a clear saving of $13.00 every year for each male member of the family. Besides this cash saving there are many other advantages in owning a Duplex. You can cut your hair in less than five minutes, instead of an hour at the barber's. No danger of catching dandruff or other hair disease. You can cut your hair any hour of the day or night, any day in the week. Mother can cut the children's hair. And you are sure of a smooth, even hair cut at a cost of one cent instead of paying 50c for one that is uneven and jagged. You can't go wrong with a Duplex; the slanting teeth won't let you. The slanting teeth prevent pulling.

A Ten-Day Tube of Pepsodent. Send coupon. Make this simple, pleasant home test. See for yourself the results.

6,000 People Daily

Start This New Teeth-Cleaning Method

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

Teach Children to Employ It

When you see what Pepsodent does, teach the children to employ it.

Brushing is inadequate for saving teeth, and millions of mothers know it. The film will wreck them if you don't combat it.

This ten-day test will show you how to fight the film. It will point the way to whiter, safer teeth.

It will tell you how the children can avoid some troubles that you know.

See that they do it. There are few things more important.

Millions of teeth are being cleaned in a new way. And 6,000 new people daily are writing for a ten-day test.

Everywhere the results are seen in teeth that glisten—teeth with envied luster. Ask the owners and they will tell you that Pepsodent has done it.

But this means more than white teeth. Those careful people are fighting film, and film is the great tooth wrecker. Most tooth troubles are nowadays traced to it.

Film—the Chief Enemy

Film is that viscous coat which you feel with your tongue. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. The tooth brush does not end it. The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve it. So much remains to cloud the teeth and it may do a ceaseless damage.

Film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus well-brushed teeth, as millions know, discolor and decay. And serious tooth diseases are alarming in extent.

Science Now Combats It

These facts have long been known. Dental science long has sought a way to daily fight film. But the only way seemed periodic dental cleaning to remove the film and tartar.

Now science has discovered an efficient film combatant. Able authorities have proved it by convincing clinical and laboratory tests.

For home use, the method is now embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent—a modern, scientific tooth paste. And, to show its effects, a 10-Day Tube is being sent to anyone who asks.

Make This Simple Test

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to day by day combat it.

This method long seemed impossible. Pepsin must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. But a harmless activating method has been found. Years of tests have proved that. So now this active pepsin can be every day applied.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.

See the results, and our book will tell you how they come about. Then decide for yourself between the old ways and the new.

The test will be a revelation, and you owe it to yourself. Mail the coupon to us today.

Pepsodent PAT. OFF. REG. U.S.

The New-Day Dentifrice

The scientific film combatant, which, after years of careful testing, is now advised by leading dentists everywhere. Druggists everywhere are supplied with large tubes.

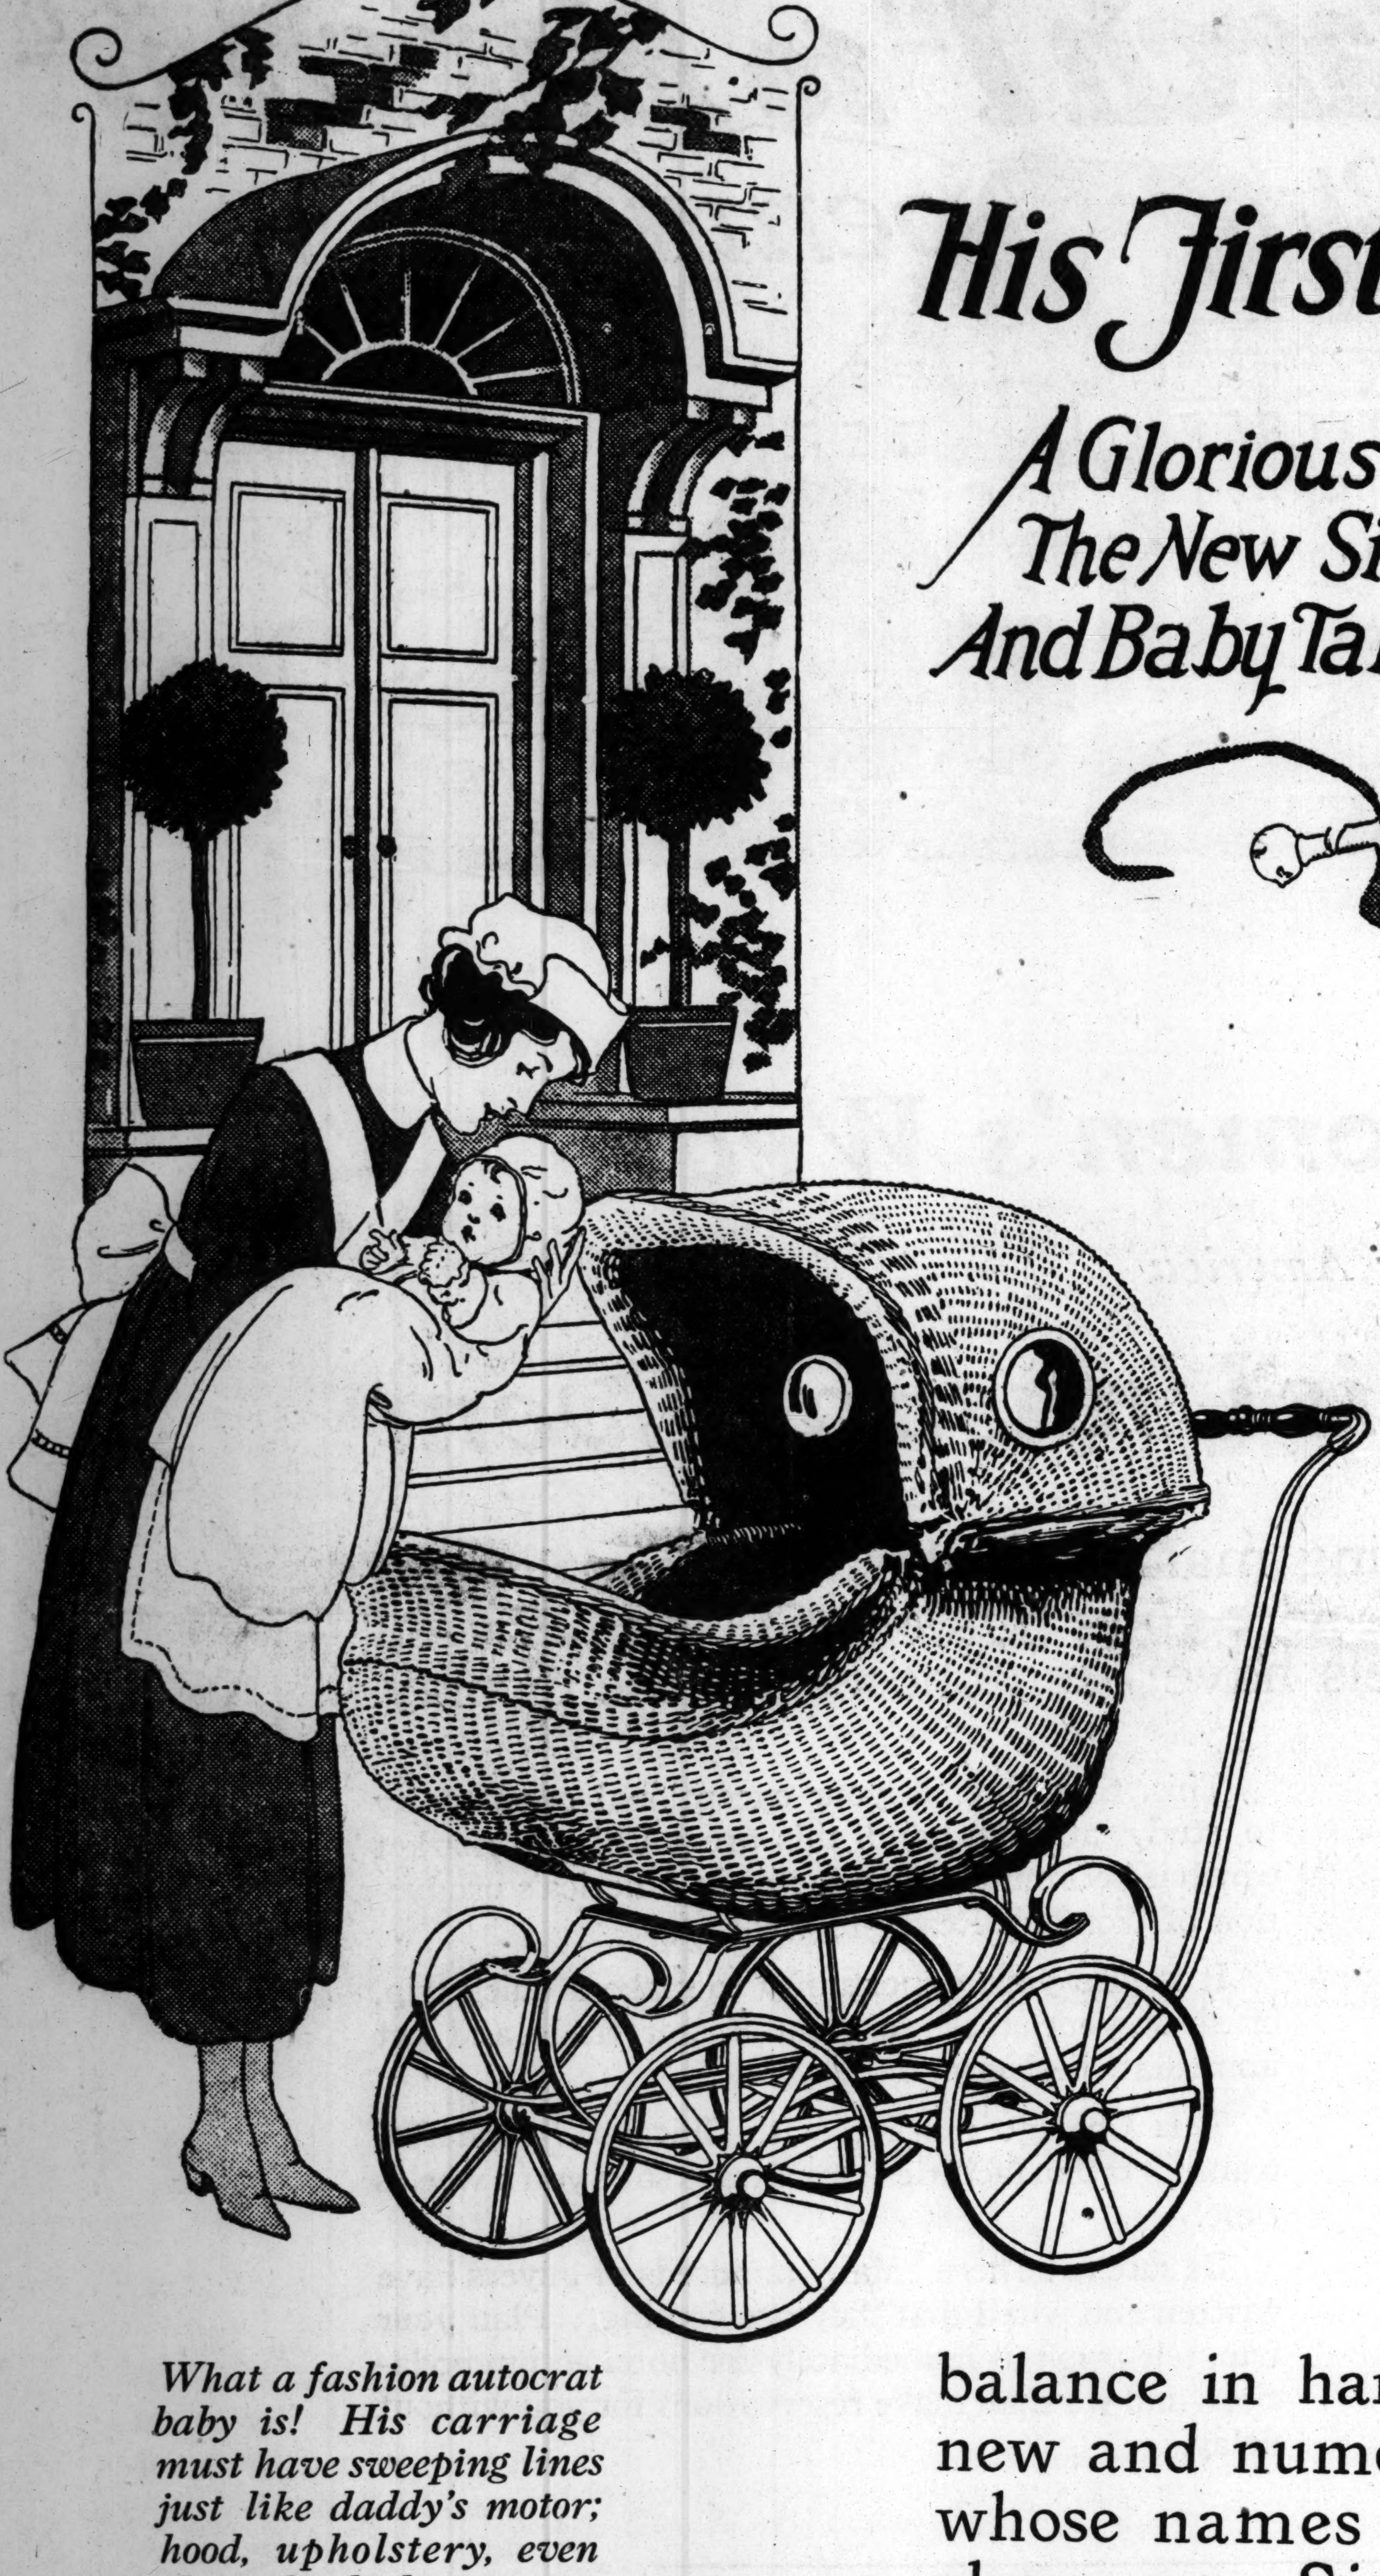
His First Outdoor Journey

A Glorious Sunshiny Day—
The New Sidway Arrived—
And Baby Takes His First Airing



What a fashion autocrat baby is! His carriage must have sweeping lines just like daddy's motor; hood, upholstery, even the wheel design are matters of great moment. But who would deny baby's right to the smartest of conveyances?

WHAT shall you look for in a reed baby carriage? Beauty, of course. Only hand weaving of genuine reed can give the graceful shapes and pleasing designs of Sidway carriages. Strength! Sidway carriages are sturdily angle-braced with steel; body, springs and wheels are extra strong. Comfort for mother and baby! Sidway carriages are reversible; the back is adjustable; the hood is sliding; the long, sweeping pushers give easy balance in handling. Styles are smart, new and numerous. Any of the dealers whose names are listed will be glad to show you Sidway carriages. On your request we will mail you our Baby Book.

Nebraska, Iowa, Lead in Number Cars Per Capita

PRODUCTION in the automotive industry in America has reached a point where the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce announces that the 1920 business will rank second only to steel.

In 1919 motor vehicle production amounted to $1,807,594,580. If bodies and accessories were included, this figure would pass the two billion mark. New York state is the first in the number of automobiles registered with a total of 570,000 cars. Ohio's 511,000 automobiles give it second place.

In the number of machines per capita, Nebraska and Iowa lead with approximately one car to every six people. This is probably due to the fact that the largest percentage of increase in automobile registration has been in agricultural sections, while the total population of these states is small.

Undoubtedly the reason for this was the government guarantee for wheat prices, while in Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana and Georgia the high price of cotton gave these states leadership in the increase of automobile registration throughout the country.

Sicily Plans Race.

Stock cars only will be admitted in the next Targa Florio race to be held on the island of Sicily June 20. As a proof that the machine is a regular production job, it will be exacted that [illegible] cars have been delivered or are in course of construction on the day of the race. The course is admitted to be one of the most difficult in Europe.

Ikert Succeeds Hatch.

R. M. Ikert has been appointed editor for Motor Age to succeed the late Darwin S. Hatch, who was managing editor until his death a month ago.

My Funniest Motoring Experience

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published in "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Funniest Motoring Experience, The Tribune, Chicago. Manuscripts submitted in this contest cannot be returned. Make a copy and keep it if you wish to preserve what you have written.

A "Good" Samaritan.

While on a motorcycle trip with my wife one Sunday afternoon, a bad blowout tore the vale out of our rear tire. I walked to the nearest place, half a mile down the road, carrying the tube in the hope of finding a repair shop. My spirits rose at sight of a garage sign, and when I finally aroused the owner he refused to transact any business on Sunday. He would neither vulcanize my old tube nor sell me a new one, and he regarded my difficulty as a punishment for riding on Sunday. In vain I explained that my wife was waiting in the hot sun and that we had many miles to cover. I finally left after telling him just what I thought of his "Christianity." I had started back when I heard him calling and turned to see him running after me carrying a new tube, and found that on reflection he had decided to help us out. He gave me the tube but refused to accept money, it being Sunday, and said I could mail him the money the next day if I wished—which I did. I retracted my former remarks and a little later we waved at him as we flew past on our homeward journey.

Couldn't Get Out.

During the war myself and a couple of friends were in the S. A. T. C. At that time a salute would get a service man an auto ride. We were in town and were hurrying in an effort to get to camp before our passes expired, so decided to salute the first passing car. Along came a luxurious sedan, the salute was given and the car drew up for us to jump in. We gave the chauffeur the name of the street we wanted to get off at, and as we approached it one of us called aloud to the chauffeur to stop. He did not hear us and we did not use his tube, being ignorant of the method at the time. One pressed a button and a window opened; another was pressed with no results. We now feared to touch anything more, but called loudly only not to be heard. We rode four blocks past our street before a traffic cop finally halted the car at a corner. We quickly jumped out and walked back, but the time lost caused us to be late and we were all given two days at kitchen police.

Woke Up the Zoo.

We were taking a spin around the parks one warm summer evening. It had grown quite late and dark by the time the park was reached, and in our efforts to find a shorter route home we mistook the wide cinder foot path which approached the zoo for one of the numerous driveways and entered upon it only to find ourselves driving around a small circle with animals and birds caged on either side. Round and round we went looking for an exit on the opposite side from where we had entered, our headlights going full blast.

By the time we had completed the circle the third time, the zoo sounded like a full fledged menagerie at a circus. The parrots were skuawking, the monkeys chattering, the lions roaring, and the bears and kangaroos were scampering for cover. We finally gained the driveway again by the same route we had entered, and left the frightened inmates behind us as speedily as possible.

The next day, while telling our experience to friends, we were informed that a large sign hung at the side of the foot path which read: "$25 fine for driving an automobile on this foot path." We were glad there were no educated animals present to take our number.

Chicago Misses Find Roads Good in Trip to Miami

DRIVING an automobile from Chicago to Florida is not a hardship. Miss Natalie Newell and Miss Gladys Ulrey, Chicagoans, made the trip in thirteen days. They did no driving at night.

Following is the "log" of their tour:

Chicago to Indianapolis, 203 miles, was traveled on the Ade way, which is a good road all the way—is hard gravel and white stone. No detours. Left 6:30 a. m., arrived 5:30 p. m.

Indianapolis to Louisville, 135 miles. Dixie highway road—good road until about twenty-seven miles from Louisville, then rough but hard for nine miles. Rolling country; short, steep hills. Hard gravel and clay road all the way. Two detours were encountered—on account of paving, detour to Martinsville; the other detour on account of bridge out. Both detours fair, but hilly. Left 8 a. m., arrived 6 p. m.

Louisville to Cave City, Ky., eighty-nine miles. This is a half day's run for those wishing to take advantage of going through the Mammoth cave, which would be of great interest to most tourists. A rustic hotel is maintained right out at the cave, which is open practically all the year for tourists. The road is hard stone highway, rough in spots, but fair driving in all kinds of weather. Left 10:30 a. m., arrived at 3:30 p. m.

Cave City to Nashville, 112 miles. Dixie highway road all the way—rough cobble stones for twenty-five miles out of Cave City. Stony to Russellville, then good road all the way to Nashville. Left 10 a. m., arrived 5 p. m.

Nashville to Huntsville, Ala., 113 miles. Dixie highway to Shelbyville, Jackson highway to Huntsville. Hard pike all the way. Two long climbs, fair driving. Left 9:45 a. m., arrived at 4:45 p. m.

Huntsville to Gadsden, Ala., sixty-five miles. Road is fairly good to Woodville. Put on chains and test out engine for climb up and down Gunter's mountain. Ascent steep and muddy, full of holes and rock ledges. Impassable if rainy. Wait for two days of fair weather before crossing. Mule team to help over top. Descent steep and irregular. Cross gasoline ferry at Guntersville. Long winding grade up Sand mountain—mud hole at top—watch for track around. Road good into Attala and from there to Gadsden. Left 9:30 a. m., arrived 6:30 p. m.

Gadsden to Atlanta, via Rome, Ga., 135 miles. Pike all the way. Red clay road—chains necessary if wet. Follow telephone poles all the way. Rolling country. Left 9:30 a. m., arrived 6:00 p. m.

Atlanta to Macon, Ga., ninety-five miles. Red sand and clay road all the way—use chains if wet. Hilly country. Left 9:30 a. m., arrived 4:30 p. m.

Macon to Waycross, 175 miles. Good hard sand and clay road all the way. Leave Dixie highway below Douglas to strike best route. Road leads through lonely timber land. No towns large enough to stop over night south of Douglas. Left 9:30 a. m., arrived at 5:30 p. m.

Waycross to Jacksonville, seventy-nine miles. Fair road for ten miles out of Waycross, then forty miles of deep sand and ruts; hard riding. Detour off Dixie highway where road is under construction just below Andrews, Fla., at which place take right fork, at Jacksonville hotel mileage sign. Strike fine shell and brick road twenty miles outside of Jacksonville.

Jacksonville to Ormond, Florida, 114 miles. Good road until about twenty miles outside of Ormond; sand for three miles, then good road to Ormond. Road leads through St. Augustine and driving time allows two hours in this city.

Ormond to West Palm Beach, 202 miles. Good road all the way, mostly macadam. Beautiful scenery along the Indian river through large orange and grape fruit grove.

West Palm Beach to Miami, a distance of seventy miles. Boulevard macadam all the way; fast driving time.

THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA
Furnishes Accurate Knowledge
On Every Subject Under the Sun

The World's Greatest Authority

THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA contains what is probably the best and most reliable information written by the greatest experts on practically every subject known to the human mind. No matter what subject you are interested in, no matter what subject your family or your children are interested in, no matter what subject comes up in your daily papers or your books, you will find that the Britannica gives the most comprehensive information on that subject in its 44,000,000 words. Every phase of a subject is covered. Even the smallest, most obscure information is here in the Britannica, as well as the articles on the great general subjects.

When you read an article in the Encyclopaedia Britannica you feel confident that the information you are obtaining is reliable, for the Britannica was written by the wisest minds of the day, each a specialist in the particular subject upon which he has furnished an article for the Britannica. These writers are either professors in the great institutions of learning in our country and other countries, or are scientific and professional men and women who, by their superior intelligence and research, have acquired far advanced knowledge of their subjects, or, again, they are the great workers of the world—merchants, financiers and practical artisans—who have in many cases achieved startling success in their particular lines of work. They write in a clear, concise manner which every member of your family can understand. You will be surprised how interesting and fascinating are the articles in the Britannica, and you will have many hours of profit and pleasure from a set of this great work.

We are now in a period of reconstruction in America as well as Europe. We must reconstruct and modify our industrial, social and political life to meet the new conditions as a result of the war.

The gravest questions that ever confronted a nation must now be met, and you will have to help settle these questions as a citizen of a democracy. For example: Shall we retain our high tariff or shall we operate on a free trade basis? Shall we wipe out our enormous national debt in one or two generations or shall we extend it over a comparatively long period? Shall we adopt universal training or maintain a large standing army? Shall we place under permanent Federal control the railroads, telephone, telegraph and express companies or shall we keep them under private ownership? Shall this nation become more autocratic or tend toward Socialism? What will mean the greatest prosperity and happiness to the people?

These questions deeply concern you. A citizen today who is informed and is able to talk intelligently on problems of national importance will be sought out for his advice, and he is certain to play a large part in the solution of these questions.

There is no work that will give you the amount of reliable, accurate information so readily accessible as the great Encyclopaedia Britannica. The Britannica for a century and a half has been the basis of the reading, the very foundation of the knowledge on which the leading men, the statesmen of each generation have based their judgment for the solution of the national problems of their day. You, as a citizen of this great nation, living in the day of the greatest crisis of its history, should do no less than put yourself in a position adequately to answer and pass intelligent judgment on the questions that are so vital to the country and the happiness and welfare of its people.

Give Your Child a Fair Chance in the World

Who are the men and women in each generation who have stood head and shoulders above their fellow men and who have won the most notable success? They are the men and women who, as children, have educated themselves beyond the station to which they were born. Abraham Lincoln was the best educated lawyer in his town, and he continued throughout his life probably the best posted man in his generation, because he read and read and read. You insist that your child has brains, but you should help that child develop its brains, and give him every advantage possible within your means, so that when he becomes ready to go out to do his work in the world, he is not handicapped by lack of education. Your son or daughter may be handicapped by lack of money, but no educated man or woman considers the lack of money a serious handicap. What he or she does fear, however, and rightly, is the lack of education. Education is the path that leads to achievement, to a larger life and to greater success. Put in your child's hands the Encyclopaedia Britannica, the world's storehouse of knowledge, which has been the guide to the education of millions of men and women. It will inspire your child to learn, and it will furnish him with a great teacher on many thousands of subjects.

Getting the Most from Your Tires Highly Important

Keep Pressure at Right Poundage and Keep Tread Mended.

BY HIGH SPEED.

IT is important at the present time for every motor car owner to get the utmost mileage from his tires. The situation today in the tire field is that, while there is plenty of rubber, the cotton supply is short, and only by economy can it be made to meet the needs of the tire makers.

There is only one type of cotton, long staple, that is fit to use in making tires. The supply of this is limited and there is barely enough to go around. If the motorists of America are wasteful there may not be enough to give every one all the tires he really needs, and, besides, prices are bound to go up.

The two rules that must be observed to get maximum mileage from tires are, first, to keep the pressure up to the poundage recommended by the manufacturer for that particular size. The second rule is to keep the tread of the tire uncut and unbroken; that is to say, mend all cuts or abrasions as fast as they occur, so that water, sand, etc., may not gain entrance to destroy the tire prematurely.

The tire is composed of two elements, the tread and the carcass, which latter is the fabric base upon which the rubber tread is laid. The tread is merely the protective layer put on to protect the carcass. When the tread is worn off, so that the fabric base shows through, the latter is no longer protected and quick disintegration follows.

When the tread of a tire is worn through at any point for a short distance a section may be vulcanized in to save the rest of the tire which is still useful. If the tread is worn off, so that long stretches of the carcass show through, a retread job is the obvious cure.

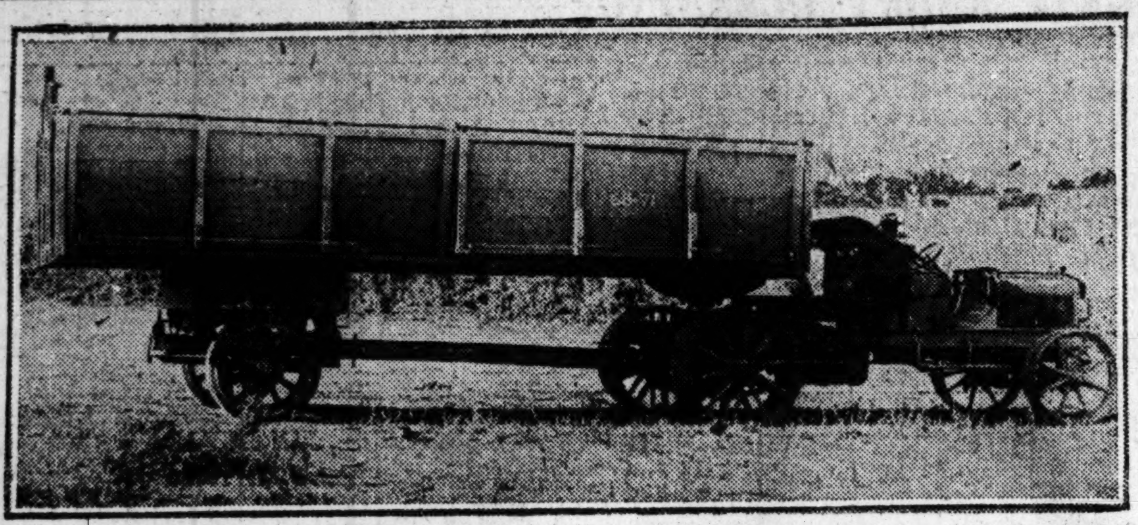
Now, retreading is something that the car owner should understand or he is likely to make costly mistakes. If the carcass is worn through in spots—that is, if the canvas base has actually begun to go, a retread is not a satisfactory solution. To get a retread that pays dividends in added mileage the carcass of the tire must be undamaged.

There are many retread concerns in business today which will retread anything in the form of a tire that is brought to them. If the canvas carcass is partly worn through these shysters will strip off a couple of layers of the fabric until they have obtained a smooth surface, and then they will lay a new tread on that. But in so doing they have weakened the whole structure of the tire, so that after a brief added service it will go completely to pieces.

On the other hand, there are honest and reliable retreading concerns which will refuse to retread a carcass unless it is sound and gives every promise of yielding mileage to repay the owner for his expenditure. The thing to look out for in having retread work done is the reputation of the concern to be patronized. Retreading is perfectly feasible and will return dividends in extra service if the owner of the tire is wise enough to deal with a reliable retread concern.

Some owners believe in retreading over an old tread. This is all very well if the original tread is smooth, but if it is not the retread will wear unevenly and in deep depresions that rob it of much of its mileage possibilities.

In cases where the tread is worn off in spots and the carcass has started to go, so that retreading is not to be advised, an inner liner will give additional life to the dying tire. This is simply a strip of fabric similar to the base of the tire and placed between the tube and the casing. Some inner linings have two and others three plies. It is a good plan to carry a liner or two on the car in case of accident, as a well made liner will hold in the air, even though there is little bracing from the tire.



A "MOTOR FREIGHT CAR"—This type of trailer, the largest in the world, is used in California for transporting sugar beets from the fields to the sugar mills. Loading and unloading are extremely simple despite the heavy cargo carried.

Questions and Answers

By High Speed

I have been having a lot of trouble from tire wear on the front wheels. The rear tires seem to be all right, but the tires I now have on front are almost worn out, and yet they have only traveled 1,500 miles. What is the trouble? K. R. D., Chicago.

Almost certainly your trouble is due to misalignment of the front wheels. Have this checked up by your garage, if you are not able to do it yourself.

The brake pedal of my car keeps jumping up and down, even when I am not touching it. The car is new and I cannot understand how such a trouble as this could have developed so soon.—L. F., Glencoe, Ill.

The car evidently has what is known as Hotchkiss drive, and the rear axle movement is transmitted through the brake connections to the pedal. Brake movement may be characteristic of any car using this method of propulsion.

Camber refers to the tilting of the front wheels outwardly, so that they are closer together at the bottom than at the top. Similarly, the term "gather" refers to the bringing together of the front portion of each wheel, so that the wheels are closer in front than in the rear.

I would like to know if boiled water could take the place of distilled water for filling a storage battery, or is it necessary to have condensed steam?

E. L. B., Forest Park, Ill.

Boiled water will not take the place of distilled water for filling the storage battery. Distilled water or condensed steam should always be used. Boiling the water does not remove any materials which may be held in chemical solution.

I am having a lot of trouble with my battery. I do a lot of running at night and I also make a number of stops. To save my life I cannot keep my battery up to charges. Can you suggest how to remedy the trouble?

J. A. J., Chicago.

Take the battery to the nearest service station and have them adjust the charging rate. Do not try to make the adjustment yourself. If this does not serve, it probably means that you will have to get a larger generator or have the battery charged from an outside source at stated intervals.

"Tonnage Rating" Discarded for Packard Trucks

Packard is announcing a new method of rating—probably fairer to the truck; and certainly more advantageous to the purchaser. A Packard Truck is selected and sold to fit its individual work, with all the working conditions in mind.

IN every line of business there grow up certain practices—"customs of the trade."

Fifteen years ago a truck was rated on its capacity to haul its load and stand the racket of the average bumpy road of that day; taking the ruts, holes and hills as they came. Good roads now branch out in every direction.

Tonnage rating, as commonly understood, has come to mean simply the capacity of a truck to handle its rated load under averaged conditions.

There are three factors always to be considered in assigning a truck to its work—Power needed to haul the load—Stamina needed to stand up under the load—Working conditions.

"Ton rating" puts emphasis on the first—hopes for luck on the second—and ignores the third completely.

Packard Transportation Engineering today assigns a truck to its work with all three factors in plain sight.

Packard rating has always been made to cover the worst working conditions rather than the best—and its reserve power calculated for the exception rather than the rule.

By doing away with the ton rating, the Packard Company believes that it can guarantee the purchaser a still higher percentage of the high reserve built into the Packard Truck.

Hereafter each Packard Truck will be designated by Size and Model. Each truck will bear a plate stamped with the name of the purchaser and the duty for which the truck is sold.

The rating will be made on the ground, for the job, by the local Packard engineer. The Packard warranty will be in force, protecting the user as in the past.

However convenient for selling purposes the "tonnage rating" classification may be for trucks which are bought "over the counter"—it certainly is obsolete for Packard.

Packard is selling transportation.

The Transportation Expert at your local Packard Branch or dealer will recommend you a truck for what it will do in your individual business and with all your actual conditions known as the result of careful study.

Every man who ever sawed a board knows it takes more muscle to get through a knot than through the clear.

Three tons of merchandise on a wagon is a one-horse load on a good level macadam road. On gravel it is a two-horse load. On dirt it takes five horses to pull it. In mud it takes ten.

Your locomotive rated to haul fourteen Pullmans in Chicago will deliver the same power to the drawbar in Spokane. But the mountain grades cut the actual hauling power in half.

Why should the motor truck which can haul three tons of coal over the hills of Pittsburgh be limited to the same "ton rating" in level Chicago?

Enemy Drivers to Be Allowed to Enter U. S. Races?

Discussion Rife About Possible Effect on Public Sentiment.

BY STUART D. TREGO.

AN interesting topic of discussion has arisen among fans regarding the propriety of admitting the entry of foreign drivers to races in the United States from countries with which this country is still officially at war. Officials of the Hoosier classic to be held at Indianapolis on Memorial day are in a quandary concerning the possible outcome if they permit German and Austrian teams to compete. Guarded inquiries have been received from these two countries as to the public sentiment that would greet the entry of Mercedes and Austro-Daimler teams, respectively, in the sweepstakes.

There is little or no doubt that such teams, if permitted to enter, would be a great drawing card and would stimulate their opponents to the greatest efforts necessary to defeat them. On the other hand, what might be the possible outcome should one of the representatives of these erstwhile autocratic powers win? How would this be regarded by the public here as well as in other countries who will be represented?

It is these mooted questions that are perplexing the Indianapolis officials, and they invite expressions of opinion on the subject from sporting writers and racing fans. It has even been suggested that such a victory might bring personal harm to the Teutonic contenders and lead to violent demonstrations. Certainly nothing more unpopular could occur, and a definite insight into public sentiment is desired before a decision is made as to the advisability of inviting these teams to attend.

A Mercedes victory in the French grand prix in 1908 so wounded French pride as to cause the abandonment of that famous contest for the ensuing four years. In 1914 another crushing defeat was administered to France, Mercedes again capturing the historic event, and this time making a clean sweep of all first three places.

This latter feat was accomplished by cars equipped with aviation engines of the same type that later went into Taubes, Fokkers, and Gothas, so well known in the recent world conflict. This victory further increased Germany's already swollen pride, and seemed to it convincing proof that it led all the great powers in the field of aviation efficiency. It was only a short time later that the great war broke out.

It is the expressed desire of many followers of racing events that these teams be permitted to make entry, and it is blieved by these that a sportsmanlike attitude will be assumed by the public in general regarding the reentry into international events of sportsmen of the central powers.

When It Isn't "Adjustable"

Where no means of adjusting the valve clearance of an engine is provided, as in the case of many of the older models particularly, there is a simple way of getting the same result. This involves slipping one or more fiber of metal disks of sufficient thickness to take up excessive play between the bottom of the valve stem and the push rod, a metal retainer made from sheet metal being used to keep them in place.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

Well, It's One Way.

The explosion of the Du Pont powder mill at Uniontown, Pa., recently, pulled a strange prank. At the home of Attorney H. K. MacQuarrie, in South Uniontown, the entire family was awakened when the powder mill let go and the sound of shattered glass told a story of broken windows as the reverberations of the jolt died away. Then a strange noise was heard. It sounded like the buzzing of a billion bees. Dressing quickly and hurrying out to his garage Mr. MacQuarrie found the engine of his automobile had started and was humming merrily. This proved to be the most novel vagary turned up in the explosion aftermath.

This Larger Oakland Blends Power, Size, Strength, Economy

An outworking on a larger scale of all those engineering principles demonstrated with signal success by previous Oakland Sensible Sixes now is offered in Model 34-C, the result of Oakland development necessarily withheld during the three wartime years.

Retaining in full the traditional Oakland combination of high power plus low cost of ownership, operation and maintenance, it now adds to this combination with a size and brute strength designed for the most intense needs of peace years.

A longer wheelbase, deeper frame with heavier cross members, longer, heavier front springs, heavier front axle and some 30 additional advancements further mark it as a car that should be considered whenever a car is to be purchased.

With the production of this Model 34-C, still scientifically light in total weight, Oakland engineers clearly maintain their position in the forefront of the industry and their actual leadership in those essentials of design most closely related to motor car ability and economy.

Thrift—18 to 25 miles on a gallon and 8,000 to 12,000 miles on tires.

Continuing This Progress in Closed Cars

The extreme comfort, convenience and reliability of the Oakland Sensible Six four door Sedan and the Coupe, mounted on the larger, rugged 34-C chassis, now are given an even greater appeal than has established them so firmly in the ownership of careful judges of motor cars.

Motor Car Performance vs. Claim

Demonstrations of performance of the New Series Marmon 34 in tests witnessed by J. Edward Schipper, Technical Editor Class Journal Company, Publishers of Automobile Trade Papers, and Chester S. Ricker, M. E., well known automobile technical writer. We present here condensed tables of the results. Please note that actual facts and figures take the place of prettily phrased claims.

PERFORMANCE

Car with 4 to 1 gear ratio.

Acceleration 10 to 50 m.p.h. in high gear, 15.8 seconds. Half mile at average speed of 65.7 m.p.h. Timed with a stop watch.

Run in high gear at walking speed for about 100 yards.

Hill climbing in high gear, starting 5 m.p.h. at bottom; speed at 1000 ft. (8.16% grade) 27 m.p.h.; speed at 1775 ft. (6.14% grade) 43 m.p.h.

Starting 10 m.p.h. at bottom; speed at 1000 ft. (8.16% grade) 30 m.p.h.; speed at 1775 ft. 6.14% grade) 47 m.p.h.

PERFORMANCE

Car with 3.75 to 1 gear ratio.

Acceleration 10 to 50 m.p.h. in high gear, 18.8 seconds. Half mile at average speed of 69.75 m.p.h. Timed with a stop watch.

Run in high gear at walking speed for about 100 yards.

Hill climbing in high gear starting 5 m.p.h. at bottom; speed at 1000 ft. (8.16% grade) 24 m.p.h.; speed at 1775 ft. (6.14% grade) 40 m.p.h.

Starting 10 m.p.h. at bottom; speed at 1000 ft. (8.16% grade) 26 m.p.h.; speed at 1775 ft. (6.14% grade) 43 m.p.h.

Conditions of the Tests

For these tests two cars were used. Both were standard seven-passenger touring cars completely equipped with spare wheel and tire, gas, oil and water compartments filled, full tool equipment. Both had top and windshield up.

Each car was driven by the same man in all tests—carrying one observer. The carburetor adjustment in each car was the same throughout. One car had 3.75 to 1 gear ratio, the other 4 to 1 gear ratio—both are standard gear ratios. Without passengers, but with full equipment, one car weighed 3880 pounds, the other 3890.

The acceleration and high and low speed tests were made on a brick speedway—on both sides of the track. Hill climbing tests were made on an ordinary gravel country road, with the roadbed in average condition. A survey of the road shows a straight rise for about 1000 feet with a grade of 8.16% and grade of 6.14% for the entire length of 1775 feet. The rise starts exactly at the bottom of the hill, and the speed at bottom, 1000 foot point and top of hill were taken from the speedometer. The tests were all made under good weather conditions and no perceptible wind.

See the New Series Marmon 34 with High Efficiency Motor—built to new standards learned in Liberty airplane motor building. A ride will show you the extraordinary ability of this new car. We shall be glad to arrange a demonstration.

'Sold' Signs Show Appreciation of Artists' Exhibit

By Eleanor Jewett.

A vast plain lost in velvety dusk
  That falls dew-fashion down from heaven,
And a velvet sky where the silver moon
  Peers through the gossamer clouds wind-driven—
A field where fairy rings are found
  And phantom souls walk all unshriven.

Through the heart of the plain a river winds
  Like the silver chord of a symphony
Struck soft across the golden bars
  Of a harp played for Eurydice—
Sweet sings the river down through the night
  Where the stars shine into a waiting sea.

Night! You vast, blind, purple thing—
  A goddess holding the world in hand—
A meeting of lovers—a nightingale—
  Which of your dreams can we understand?
Still over the plain the moon rides high,
  And we know we never will understand.

IT is always to us an occasion of poignant joy when we realize that the pictures we appreciate are appreciated by a generous public, too. This undoubtedly is the case with the paintings shown in the exhibition of Chicago artists at the Art institute—an exhibition which, by the way, closes on Wednesday. If proof were needed of this appreciation, it could be found in the many "sold" signs, that seem almost to dignify, such is the power of the symbol of money, the canvases that they adorn.

This last sentence leads to what one might almost term an anecdote. It happened that two of the pictures by Jessie Arms Botke—one the prize picture, "The Break in the Fence" and the other "In the Pine Forest"—were bought directly the show opened. They were hung in an inside room. Two other pictures by the same artist hung in the first gallery, and for days and days no one seemed able to summon up enough confidence in his own taste to inquire their price. Numbers of people asked if the pictures with the "sold" sign were really sold, but balked at the fresh venture of acquiring the two in the first room for their own. It was rather amusing, this lack of self-confidence. Finally, however, the truth dawned on some one that neither the position which a painting holds nor the "sold" sign upon its frame need be the criterion of its worth, so this brave some one dared buy one of the two in the first gallery—"Ducks"—and so now owns an exceedingly representative example of Mrs. Botke's work.

It is hard to understand the viewpoint of many persons. They are so cowardly in matters of taste. They seem not able to trust their own judgment. They feel obliged to wait for some one else to mark the true path in the jungle of art. As soon as the trail is blazed, an occurrence generally signaled by the little word "sold" appearing on the frame, they wish at once to follow. But, unfortunately, the blazing of the trail means also the closing of it.

We need more people who are sure of themselves, sure of what they like and why they like it, and who are ready to back their opinion with money, in Chicago. We need them badly. We need them in order to keep works of art in Chicago, and to hold the artists to Chicago. Altogether too many men and women are deserting the city of their birth and training for the east, where their efforts are appreciated. Did you ever stop to think of the painters, really famous—if one can apply the adjective to a living artist—who coming originally from Chicago are making their homes in New York?

There are some names I can give you. For instance, there are Louis Betts, a painter of portraits, a man considered the second greatest portrait painter in the country, ranking next to Sargent; Gardner Symonds, Frederic Clay Bartlett, Wilson Irvine, Mazzanovitch, Lawton Parker, George Grey Barnard—the sculptor. Undoubtedly there are others. Undoubtedly there will be many more, unless Chicago can keep them here by the obvious method of appreciating their work—and buying it.

That Chicago people are waking to a sense of responsibility in this direction seems evident in the results shown at the present exhibit at the Art institute, an exhibit which closes, as I have mentioned above, this week. Thirty-six works of art have been sold from the exhibit. Four of these are sculpture and the others paintings. This is a marked improvement over the sales in the annual oil exhibit held at the institute recently, in which sixteen paintings were sold. Yet that last number was considerably over the average for the last three years.

I find these data given in the February bulletin of the institute: "The sales in the one man exhibitions have been unusually large. During the annual American exhibition the sales amounted to over $7,000, not including the purchases made by the friends of American art. From Nov. 6 to Dec. 31, 1919, artists received $25,700 from sales of their works at the Art institute."

That sounds encouraging—but we can do better.

In this connection, mention might be made of the fact that the sale of the R. Hall McCormick collection of paintings is going to be held in New York City. Isn't it rather a reflection on Chicago and the middle west that to bring their true value pictures must be sold in New York? If our private collections must be sold, why can they not be sold here? Why is there not a fund available either to the city or the Art institute making it possible for masterpieces in art to be acquired by the city and hung in the institute? We boast, and justly, that our museum has the greatest number of visitors of any in the country, possibly of any of its size in the world. Why can we not give these visitors the best there is to offer?

The John Barton Payne collection went to Virginia. The McCormick collection is going to New York. The Chauncey Blair collection is being dispersed, going probably, the most of it, to New York.

Wake up, Chicago! Why have a city beautiful, and then allow the beauties of your city to be taken from you?

All of this seems far removed from the thought with which I first started, the thought that induced the verses which head an article that, I see, has developed into a violent bit of paint propaganda. But there is a connecting link, inasmuch as the picture to which the verse refers is seen in the Chicago artists' exhibit. It is "Night," by Rudolph F. Ingerle.

There are many pictures in the exhibit to which I have not yet had time to point attention. Probably, though, by now they have spoken for themselves. It is just as well. And the thought relieves me of responsibility. For fear lest some chance accusation of neglect assail me, however, I will advise again that the exhibition in its entirety is pleasing, and well worth repeated visits.

A number of interesting events are scheduled for March. Unfortunately, the exhibition to which I had been looking forward with the greatest interest, that of the "one price" pictures, is not to be given. Some outside force has refused permission. It seems the more unfortunate, because any new venture, such as this would have been gives a fresh angle to art, and a sort of fillip to the, sometimes, jaded powers of a critic's pen.

There will, however, be hung at the institute an exhibit of paintings by Adam Emory Albright, the American Painters, Sculptors, and Engravers' exhibition, paintings by John C. Johansen, and the tenth annual exhibition of etchings under the management of the Chicago Society of Etchers.

In the print room will be shown etchings of flowers by Katharine Cameron, etchings and sanguine drawings by Arthur W. Heintzelman, and prints from the Helen Hyde collection.

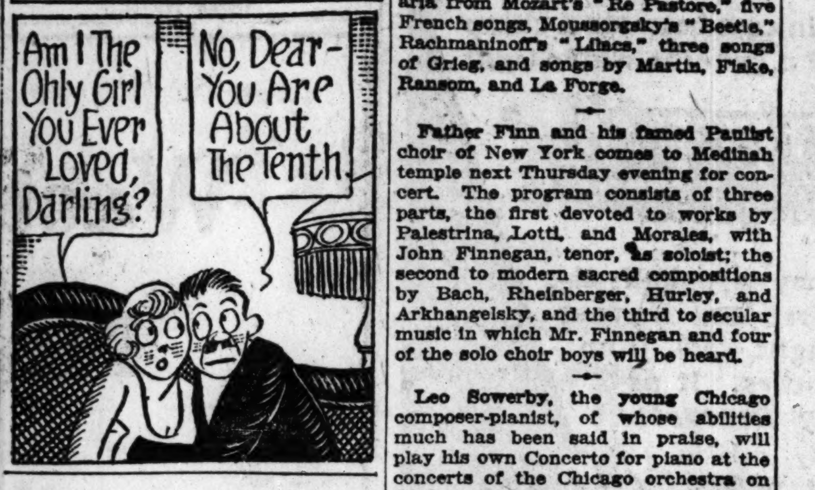
If We Couldn't Tell a Lie



Am I The Ohly Girl You Ever Loved, Darling?
No, Dear- You Are About The Tenth.

PICKWICK VAPORS

By Guy F. Lee

As I sat with Dickens in my lap I fell into a doze,
And this illusion joyful from the firelight arose:

I'm loafin' 'ere in Lunnon in the George and Vulture pub,
And I'm 'appy as a scarecrow for there's beer 'ere by the tub;
And me and Old Man Weller now and then lets out a reef
As we downs our ale and porter and Cold
Boiled
Beef.

I've 'ad my share of champagne, and fancy dishes, too,
And I ain't goin' to deny that in a pinch they'll do;
But when I wants to celebrate, this diet I hold chief:
A pot of ale and porter and Cold
Boiled
Beef.

You can 'ave your frizzled froglegs and your patty de foi grass,
Likewise your filly mignon and your bloomin' demy tass;
But for real eats and beverage that banish every grief
Give me my ale and porter and Cold
Boiled
Beef.

I ain't wise on the Promised Land—about it I'm in doubt;
They tell me it's a chilly place all bound around by drought;
But my idee of heaven is as follows, to be brief:
A cozy inn, and 'arf and 'arf, and Cold
Boiled
Beef.

SEE THE DO-IT-ALL TRACTOR

IT PLOWS A TEN INCH FURROW ITS LEVEL WHEN PLOWING

"DO-IT-ALL" TRACTORS HAVE ADJUSTABLE BULL WHEELS. The tractor is level in plowing, it is level when working on a side hill. Both bearings are properly lubricated, the tractor is not tipped sideways taking the load on the edge of the bull wheels but clear across the face. The "DO-IT-ALL" weighs over 900 lbs., plows a 10-inch furrow in sod or stubble. For the man with a small farm or country home the "DO-IT-ALL" presents possibilities never before thought of. They are what their name implies, a "DO IT ALL," doing everything, including 6-H. P. for belt work and hauling loads. On the big farm it will help out the big tractor; they do many jobs that the big tractor is used for, thus saving wear and tear on a more expensive tool. Spring work is approaching, we have an immense factory but our sales are also immense. To make sure of your tractor you must order early. Back of the "DO-IT-ALL" is 25 years of manufacturing experience and it is protected by basic patents. Further details secured by asking for Catalog 31.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Keep Permanent Record of Men in War Service

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot

"THE WAR RECORD OF OUR PARISH" is the title of a campaign being directed by the New World to stimulate interest in the compilation of the record for every Roman Catholic parish in the archdiocese of Chicago. The plan was originated by the National Catholic War council and is being followed throughout the country.

The eighth grade pupils of each parochial school are asked to enter compositions on the subject of the campaign, the prize winner of which will be published in the New World with the pictures of the hero dead of the parish. This will become a "Hall of Fame" for the service men of the Roman Catholic church in Chicago.

Th regulations of the contest are as follows:

Compositions to be less than 500 words. Individual war service records extra on the proper cards furnished free on application at the New World office, 1457 McCormick building.

Four or more compositions to be furnished by each school. A prize to the school. A prize to the child whose essay is selected by the New World literary editor. No contest between the various schools.

Compositions to be turned in as soon as possible. Publication to begin at once, positively in the order received at this office.

Pictures of those who died in the service to be turned in only by the parish in which the boys lived at time of entering service, and only by those in that parish authorized to do so. None others received. Pictures returned safely to the school authorities.

A complete file of the New World containing the compositions and pictures will be placed in the archives of the records committee, National Catholic war council; at Washington.

All compositions to be numbered, no names attached. Winning number will be announced to the superior of each school with date of publication in the New World.

THE REV. F. E. R. MILLER'

The Rev. Frank E. R. Miller is the new pastor of the new-old First Baptist church. The oldest of its denomination in the city, the church has recently moved into its new home on Drexel boulevard and Fiftieth street. For over a year the church has been without a pastor.

Mr. Miller comes to First church after several years' varied experience in the ministry. His last charge was the Baptist church at Elgin, where he carried on a successful work.

Next month he will conduct a catechetical class of instruction in Christian doctrine for boys and girls in preparation for church membership. The Sunday school is nearing the 500 mark—today is set for the "500 day," when that attendance is looked for, as well as an offering of $250 for additional equipment for the school. The young men's Bible class under the direction of H. H. Van Meter has doubled since the church moved to its new home.

The conference of "Protestant Evangelical pastors" of Illinois under the auspices of the interchurch world movement will be held in Orchestra hall March 8-10. Its purpose is to present to Protestant clergymen the results of the survey and budget made at the world survey conference recently held in Atlantic City. Railroad fare of ministers who come will be paid by the movement where necessary. Similar conferences are being held in each state.

Today is Chicago Church Federation Sunday for those churches coöperating in this organization. The work of the federation will be presented in the churches in the morning and an offering for its work will be taken up. In the evening twenty community gatherings will be held in different parts of the city.

The committee on loop Lenten services of the Missouri Synod Lutheran conference consists of the Rev. E. Lams, pastor of Christ church, Oak Park; the Rev. E. Hazerodt, Faith Lutheran church; the Rev. Karl Schlerf, Bethany church, and the Rev. Henry Kowert, First St. Paul's church. The services will be held during Holy week in the Woods theater.

The City Missionary, published in the interests of missions by the Chicago Lutheran pastoral conference, the first number of which appeared this month, and the Presbyterian Torch, published by the church extension board of the Presbyterian church, in a like strain, are two new general publications which will interest their respective constituencies.

Slams of Life

by J. P. McEvoy

LEAP YEAR

As down the avenue I flee
These hectic days I always see
The predatory species there,
The species sometimes known as "fair."
And in each sparkling, dancing eye
The ardor of the chase I spy,
And musing then I know somehow
That Leap Year is among us now.

The males all wear a look of care,
A timid, baffled, hunted stare,
Excepting those who, like to me,
From such anxieties are free,
Though pulchritudinous and gay
They need not worry, no, not they,
Nor dread the Leap Year maiden's hook,
For they've been took, for they've been took.

But O, 'tis pitiful to gaze
Upon the single male these days:
He twists and doubles on the track,
But cannot shake the baying pack,
And all his poor untutored tricks
To dodge his awful fate are nix,
No sanctuary may avail
To shield the poor old hunted male.

As down the avenue I flee
These hectic days I always see
The predatory species there,
The species sometimes known as "fair"
But though they clever be and sleek
I'm vaccinated, so to speak,
I do not fear the Leap Year hook,
For I've been took, yes, I've been took.

Vaudeville Wit

Hall and Shapiro:

"What's the matter, Oswald?"

"As we stood on the corner just now why did you stare at that horse?"

"I was looking at his tail."

"Didn't you ever see a horse's tail before?"

"No; always behind."

"You were a queer one even at school; always at the bottom of the class."

"That didn't make any difference; they taught the same at both ends."

"Do you recall the handsome lady teacher?"

"Indeed I do."

"Remember the time she said she would kiss the boy who was first at school next morning?"

"Of course I remember."

"I was there at 8 the next morning."

"I sat on the fence all night."

When Prices Begin to Drop, with costs still high, the real test of Salesmanship and of all-round business ability will leave the strong still more strongly intrenched, and the weak walking the streets—jobless

THE "peak" of feverish prosperity, easy money and high wages has been passed, and American business will soon be back again to a condition approaching the old pre-war competition on the basis of service.

With four million American soldiers demobilized and looking for their old jobs—or better ones; and with Europe beginning to produce for herself, any man possessing the slightest powers of analysis must see that the inflated wage scale which has tempted us all into careless habits of thought and wasteful habits of living must soon give way to an era in which true values of both commodities and human service will govern prices paid.

Already, thoughtful employers are beginning to prepare for the inevitable readjustment. And every employee is even now under scrutiny, as to the quantity and quality of service he or she is rendering. Your Ability, Reliability, Endurance and Action are being studied by your Superior—anxiously; yes, with a heart full of pity for the ones who will not be able to measure up to the test when the time comes, and must be set adrift.

History repeats itself. Every war has been followed by a period of easy money and high prices, in which a thoughtless majority of workers allowed their mental muscles to grow flabby and their efficiency to let down.

Lowered efficiency and violation of all laws of industry and thrift brought on an inevitable reaction, in which the business pendulum swung too far the other way.

And just as the "furnace test" in those periods of depression developed the true strength of the men and women who were found to be stronger than adversity, so it will be again.

Advice to Every Employee

Whether you are in active selling work or in any other department of trade or industry, it is your duty to prepare yourself now for advancement and promotion, when the time comes that you and your associates will be weighed in the balance. For there will be no standing still when the time of readjustment comes. Beginning at the top, the weak "players" in the business "team" will be discarded and the strong moved up to fill their places. Only "picked" men and women will be retained to carry your house to a "Victory-Against-Odds" which only strong, alert, trained, resourceful, right-thinking men and women can ever hope to win.

Train in the Sheldon Mental Gym

You know how athletes and fighters "train" for months before the contest. Your training for your "fight" is easier than that—and vastly more worth-while. For the SHELDON COURSE builds strength of character; sharpens mental faculties; teaches how to strengthen yourself, so that you may be equal to any test, ready to meet any crisis with a calm confidence that smiles at difficulties and then surmounts them. The Sheldon Course mastered and applied, will not only train salesmen and saleswomen to sell more goods at better prices, but it will help every worker to sell his own services on better terms—no matter what his task.

It is not a mass of theory but the applied experience of thousands of succesful men and women, an exact science created by a master mind.

It Will Help You Organize Yourself

You know what organization accomplishes—in war, in religion, in business—in every human activity.

A mob of a thousand armed men—unorganized—is easily put to flight by a company of a hundred trained, organized soldiers.

Though you may not realize it, you have, within you, powers and capabilities, which, organized and correlated, will make you worth double, triple, ten-fold your present salary—right where you are.

Sheldon, Himself, at the Head

Arthur Frederick Sheldon is world-famous as the man who made Business a Science.

He is the founder, organizer and active head of THE SHELDON SCHOOL, which is the largest educational institution in the world devoted to the giving of this or any other special branch of training.

Chambers of Commerce, Rotary Clubs, Universities, and bodies of executives and thinkers all over the country are glad to avail themselves of the opportunity to hear this eloquent "Business Philosopher" expound and analyze the serious problems of the times and point out safe and logical solutions.

International Business Science Society—A New Feature

Mr. Sheldon looks upon the successful organization of the International Business Science Society as the crowning act of his life of Service to his fellowmen.

This Society brings together in one international bond of fellowship all Sheldon students and graduates—all over the world. Active Chapters and affiliations have already been formed in Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Columbus, Chicago, Rockford, Memphis, Minneapolis, Seattle, and other American cities, as well as in Wellington, New Zealand; Sydney, Australia; Cape Town, South Africa, and Toronto, Canada, for the exchange of ideas and the mass-consideration of the grave problems that confront both employers and employed.

And in this work it performs a function that neither capital alone, nor labor alone, can perform. For the membership is about equally divided between employers and employees; and, as such, occupies the sane middle ground of justice to all and special privilege to none.

Every Sheldon Student Becomes an Active Member of the International Business Science Society.

Take up the Sheldon Course, friend Worker, or friend Employer! You will not only enrich and strengthen and quicken your own mental powers, but will become automatically part of an international organization whose badge and membership card will open welcoming doors to you wherever you travel.

Start Now

Organize these powers of body, mind and heart; make them obey the promptings of your ambition, not spasmodically, hit-or-miss; but with a clear, concise, definite objective and a carefully planned and tested foothold for every step in your upward climb toward that objective.

The Sheldon Course will show you how to think and to work in a straight line toward the goal of your ambition; will enable you to analyze your work and yourself so as to eliminate waste of effort and time; will get you out of the fog of petty non-essentials and give you a clear vision of yourself in your relation to your associates and your opportunities.

Sheldon training goes beyond the technicalities of any one business, and gives you the ground work fundamentals that underlie success in all busy-ness—industrial or professional.

It is a logical, fascinating, inspiring course in MAN-BUILDING.

It develops correct thinking; makes you mentally sure footed; teaches character analysis, as applied both to yourself and to the men and women with whom you have to deal; trains and strengthens the faculty of remembering names, faces, facts, figures; gives you a new and better sense of values of everything and every person crossing your path.

To Success
Sheldon

Sheldon

For twenty years, tens of thousands of Sheldon-trained men and women have demonstrated the practical value of this work by their own success; and their experience and their testimony are your guarantee that this course will do as much for you as it did for them if you master and apply it as they did.

Resident and Correspondence Classes

Local general classes meet on different evenings in the week in Sheldon Hall; other Chicago classes hold their sessions in various parts of the city. Some of these are voluntary groups of "unattached" students, but most of them are bodies of employees of Industrial and Commercial Houses who are carrying out this work under the auspices and with the assistance of the management.

The Sheldon School supplies the unusual advantage of lecturers and instructors for all local classes; and under the inspiration of this personal instruction and the enthusiasm of class work, students have all the benefits of spare time study plus personal drill.

On the other hand, thousands of students dig out the course for themselves, in the quiet of their own homes, and they testify that we take good care of their needs purely by correspondence. The Sheldon text-books make everything clear. Every Lesson is followed by a Review. Every Lesson paper is carefully reviewed by our Examining Board, and their helpful comments and criticisms are an inspiration to the student.

What to Do—NOW

The reading of this page has created a desire in your mind to avail yourself of the advantages of Sheldon Instructions as well as membership in the International Business Science Society.

Here is how you can transform that desire into action, with greatest advantage to yourself:

1. If you work in Chicago or nearby suburbs, call at our offices any day and ask for the Sheldon Book—Business, the New Science—or come down any Monday evening and listen to one of our regular weekly Lectures in Sheldon Hall—admission free.
2. If connected with a firm large enough to furnish material for a local class, to be held at the company's place of business, under their auspices, ask us how to go about forming a "COMPANY" CLASS. Phone, call or write, giving details. Company classes can be organized anywhere; and if not too far distant from Chicago an Instructor will be assigned from Sheldon Headquarters.
3. Whatever your "angle," phone, call or write for a free sample copy of The Business Philosopher Magazine and for a free copy of that intensely interesting Book—Business, the New Science.

Few professions offer such splendid opportunities to young men and women as does Commercial Art.

We find it impossible to supply the demand made upon us for graduates of our school, and many of our students earn money through the sale of their drawings while they are studying.

Our methods are tried and reliable, and all instructors are conscientious and qualified.

If you are earning less than $50.00 per week and can read and write and are willing to study a few hours each week, you may fit yourself for this pleasant and good paying work.

This school is recommended by leading Art Managers, and others who employ artists. You may learn at home in your spare time or in our resident school, day or evening classes.

A young man we placed as shipping clerk at $125 phoned us, after being on the job sixty days, stating he was given charge of department at $200, and wanted a man for his old job at $125. IT IS UP TO YOU. We have dozens of wonderful opportunities for ambitious young fellows, and if we do not furnish an acceptable position WE DO NOT CHARGE A CENT. See us Monday.

Special to Farm Buyers.

North Judson is 75 miles from Chicago. Owing to my health I have been forced to put on the market my 1,160 acres of ground, worth $500 per acre, sacrificing it for $300 per acre rather than place it into tenants' hands or leave it lie idle. You can become an owner of 10 acres with but a little payment on ground and at harvest time you give me one-half of crops as payment on land until paid for. Records in North Judson will show that this ground has produced $400 per acre each year in the past three years. Here is a chance if any one is ready to grasp it. I will have the ground plowed for three years ready for seed. You can begin on this proposition with $1,000. You are buying direct from owner. I will pay one fare if you want to investigate land before signing contract. Write for details. EMRI SCONBECK, North Judson, Indiana. 107 W. Main-st.

Louisiana.

NEW PLAN.

Dairy farms, cattle, sheep, goat, and hog ranches of all sizes in the fine cutover lands of the rich states of Louisiana and Mississippi, contiguous to N. O. G. N. Ry., and carefully selected under expert advice with reference to flowing streams, ranch headquarters, feeding, herding, and breeding grounds, farming lands, and shipping facilities. Land at extremely low prices and payments extending over long period of years, so that payments per acre per year amount to little more than interest on purchase price and on ordinary leasing charge for grazing purposes, and yet at end of payments you own the land. Write Walter S. Ayers, Industrial Commissioner, N. O. G. N. Ry., 1060 McCormick Bldg., Chicago, Ill., for dependable information.

BUY A FARM IN OCONTO OR FOREST COUNTIES, WIS.

Pay $500 down on a 40 acre tract—use Home Lands, Credit System—take 5 years to get crops, paying good returns to cover clearing costs, living expenses, and to meet the first payment. Under our credit system we start you with building materials, a cow and calf, pigs and sheep, chickens and fruit trees, and small tools. No further payments—interest or principal—for 5 years.

Our proposition, together with honest, well applied energy, will yield you a living from the start, comfort as you progress, and security in the end.

If necessary, pay only $10 to $15 monthly, or $120 yearly, till $500 is paid, when you may have the same privileges and equipment as under our $500 Down Plan.

The Kennan loam soil in our cutover lands is rich and productive, ideal for crops with a ready and accessible market. Modern railroad towns, schools, and social centers within convenient distance. Your neighbors will be the best American citizens, who have come to us with the same high references as yourself.

We sell only Good Soil, graded by our expert agriculturalist, and priced on its merits at $20 to $30 an acre. Grazing lands sell for $8 to $15 an acre. We do not offer for sale swamp or sand, unfit for agriculture.

We are the land department of three big lumber companies—dividing up their immense tracts into 40, 80 and 160 acre farms. Every statement we make may be referred to the Wisconsin State Dept. of Agriculture. Ask any bank about our integrity.

Write or call for interesting literature.

AUTHORITY!

The following is taken from the Saturday Evening Post, Feb. 7, 1920:

"Almost before you realize it, spring and the touring season will be here. And with it the greatest shortage of motor cars ever known. That is now an absolute certainty. Those in position to know estimate that the production will fall short of the demand by fully one million cars. And prices—goodness knows where they will have to go. It is predicted that used cars of standard makes will in many instances command higher prices than they originally cost."

THERE IS NO TIME TO LOSE.

We have the finest stock of high grade used cars of standard makes in the United States.

Our reputation for giving the purchaser honest value in good, serviceable cars is known throughout the trade.

Come down today, look over our stock, and pick out your car; we will hold it until spring for you without charge; payment to be made either cash or terms at time of delivery. Price guaranteed. Remember there is no war tax or freight to pay.

Our immense buying power enables us to buy and sell for less.

Our perfectly equipped shops permit us to condition a car so that it not only runs perfectly but looks like new.

AND TUBES. You'll have plenty to run you the entire season if you will take your tire to Kingsley and have him half-sole it with a Gates half-sole, guaranteed punctureproof and to run 7,000 miles. Or perhaps a vulcanized job is all you need. Have the old tubes overhauled, and stay away from junk piles. If you are wanting a used tire, use your own. All it needs is a trip to our shop.
